TWO CHILDREN RUN OVER AND KILLED IN STREETS; TWO OTHERS HURT

WOLLASTON GIRL DEAD

Runaway Horse and Auto Cause Injuries in Charlestown and Hyde Park.

TWO children killed and two badly injured was the toll of vehicles in streets of Boston and vicinity yesterday. Four-year-old Robert McCallum of No. 184 Raymond street, North Cambridge, was run over by a heavy van and instantly killed. Pretty little Audrey Walker, three-and-a-half-years-old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon B. Walker of No. 184 Fayette street, Wollaston, was struck and killed by a tipcart drawn by a runaway horse.

Melvin Coffin, eight years old, is in the hospital with a fractured skull as a result of being run over by a runaway horse in Charlestown. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Coffin of No. 6 Holden row, Charlestown.

Seven-year-old Thomas Martin, son of Philip Martin of No. 623 Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, was struck by an auto near his home and his leg and head badly bruised and cut.

In every case the children were playing in the street.

Tried to Hop on Big Wagon.

Robert McCallum was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCallum. On Raymond street Robbie and other little boys saw a heavy van owned by the A. H. Hewes Pottery Company, and driven by Charles Simpson, come around from Crescent avenue. Between the front and rear wheels of the big wagon was a step for convenience in loading.

Simpson noticed the children, but did not see Robbie run alongside and leap for the step. His clubby hands touched the side of the wagon and slipped. He balanced with one foot on the step for a second and then fell. The huge wheel passed over him. "Mamma," screamed Robbie McCallum, and then he was dead.

Simpson pulled up his horse and leaped to the ground.

The playmates of Robbie stood beside him wondering why he did not get up. The driver gathered the little fellow in his arms and carried him to his mother at her home.

The ambulance gong clanged outside the door and in hustled a lung doctor.

"The child is dead," he said. "The wheel went over his stomach and broke his backbone."

The boy's father was at work on the Y. M. C. A. building in Boston.

"Your Robbie is badly hurt. My wife told me to be sure and tell you," said a neighbor who broke the news to him.

When McCallum got home he found his wife and little girl and the woman next door and Mrs. Simpson, wife of the driver of the truck, crying together.

"He was a bright little fellow," said Mr. McCallum.

Crushed by Tip Cart.

Flaxen-haired Audrey Walker, known in Wollaston as the prettiest child in town, was at play when a heavy tip cart passed over her neck. The spine was fractured and the skull crushed. She was playing in front of her home. At the Pneumatic Seale factory, not far from the Norfolk Downs station, heavy tip carts are used to cart away the dirt at the building of an addition to the factory. One of the carts was waiting in line to be filled. Something frightened the horse and turning, it dashed down the street.

Little Audrey looked up from her play and saw the big horse running down toward her. The big wheels with their heavy iron tires slowed to one side and the one on the farther side bore the little girl to the ground. The wheel had passed over her neck and head.

Knocked Down by Runaway.

Eight-year-old Melvin Coffin was knocked down on Main street by a runaway horse driven by Max Lutkowitsh of No. 474 Cambridge street, Cambridge. The boy's skull was fractured. He was rushed to the police station in a wagon driven by John D. Sydney of No. 433 Main street and then taken in an ambulance to the Relief Hospital.

Thomas Martin, seven years old, son of Philip Martin of Hyde Park, was struck by an auto driven by J. E. Harvey of No. 6 Marion Terrace, Milton. He received bruises and cuts on the head and leg and was taken to the Hyde Park Emergency Hospital.

John F., The First, King of England; Ben Gibbey's Dream

After Beating Lodge Mayor Will Visit Lipton and Then Dethrone Good K-ng George.

Senator Lodge, Mayor Fitzgerald, James H. Vahey and Chairman Hatfield and Macleod being out of the city yesterday, the usual Saturday business of telling to able secrets of the politics to the political reporters was attended to by Benjamin F. Gibbey, financier, political observer and ex-lobbyist.

Mr. Gibbey held forth at the corner of Beacon and Somerset streets.

"Looking at the situation as it is in August," he said, tilting back the Gibbey hat, kinking one Gibbey foot around the other, and supporting the City Club building with the Gibbey right hand—looking at the situation as it is in August, John F. Fitzgerald will be the Democratic candidate for Governor this Fall.

"Uh-huh! And he'll win the election. Yes. Dead easy. But he won't stop there. No, indeed. He will then run as the Democratic candidate for United States Senator. Don't look surprised, boys. He will run for Senator, and, what's more, he'll defeat Lodge. Yes. Dead easy.

"But that isn't all. Mr. Fitzgerald will then take a trip to England. Yes. He'll be entertained by Thomas Lipton. And the first thing you know, the British people will dethrone King George and put the crown on the head of John F. the First.

"That's the situation—as it is in August. As for the situation as it will be in October—well, Fitzy will be in City Hall, and darned glad that he's there; Vahey will be the Democratic candidate for Governor; and Lodge will be worrying about somebody else besides Fitzy."

HENS, TAKE NOTICE.

All Comers Challenged by 5-Toed Fowl From Harwich.

HARWICH, Aug. 20.—Arthur C. Nickerson claims that his five-toed hen is the champion hen sprinter. Anyone having a speedy hen is invited to come across with a proper challenge. Nickerson is a poultry fancier. Among his Rhode Island Reds is a pullet which has five toes on each foot. That doesn't hinder her movements. In fact, the five-toed pullet is very spry. In a race for a fat slug or a choice worm, she beats the other hens across the yard by several lengths. Maybe her extra toe gives her a better hold.

Hitherto the famous jumping frog which Bill Bailey of Calaveras County owned has been considered the classic athlete among animals.

But Arthur Nickerson's five-toed sprinting hen lids fair to grab the spot-light in the animal Hall of Fame.

PLAN BEEF INDICTMENTS.

Government Now to Proceed Against Individuals.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—It is expected that the Federal Grand Jury which has been investigating the methods of the so-called beef trust for more than a month, will attack what the Government considers the heart of the problem by returning indictments against individual officers of the big packing companies. Hitherto the long war of the Federal authorities has been directed against the corporations themselves. They have been enjoined from fixing prices by agreement. Recently the National Packing Company and its subsidiary concerns were indicted, but Judge Landis declared the indictment faulty. The present investigation followed. By the end of next week, it is believed that the inquisitorial body will report results.

ARMY AVIATOR KILLED.

ROME, Aug. 20.—Lieutenant Cavalier Vivaldi, one of Italy's most daring military aviators, was killed to-day after he had covered thirty-one miles in a flight from Civitavecchia to Rome. The fourteenth victim of the new science, he was killed in the worst accident of Italian military aviation.

Vivaldi was flying well, when, seven miles from Rome, the automobilists conveying saw the machine suddenly swerve, plunge and then drop straight more than 1,000 feet. Vivaldi was dead when picked up. He had been winging steadily up to that time and would in all probability have beaten a record had he reached Rome.

ST. LOUIS 687,029.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The Census Bureau to-day announced that the 1910 enumeration showed a population of 687,029 for St. Louis, Mo., which is an increase of 111,791, or 19.4 per cent. since 1900 when St. Louis had 575,238 inhabitants.

In 1900 Boston had 560,892 people, and not until the new census for Boston is announced will it be known positively whether St. Louis holds her place as the fourth American city.

VICE-PRESIDENT IS EXONERATED OF GORE CHARGE

Committee Officially Clears Names of Sherman and Crutis in Land Deals.

McGUIRE STILL UNDER BAN

Neither Committee Nor Oklahoma Senator Mentions Him in Statements.

SULPHUR, Okla., Aug. 20.—The Congressional Committee investigating the bribery charges brought by Senator Thomas P. Gore in connection with the proposed Indian lands contracts held by J. F. McMurray, to-day formally and officially exonerated Vice-President Sherman and Senator Curtis of Kansas of any connection with the contracts. Before the adjournment to-day Chairman Burke read the following statement:

The committee has heard and carefully considered all testimony brought before it, and is unanimous in the opinion that there is, and was no warrant for any person to authorize the names of Vice-President James S. Sherman and Senator Charles Curtis in connection with any improper relation with any Indian contracts whatever, and commends the statement of Senator Gore.

Cleared Also by Gore.

The reading of this followed the reading of a statement prepared by Senator Gore exonerating the two men and urging the committee to take formal action on the matter. Gore, in his statement, said he felt in honor and duty bound and "was impelled by considerations of justice to clear the names of Sherman and Curtis.

Gore did not make any reference to Congressman Bird McGuire of Oklahoma, so that the latter is still under the Senator's ban. The committee felt that it should confine its statement to the names of Sherman and Curtis, in view of Gore's stand.

The names of Sherman and Curtis were brought into the investigation on the first day of the hearing, when Gore testified that "Jake" Hamon offered him a bribe of $50,000 if he would withdraw his opposition to the approval of the McMurray contracts.

When Hamon was called to testify he denied that he had named the men to Gore.

HARVARD CHAMPION WEDS.

W. C. Bennett Takes Basket Ball Girl as Bride

A pretty wedding of two well-known young people took place in Newton last evening when Miss Lois Elmer Williams and Wallace Cherrington Bennett, Harvard, '08, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents at No. 14 St. James street, Newton, the Rev. H. Percy Bush of the Universalist Church of Chelsea, tying the knot. Mrs. Bennett, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Williams, is well known as a swimmer, and for the past three years has been swimming and basket ball instructor at the Lasell Seminary in Auburndale and at Boston University. The groom was captain of the Howard Gym team in 1905 and intercollegiate club swinging champion in 1907. The wedding is the culmination of a romance which began when the two were schoolmates at the Quincy High School, of which both are graduates.

MAYOR SLICED BREAD.

Coughlin of Fall River Takes Orders From Jack Tar.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—During the festivities to the naval jackies here the bread ran short at one of the clambakes. A member of the clambake committee, seeing a man with a badge standing round unoccupied, said hastily:

"Here, you seem to be doing nothing. I'll give you a job. Cut bread. Here's the bread and the knife. Get on to your job."

Thereupon the other fell to industriously. He was slicing busily when Acting Mayor Shepley came along and said:

"What on earth are you doing?"

"Why, I'm cuttin' my job, slicing bread," replied the other, "that's what I was told to do. I always obey orders."

The man "obeying orders" was Mayor Coughlin of Fall River, one of the invited guests at the clambake.

BALL PLAYER KILLED.

SANDUSKY, O., Aug. 20.—While playing baseball at Rye Beach near here today Warna Winkle, 19 years old, of Columbus was struck over the heart with a pitched ball and died shortly afterwards.

WALLACE, IDAHO CITY, SWEPT BY FIRE, PEOPLE FLEE

IN COEUR D'ALENE REGION

Owing to Lack of Communication No Details as to Loss of Life Are Available.

BUTTE, Aug. 20.—Information reached here this evening that Wallace, Idaho, a city of 5,000, had been swept by fire and before the telegraph operators quit their keys and ran for their lives, they declared that the city was doomed.

Nothing was said about any loss of life, but it is feared that the ferocity of the blaze, which caught from a forest fire, would not allow of the escape of the entire population.

The news came to Butte in the way of reports from the telegraph operators to the managers of the company. Forest fires, the dispatches said, had been raging for some time in the vicinity of Wallace, and the whole city had been on the alert to fight the fire, as it had menaced the city all day.

Hundreds of people had begun to pack their goods and start to places of supposed safety before the flames had reached the outer edge of the city.

Fight for Their Lives.

The wind was blowing a stiff breeze and this afternoon blazing fagots from the forest were carried to the roofs of the city, and soon the firemen were fighting the blaze with the heroism of men who realized that they were battling for their homes, if not for their wives and children.

The operators said that the blaze swept over the city in great waves of flame. In many instances the firemen were barely able to get out of the way of the tongues of fire that leaped out and gathered the inflammable city in. Smoke after house.

"The fire is headed this way," read one of the messages, "and it looks as though the building we are in is doomed."

Still the men remained at their keys, only leaving long enough to go to windows and get a look at the great glare that lit up the city at times.

The wires were working at 7 o'clock and it was declared there was no hope at that time of saving the city. At 7:30 this message was received:

"Wallace Is Doomed."

"Wallace is doomed. Fire has reached ——."

That was all. The wires went down. It is supposed that the operators fled. It was impossible to get into communication with the city after that.

It is feared that there may be a great loss of life and that even if the people escape death many of them have been injured in their efforts to fight the flames and save their property.

Wallace is situated in a narrow valley in the heart of a densely forested region. To escape from the town the inhabitants would be compelled to flee down a single road track which is walled in on both sides by steep ridges. Should the fire jump across the canyon the people would have little chance of escape from the valley. The wind blows almost continually down the canyon.

It is believed that the forest fire which was burning at Borax, a few miles east of Wallace, spread westward and reached the town.

SOUTH DAKOTA ASHORE.

Cruiser Runs Amuck at Mare Island; Smashes Tugboat.

VALLEJO, CAL., Aug. 20.—The armored cruiser South Dakota "ran amuck" at the Mare Island Navy Yard to-day, smashed the tug Cundiffe and went aground near the receiving ship Independence. Navy yard tugs tried unsuccessfully to refloat the warship. It is probable a court-martial will follow the accident. The South Dakota broke from her moorings and drifted in near the traveling crane and smashed the pilings. Then the runaway cruiser ran down the Cundiffe, staving three holes in the tug. The Cundiffe is still afloat.

BABIES IN BALLOON TRIP.

GENEVA, Aug. 20.—The two and five-year-old sons of M. and Mme. Harf, of Kelif, probably hold the record for being the youngest aeronauts in the world. With their parents they made an ascent to-day in the dirigible balloon that has been a feature of amusement of the summer colony at Lucerne. The children were not the least afraid by their visit to the clouds.

HARMON IN AEROPLANE MAKES GREAT FLIGHT OVER SOUND AT NIGHT

CLIFFORD B. HARMON

GREENWICH, Ct., Aug. 20.—Clifford B. Harmon the young millionaire aviator, landed safely here at 7:05 to-night in his Farman biplane, after a thirty-minute night flight across Long Island Sound and up the Connecticut shore, a total distance of twenty-eight miles. The last ten miles of the flight he traveled at the rate of a mile a minute.

This was the first flight across the Sound in a heavier-than-air machine. Harmon started from the aviation grounds at Garden City, flew over Mineola, Roslyn, thence over Long Island Sound to Larchmont, where he turned northeast and continued upshore to Indian Harbor in this town.

He made the flight for various reasons. One is the $2,000 Tiffany cup offered by Doubleday, Page & Company for the first airship flight from Mineola across the Sound to any point beyond or east of the Mamaroneck river.

"Dropped In" for Dinner.

Another reason was a promise to a group of Englishmen at the Larchmont Club last night that he would fly across the Sound and within sight of the Larchmont Club, so the Englishmen could see him in mid-air.

A third reason was his promise to his father-in-law, Commodore E. C. Benedict, that some evening he would "drop in" with his airship for dinner at the Benedict Summer home at Indian Harbor.

The machine on the field was damaged by the hasty landing, but Harmon was unhurt.

His wife, who had witnessed his landing from her father's porch at Indian Harbor, hurried in her automobile to the scene by a roundabout road a mile in length, and was the only one to greet him. He then was whisked away to Indian Harbor and a half hour later was ready for dinner, receiving the congratulations of guests, and especially of Commodore Benedict, who showed that he admired the deed and the one who did it.

Harmon's Story of the Flight

Harmon described his trip in his modest way; thus:

"I left the aviation field at Garden City at 6:35 this evening taking Hamilton up with me for a half dozen flights around the field to enable him to take some photographes. The engine was working so beautifully that I decided to go on across the Sound, leaving Hamilton at Garden City. The wind was aft of me and blowing about fifteen miles an hour, increasing during the flight to 22 miles.

"In the flight of six miles to Roslyn, I traveled over bad country, and when I reached the water I felt as if some one

LOST! WATERTOWN FIRE DEPARTMENT

There was a fire in Watertown last night, but the Belmont fire department had to cross the line and put it out. The reason was that the Watertown fire department got lost. When they finally reached the scene of the fire it was all out and the Belmont engines were back in Belmont.

The Watertown firemen kept inside their engine houses after they returned because the whole town was laughing at the accident and a fireman doesn't like to be gayed.

But if Chief Orin Hatch could lay his hands on the fresh guy who telephoned phony directions to the fire department he would give him fits.

The alarm came in from box 41 which is at Mt. Auburn street and Granville Road, out Waverly way. Watertown is very proud of its six pieces of fire apparatus and everybody turned out to see the department respond. But just as the chief was about to slide down the pole, the telephone bell rang and somebody said:

"I rang in the wrong box for that fire. You go this way and down that way and through the fourth street on the right and you will get there quicker."

Clang, clang, clang. Away sped the department. At Orchard street, however, two pieces of apparatus turned up Orchard street and two continued on Orchard street. They sped onward proudly until the houses began to thin out. Grass appeared. But nowhere was there a fire to be seen.

Finally when only a single farm house adorned the landscape away over in Waverly the steamer stopped and the supply wagon behind it. The captain of the combined crowds up to the Creighouse and rang the bell.

An old lady came to the door.

"Excuse me madam, do you know where there is a fire around here?" asked the fire kiddie bowing politely.

"I do not," replied the lady. "And you can just take your old engines away from here. If this house got fire I would put it out with the garden hose."

The firemen turned and the engines took up their search. Finally they met a man who said:

"Why there was a fire in Harold Jenks' house at Trapelo Heights, but they had to send for the Belmont fire department because you people didn't show up."

After a long time the fire department reached Jenks' home and found a hole in the roof where Jenks was out with a package of shingles preparing to repair the damage done by the fire.

So the Watertown fire department returned home.

G. O. P. BOSSES FIGHT HARD TO CLOSE GAP IN PARTY

Congressman Longworth, Collector of Port Loeb and Chairman Griscom Called to Oyster Bay; Will See Taft This Week

Greatest "Pacifiers" of the Party Have Been Drafted to Make Peace; Senator Crane at Work to Secure Harmony

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Strenuous efforts began to-day in various parts of the country to bridge the abyss that yawns in the Republican party and threatens to wreck it in this State, if not in the next national election.

The greatest pacifiers of the party have been called into action. Senator W. Murray Crane, one of the smoothest and oiliest in the Taft retinue of friends, has been at work for some time seeing what he could do.

Congressman Longworth, County Chairman Griscom and Collector of the Port Loeb were called in to-day as experts. This trio has been at Oyster Bay and looked over the situation there. They are going to Beverly some time next week.

Secretary Norton, according to a dispatch from Beverly to-night, admitteed that Mr. Griscom and others are expected there next week, but he could not say just what day they would come.

At Oyster Bay it was declared emphatically that Griscom, Longworth and Loeb do not go to see President Taft as emissaries of Colonel Roosevelt.

No Ultimatum to Taft.

Colonel Roosevelt said to-day that he had sent no emissaries to Beverly. Then he added.

"I have sent no ultimatum to President Taft. The report is a tissue of falsehoods from beginning to end and has no warrant in fact."

This may all be, but it is certainly a fact that Loeb, Griscom and a lot of Republicans are greatly alarmed at the split of the party and the necessity of getting together before the breach is so wide that it cannot be bridged.

The leaders of this fear that there will be a lining up of the party on two sides before long that will start a deadly internecine strife. As a result of this there is to be a peace-making visit from many quarters to Beverly next week.

One of the suggestions that was made to-day was that Vice-President Sherman might make a move blandly to relieve the situation from the severe tension by deciding that he could not very well preside as temporary chairman of the Republican State Convention next month. It is pointed out that Mr. Sherman could declare that he was ignorant of the true situation when he allowed his name to be used at the meeting of the Republican State Committee that turned down Colonel Roosevelt and elected him.

Denial By Hammond.

John Hays Hammond, a close friend of President Taft, from the Pacific Slope golf links, where the President loves to dally, and regarded as the President's ambassador, in addressing the Republican clubs of Ohio at Cleveland to-day, dispatches from there say, declare emphatically that there was nothing in the story that President Taft had mixed in the New York State Committee fight, in referring to the reported breach between the President and Colonel Roosevelt, Mr. Hammond said:

"It is absurd and wholly preposterous."

Mr. Hammond then took a shy at the insurgents of the party, which he divided them into four groups: The calmally hopeless, the high brows, the uncrius rectitudists and the progressive Republicans. The last group and the regular Republicans are so much alike, he said, that for all practical purposes they are the same.

A dispatch from Cleveland tells of the attack upon Vice-President Sherman at the Saturday afternoon luncheon of the Republican League Club by former Assemblyman Hart, who after a visit to Oyster Bay declared that the scheme to make Vice-President Sherman temporary chairman of the Republican State Convention was "knocked up." In the course of his speech, Mr. Hart said:

Hart Accuses Sherman.

"I assert that Mr. Sherman knew full well that it was Mr. Taft's wish that no move be made toward choosing a temporary chairman without the fullest consultation with Mr. Roosevelt. A telegram from Mr. Taft to Mr. Sherman to this effect that notwithstanding Mr. Roosevelt had shown a willingness to act as the temporary chairman, and in the face of Mr. Taft's telegram, he personally softened votes for himself as temporary chairman on Monday night in New York City.

"Mr. Sherman, by sending blow to this new of political politics, and I, by rising upon the appointment as temporary chairman, if he can hold it, has added himself again with the Woodruff-Barnes element and has furnished the disunion of the party in this State.

"Usually national politics contemplate in Washington. But this summer, at times when politics is usually dormant, and every where, the battle extends from Governor to Dog catcher. Taft is personally taking to oyster Bay, other political men in New York State are to hold Aldrich up, and a great slice of the Trans-Mississippi region.

Cannon "Cimes Back"

The insurgents will accept a compromise. It appears that they are after the standpatters without gore and Speaker Cannon appears to have one particular goodie they seek for more. Senator Aldrich may have seeds handwriting on the wall when on his way going to quit. But there is talk of quitting on the part of Cheker.

This sturry od fighter comeback at Congressman Nicholas Longworth over every other fire with a cereal of like importance relates to the fact that Cheker will win a lot of sobers to his side for the American people do revere a thoroughly indomitable spirit.

What Senator Crane of Massachusetts and President Taft will say upon their return from the West on a fact-finding tour made for the purpose of learning what would be as interesting to ipeople of the United States as a next issue of the tariff. Many rumors are current as to the nature of the report. Senator Crane, Senator and the President haven't much in fact as enlightening as they have seemed. There are many editing statements.

"CALAMITY HOWLS," SAYS HAYS HMOND OF THE INGENTS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 20.—"Calamity howlers," "unintelligent tote-tumtis," "unctious rectitudist," some of the terms applied to the leaders of the Republican party by Judays Hammond in a speech at theole of the Ohio Republican club at the annual banquet park this afternoon.

Hammond, who as one of the National League of Republi clubs, went to the last Republican national convention with view-presidential situations, has since been one of the monotinct personal or political associated Presidi ent Taft, both in Washington and Beverly.

To newspaper men, just-fore his address, Hammond admitted that he had come directly from the golnks at Beverly, and took occasion to say emphatically that President Taft had no say hand in the New York State political situation.

The report that any situation on the part of the President favorable to the present branch betten Taft and Roosevelt is characterized as absurd and wholly preposterous.

In his address, Hammond said:

Analyzes the Insents.

"Let me analyze insomer by differentiating the varieties obsergents. We may divide the insurgents in four classes, as follows:

"First—the calamity seiers. These are Simon pure Socialists of demogracies. They have no standing in the Republican party, but unaggreeable are the respectable name Republican.

"The second class maybe termed the unintelligently intellectual. Many of this class are sometimes discreetfully misled by us 'high brows.' They are mere theorists and are not practical in the affairs of government. Their views, unexpressed, for solid ing are been listed of it.

"I ask Mr. Sherman if it is not true life. The responsibility of these men will fortunately deter them from voting the Democratic ticket.

"The third class may be styled onetimes Republicans. They are characterized by self-righteousness and loose thinks. Independence upon the belief that all other men are moral delinquents. They do not understand, and, also reckoning to impugn motives of others, and regard as honest and pureous, if necessary to strengthen their arguments.

Progressive Republicans.

"The fourth and last class of insurgents may be referred to as progressive Republicans, as the difference between them and the old guard is one of degree only. They are Republicans. I have genuine sympathy for this class in many of their convictions. Time only are showing the way of ruining the standard of political morals of the century.

"It would be doing violence to their very natures to desert the Grand Old Party in time of peril. They know Republican friends of sorts are welcome in the Republican fold. They do not wish to be put out about that fine outside the Republican reservation. They are now and will remain within the Republican party.

SENATOR DOLLIVER LOOKS UP ALDRICH'S RUBBER CONNECTION

CINCINNATI, Aug. 20.—United States Senator Dolliver of Iowa spent today in Cincinnati making inquiries among the big rubber men of this city to determine if Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island is truthful in his assertions as to his connection with the Rubber Trust. He visited several of the principal wholesale dealers, but would give nothing to the press concerning what he had found, except that he is investigating the truth of the Senator's statement. He says that in the West the "insurgents" are looking to the Senator's record. The public tells Fall, that Americans are tired of the domination of big money, dollars and the trusts and are determined to obtain them in the voting.

ANGEL OF CRIMEA' BURIED.

Notable Gathering Pays Tribute to Florence Nightingale.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—England today paid the last tribute to Florence Nightingale, "The Angel of the Crimea," whose dying directions found in her will, the funeral was held quietly at West Willow, Hampshire, but for London the day was what was the memorial service arranged by the War Office in St. Paul's Cathedral, at which there was present a personal representative of King George.

HARMON FLIES OVER LONG ISLAND SOUND

Air Trip From Garden City, L. I., to Greenwich, Ct., Made in the Evening.

"I had a dicher given to the Englishmen at the Larchmont Yacht Club last evening. I had promised to fly to the club house if I came across the Sound, and I offered a cup to the first ones who should reach me, either on shore or on water, and the cup's fastest boats were to be in readiness.

"Had the Breeze With Me."

"Once on the water I felt safe although my plane went up and down like a boat, owing to the rose winds. I was able to keep it going in a straight line, my altitude varying from 100 to 1,000 feet. It was a struggle to keep right side up across Long Hampstead Bay, but I reached the Larchmont Club at 6:30 and turned over a cup to the latter than at the international meet. I guess I was too fast for them to even think of starting a motor boat after me.

"Winding up the sound from Larchmont I had the breeze with me and I went the two miles in ten minutes, sixty miles per hour. It was about 7 o'clock when I reached Island just in front of my father-in-law's estate, and as I went on a few hundred feet to Sandy Beach, just across the street, and came down in some tall grass. Sandy Beach is my summer home, and I landed on my feet all right, and have not even a scratch to show for my journey.

Used a Farman Biplane.

The machine in which Mr. Harmon made his trip is a Farman biplane with a Gnome motor, the same in which Beaumont did his remarkable work. While it had been announced at various times during the past few weeks that Mr. Harmon would fly across Long Island Sound to Greenwich, weather conditions and engine trouble had prevented his flight.

Only a few people saw him arrive here. Commodore Benedict was out in his yacht beside when Harmon flew over his head. Mrs. Harmon saw him arrive, as she knew he was due, and cried and also listened to greet him. Guests at the Head House a half mile away, heard the whirring of the motor as Harmon left the machine while they were eating dinner.

AERONAUTS MAKE A CROSSCOUNTRY FLIGHT FOR A DRINK

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 20.—The first passenger-carrying cross-country aeroplane flight ever made in America for the purpose of getting a drink was witnessed here this afternoon, when Walter Brookins and Frank Coffyn of the Wright Brothers team flew to the local Golf club, covering miles away, landed in front of the clubhouse, refreshed themselves and then flew back to the starting field. The reason: Asbury Park is a dry town.

Ralph Johnstone made the longest flight of the meeting, remaining in the air forty-five minutes in an effort to break the Mineola record. His engine was working poorly, however, and the highest he could get was 2,950 feet.

There were a number of flights made during the afternoon, Walter Brookins in the Wright machine, with Mrs. Harriman, who had both its elevating and directing rudders eaten away, making the flying difficult and more serious to show his wonderful control of the machine. Other aviators who have used the machine declare it is the fastest in the world, and Coffyn made the machine fly at 60 miles an hour. It was in this machine that Brookins and Coffyn made their cross-country flight to the more beautiful climate of the country Club. The crowd which witnessed today's flying was estimated at 12,000.

CONVERTS TO SUFFRAGE.

Margaret Bondfield Makes Headway Among Lawrence Women.

LAWRENCE, Aug. 20.—Votes-for-women and trade unionism seem to have been so closely allied in the speeches delivered by Miss Margaret Bondfield, the noted English suffragette during her recent visit to this city, that three new trade unions of textile workers have been added to the many in Lawrence within the last four days. The international officers of the motor themselves say Miss Bondfield's speeches, coupled with those of Mrs. Elizabeth Gledstone Evans of the Rock Bay district in Boston, brought this about.

OFFICERS OF FLEET RETURN NEWPORT'S HOSPITALITY

End of a Week of Festivities in Which Sailors were Entertained.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—The officers of the North Atlantic squadron, on behalf of themselves and the fleet, gave a reception today to the battleship connecticut to the people of Newport, the cottage colony and the resident Army and Navy contingent. This reception was in return for the manifold hospitality which has been rendered to the fleet during Newport week.

The reception was the farewell of Rear Admiral Seth Sebreder. The Rear Admiral, his staff and ship officers, with the officers from the other vessels received the guests with marked attention. The members of the exclusive society set attended, and the reception was of social importance in every way.

Tonight all the vessels in the squadron were brilliantly illuminated from 7 to 8 o'clock. Newport was such a night spectacle as was before in navy-gazing. All four were battleships carry special electrical outfits for such illuminations. The effect when every vessel was outlined in flash lights was simply superb. The city watched from the shore with delight.

Secretary Meyer's Tour

This morning George von L. Meyer, secretary of the Navy, inspected the Naval Torpedo Station and the Naval Training Station. This afternoon he inspected the battleship Louisiana. Tomorrow Secretary Meyer will return to his Summer home in Hamilton.

Tomorrow every vessel in the fleet will fly the Secretary's pennant. The guard of honor may be attended by the public. Many in the city are planning to go aboard.

All day the streets were crowded with sailor sightseers. Thousands of men were in line and passing. The Newport shops were rounded up the week with a lucrative business. The jackies were unable to carry away especially in Newport, to which they have among the biggest pay-days they ever heard of and which will linger long in their memory.

Fleet Departs Tomorrow

Many society guests arrived here today for week-end visits with friends. Theatres had a fashionable travel, made in streets animated.

Monday the fleet departs for the Southern drill ground, off the Virginia Capes, where target practice will start. During this time will be only one day at the departure of the fleet. The city will be left for a bit of quiet, for a time.

Former Mayors Garretson and Cottle and Mayor Sherman Stevens will escort "Danny" McGowan. Ernest Voigt in charge of the entertainment committee is being given great credit for the next manner in which they handled their strenuous duties in navy week.

FLEE GAS EXPLOSION.

Providence Residents Scared by Escaping Ammonia Fumes.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 20.—Ammonia gas fumes from three tons of liquid ammonia escaped from the large storage tanks of the Regosled Ice Company on Promenade street tonight and settled like a noxious blanket over a square mile of the city. In the affected district people had to get out quickly to escape being suffocated.

Superintendent N. H. Chener, of the ice company, and eleven workmen were repairing the outside valve of the tanks at 10 o'clock. The inside valve blew out. A volume of ammonia gas escaped so quickly that the men barely had time to scramble into the open air. The general alarm was given through the neighborhood. Residents were hastily turned out from Thomas W. Waterman's stable, but in time to save them from suffocation. The spreading of the gas through the streets caused terror. Exaggerated reports were circulated and a general rush from the district followed. Finally the fumes were dissipated in the open air and quiet was restored.

4,000 AT LAWN PARTY.

St. Monican Parish Holding a Field Day at Locust Street Grounds.

The third annual lawn party and field day of St. Monica's parish of South Boston was held yesterday afternoon and last evening on the Locust street grounds. Boxes, toggan and music was attended by about 4,000. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. T. J. Mahoney, the officers were assisted by Rev. Edward F. Murphy and Rev. William J. Foley.

The feature baseball game between the Centrals and Haskins was won by the Centrals, 6 to 5. There were two prizes for baseball game between the Bay Views and Centrals, the former winning by the score of 7 to 5. The champions of Cambridge, the South End Field Club, defeated the Gaelic football game the Kerry team of Dorchester by the score of 2 goals and 9 points to 1 goal and 3 points.

MRS. FRANK JONES ILL.

Aged Widow of Brewer Brought to Newton Hospital.

Mrs. Frank Jones, widow of Frank Jones, the Portsmouth millionaire brewer, is ill in the Newton Hospital, it became known last night. Mrs. Jones, who is nearly seventy years old, was quietly brought to Boston from the hotel Wentworth at Newcastle by a train last Friday, and taken directly to the hospital. She is attended by Dr. Henry Waters of New Castle and a couple of specialists. It was said last night at the Newton officials' desk that Mrs. Jones was resting very comfortably and had passed the day with but slight pain.

Mrs. Jones is worth $7,000,000. She inherited the bulk of the $10,000,000 estate left by her husband.

WAR ON OIL TRUST.

5,000 Producers Plan to Tie up Production.

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 20—A gigantic struggle between the 5,000 oil producers in the Pennsylvania fields, representing a daily production of 30,000 barrels of high grade crude oil, and the Standard Oil Company was consolidated, when producers from Washington, Allegheny, Butler, Clarion, Venango, Armstrong, Warren, Bradford and McKean counties launched the High Grade Oil Refinery Company as a result of the movement which has for its slogan "Producers, refine your own oil!"

TURKS HAVE THE CRAZE.

Moving Picture Shows Attended by Big Crowds Daily.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Moving pictures may be classed as luxuries so far as the Turks are concerned, for these are have the moving picture craze in Turkey are charged two piastres, or 8.8 cents a piece, at the door, according to Consul Horton, United States Consul at Salonika. There are four moving picture shows in operation in that city, says Mr. Horton, and the craze has attained such proportions that upwards of 5,000 persons nightly attend them.

'FIGHTNING NINTH' TO GET INTO WAR GAME TO-DAY

THE "Fighting Ninth" got away from town in great style last night for its week tour of camp duty at Pine Camp, N. Y., where it will have to face the discipline of camp life and the uncertain prospect of the new hardtack with which the army is experimenting.

The "Fighting Ninth," as every Boston boy knows, is the Ninth infantry, M. V. M., which is under the command of Colonel John J. Sullivan.

The Boston companies in the regiment, A, B, C, D, E, H and I, paraded from the East Newton street armory to the South station, where they entrained for Pine Camp, leaving from the armory at 7:45, they were escorted by Company F, Captain Hart, of the regimental band. With the musicians and the old drumming quantity, the "Ninth" marched through Shawmut avenue, Boylston, Washington and Summer streets to Dewey square. There was applause and admiration for their soldierly appearance.

Heavy Marching Order.

The men were in full marching order. They were armed with rifles, ammunition belts, the new yellow marching leggings and web belt.

Before swinging onto the train Colonel Sullivan said:

"I'm well pleased with the appearance the Ninth makes. Boston company has nearly its full quota. We will put through a couple of manoeuvres which will teach it for a real war game. We get back next Sunday night."

The men themselves look forward to a lively time in camp. There were many other about that new hard-tac kwhich they are to receive as their midday meal.

At White Plains the Ninth will be with other regiments from New England. The men of the Ninth are bent on making a good showing for themselves before the rival companies and before the regular army officers and men, who will take part in the maneuvers.

Fifteen wagons loaded with tents and supplies were sent away early in the day to join with the officers' horses.

The last to leave were the men, which left the South Station at 8 o'clock, went to the regiments from the North station were the band, non-commissioned officers, hospital corps, signal corps and the field hospital companies. The rest of the regiment, including the Ninth and Worcester pioneers, occupied the second section.

Baseball game between the Senators and the Father Matthews society, both of Lynn, was won by the former team by 9 to 0.

One of the features of the afternoon was the baseball game between the Blue Meadow Park and Revere ladies' baseball teams. The players of the winning team received a set of spoons.

ASTOR QUITS NEWPORT.

Displeased at Divorced Wife's Return to Resort.

NEWPORT, Aug. 20.—Newport saw what it had looked forward to as the event of the most brilliant functions of the season—the opening of "Beechwood," Colonel Astor's palatial summer home—this evening, when the Colonel, accompanied by Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Howard Peters, Colonel's old-time schoolmate of New York, left this afternoon for Bar Harbor, Me., where the Astors will probably spend the rest of their Summer. Society here had looked forward to his return with great pleasure, and it is said that it was a source of disappointment to them when he learned that his divorced wife had come to Newport.

The departure of her father came also as a surprise to Miss Madeleine Astor, who had worked so very hard to perfect the arrangements for her parents' outing so far as to write to her father, Colonel Astor, in Europe, asking him to talking about the eminent endeavors of the little miss. "Friendless that there is one woman, who has been dubbed "The Woman of Newport," who has come to her efforts in this direction and not the rule of matrimony between the pair.

SURE YANKEES WILL SPEAK ESPERANTO

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—"Gis La Revido" ("Until we meet again").

This was the farewell given today to the American capital by the foreign delegates to the sixth international congress of the world's associations of Esperantists.

Tonight there were only a few remaining in the city, including Dr. Ludwig L. Zamenhof, the founder of the international language. As a farewell courtesy, Dr. Zamenhof today gave an interview by means of an interpreter.

"I am well pleased with your country —oh, very well pleased. I see a great future for Esperanto here." It was translated. "But Americans, as they are progressive and industrious, are a very prudent people. They do not jump into anything until they are certain that it is meritorious.

"This is the first time that your people have had a real opportunity to try our Esperanto as an international language. Now that you have seen that it is practical, that your people are satisfied, your industry will cause Esperanto to progress more rapidly than in the other lands, so that in a short time I expect Esperanto to be on equal footing in America with its standing in other countries.

"Your commerce also will move the great freedom for the spread of Esperanto in America and your international commercialism will carry Esperanto into the remote parts, particularly in the Orient, where English is little spoken".

BASEBALL POOLS STOPPED.

They Had Business in Pittsfield Almost at a Standstill.

PITTSFIELD, Aug. 20.—Chief William G. White of the local police force has issued an edict to the effect that the baseball pools amounting to thousands of dollars, which have had practically all of the baseball population in their grasp, during the Summer, must be abolished. Hereafter all offenders will be brought into court. There have been weekly pools in the Eagle, Journal and Pike paper mills which employ 1,000 persons, at the Stanley Electric shops which employ over 1,200 men, and in all of the mills and department stores throughout the city, and the craze finally became so pronounced, that the clergymen began to protest and the proprietors of the department stores who declared that their employes spent more time talking baseball than in selling their wares.

To back up the edict of Chief White, the big mills have issued orders that the pools be stopped.

WANTS "BILLIE," A CANARY

Woman Thinks Her Pet Wandered Into Police Quarters.

The canary bird that flew into police headquarters in Pemberton square, Friday night, in response to the lure of a cage of seed, may be "Billie," the pet of Miss Daisy Downing, No. 62 Weston street, Roxbury. Miss Downing reported the loss of a canary at police headquarters yesterday, and Miss Downing's description of the bird with "Billie" knows, and when he hears it, whistles the same tune. Jewell Downing also Miss Downing missed "Billie," and now she is sure that it was the "Billie" who flew into headquarters, and who was soon claimed by Patrolman Colby. She will try and identify "Billie" to-morrow.

AUNT DELIA'S PIES WERE FINE FEAST FOR PRESIDENT

By DOROTHY AMES.

WHEN the news went forth that Aunt Delia (of course there's only one Aunt Delia) was going to spend a week with Will (that's what the President of these United States is to her, everybody thought he'd rather prefer to be in the President's shoes than not.

"Apple pie!" said the business man. "Aunt Delia will be sure to make a pie for the President."

"Apple pie!" gloated the small boy. "Of course Aunt Delia will make a pie for Charley Taft. Oh, how I'd like to be that Taft kind!"

And sure enough, Aunt Delia did make that apple pie. That apple pie was a sure success. The President "mm-umed" and reckoned he wouldn't mind having a portion more. Charlie made round eyes and allowed it was most awfully good pie. Even the Taft cook admitted that the apple pie couldn't be beat. And Aunt Delia, you can just wager that if it wasn't the best apple pie she ever made, it wasn't because she didn't try most awfully hard.

Baking Thos. Apple Pies.

That was last Tuesday morning. Aunt Delia descended to the model little kitchen in the Presidential Summer mansion and fixed the apples and made the pastry and superintended those pies till they came steaming and bubbling out of the oven, flaky golden brown ones, if I'm not mistaken, better yet, American President.

Charley didn't get home to luncheon that noon, so that intrepid small boy didn't eat one bit. But he said he "m could for dinner that same night, and according to all reports relished ten just as much as the senior portion of the family had done at luncheon. Just how many of "em" there were for Charley is not stated, public "folks" weren't home for dinner that night. Since they dined out, Charley had no scruples about devouring up that last morsel of pie and one more that had called Delia's famous pastries became a thing of the past.

Miss Torrey, as the rest of us folks must call her, has had a most delightful visit with her big nephew. From the moment she arrived at Burgess Point she was absolutely delighted with the place and the surroundings. Her first exclamation was "My! Will! What a beautiful place you have here!"

Admires the Grounds.

She immediately went all about the grounds and admired the wonderful view greatly. What pleased her most was the sea practically surrounds the house.

A thing of especial interest to Aunt Delia was the Italian fountain which Robert D. Evans, the President's landlord, imported from Rome just before his death and which Mrs. Evans had just had set up between the Taft house and her own. The grounds have been wonderfully improved this Summer and have proved a source of great delight to the dear old lady.

Aunt Delia had no sooner arrived than Charley extended a most delightful and enthusiastic invitation for her to accompany him on a trip on the "Bandit," that small boat which will go down in history as a source of unending despair to the biggest and jolliest President the country ever had. Aunt Delia rather thought she'd like to take a trip, but Nephew Will rather thought her safety too precious a risk in the hands of Charley and his redoubtable Bandit.

Aunt Delia is to take a trip in the Stylish, however, and will view the sonder class races at Marblehead with the President and his family.

Arose Early Each Day.

Miss Torrey, who is wonderfully active in spite of her years, arose very early every morning, even before the Presidential himself. One morning during the week Aunt Delia was the interested spectator while her nephew went through his daily exercise under the direction of his physical instructor. She watched with great interest the various stunts with the dumbbell and Indian clubs which the President most daily performs in the interest of his health, and applauded his strength and dexterity.

Miss Torrey is always very much interested in athletic stunts, and took great delight in watching Mrs. Taft and Helen Taft in bathing.

After luncheon, which Aunt Delia took with Mrs. Taft, as the President often lunches at the executive office with Secretary Norton, the motor cars summoned and she had a delightful spin over the fine Beverly roads. She put in strenuous days for a woman of her years, as almost every morning saw her walking in town with Mrs. Taft to do a bit of shopping or for the exercise.

Dinner About 7 O'Clock.

Dinner at the Summer capital is served at 7 or 7:30 and as the President has few after-dinner engagements of late the evening is usually a delightful family affair, with Helen home from playing tennis, Charley just returned from the golf links and the President himself throwing off all cares of state to enjoy himself with his family. The broad veranda makes a delightful gathering place or the members of the family take little strolls about the grounds. Occasionally there is a game of whist in the dinner, or the family goes out for drive to one of the neighboring homes.

Altogether it is a lovely quaint life—decidedly a family life that the President leads at Beverly—a life into which Aunt Delia fitted like a glove.

How Prettiest Baby in America Is Brought Up

Prettiest Baby in America and her mother.

MRS WILLIS GOWEN

MRS MILLICENT GOWEN

Everett Mother Tells How Her Child's Remarkable Beauty Has Developed.

MILLICENT GOWEN, the Everett child, honored by artists, sculptors and photographers with the title of "prettiest child in America," is being deluged with congratulations, letters offering positions before the public and requests for footing appointments.

Her mother, Mrs. Willie Gowen, is also being besieged with letters asking for all sorts of information.

How did you ever manage to bring your child up so physically perfect? asks one mother.

What do you do to make your child so beautiful? inquires another.

What can I do to make my child as lovely and graceful as yours? What sort of physical training has this wonderful child taken? These are some of the questions pouring in upon the mother of the prettiest child.

Free of All Fads.

To them all Mrs. Gowen gives back the astounding information that she and her husband have never done anything for the child except taken good care of it. She has never taken any sort of physical culture. She has never been brought up according to this diet or that cult or any other fad.

In a word, the prettiest child in America is simply a normal healthy child, absolutely unspoiled by all the praise and attentions heaped upon her. She is refreshingly unaffected and plays and romps all day long, with never a thought of a poor by of her beautiful face or physical perfection.

"Millicent is very much like Topsy," declared Mrs. Gowen in the Sunday American. "She just 'growed.'

"We have never paid any attention to the child in regard to beauty of feature or perfectness of form. We simply have taken good care of her. She has always had plenty of fresh air and has always been very much out-of-doors. Parent-like, of course, we thought she was a beauty the was the first child and being a girl came in for more or less attention. We supposed that our enthusiasm about her was prompted by a perfectly natural love and pride that all parents feel, but of a sudden, everybody was raving about the child and wanted her to paint her likeness.

Beauty Discovered.

"Just for the fun of it, I once had her picture taken while she was playing that she was cooking. There happened to be a can of baking powder in the picture. The next heard of it. It was a very telling picture and they used it for an advertisement. The first time I ever took her to be photographed, the photographer wanted to make her in all sorts of poses and since then she has had hundreds upon hundreds of different poses made.

"I do not believe in fads or any of the many new fangled ways of bringing up children. For that reason, Millicent has just been brought up as any child would be. She has never had any sort of physical culture and has simply taken the exercise that any normal child would take while playing out-of-doors.

"I read recently how the little Devereux Baroos is taught to think she is beautiful because she is taught to think she is beautiful—that she will always be beautiful and that much of her beauty is due to gazing upon beautiful pictures, beautiful scenes and beautiful statuary.

"We have never done anything of that sort in Millicent's case. We were very anxious that the child's disposition should remain contented and so have said nothing or nothing to her about her own beauty. As you can see she is just as unconscious, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, Baron Rudolf von Boddenstein, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Waterbury, Robert Walton Goelet, Mr. and Mrs. John Gordon Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bevaid, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Reynal, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Cornie Nast, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Miss Constance Warren, Mrs. Joseph R. Dilworth, and many others, not omitting Mrs. Nicholas Longworth (Alice Roosevelt).

Mother of Duchess.

Mrs. Goelet, who has not been de ing much entertaining since she lost one $250,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry from her safe a few summers ago, is the sister to Lady Michael Henry Herbert of London, and to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and she has the honor of being the mother of the Duchess of Roxburghe. She is Goelet of Floors Castle. The late Ogden Goelet left his widow some $20,000,000.

BRILLIANT NEWPORT BALL GIVEN FOR DUKE

Mrs. Goelet Is Hostess to Bavarian Nobleman at Ochre Court.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—A small portion of the Goelet millions was spilled to-night when Mrs. Ogden Goelet gave a grand ball at Ochre Court mansion in honor of the Duke Franz Josef of Bavaria and his personal adjutant, Captain von Lossow, and Count George Wedell. The Duke certainly had a grand opportunity to see for himself the most glorious specimens of feminity to be found in America. The ball room at Ochre Court is of endless passing elegance in white and gold after the most exacting tastes of foreign critics, for when the late Ogden Goelet built Ochre Court he did not wish to know about the cost but whether or not the best was being used.

Boston Well Represented.

The Boston contingent was well represented this evening, for there was Mr. and Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Fenton, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and Miss Sallie Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Norman, Mr. and Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt, Count Troubetzkoy, Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Thayer.

Then there was Miss Josephine Crosby, Mrs. W. G. Hoolker, Mrs. James B. Hagin, Miss Mabel Gerry, Miss Alice Gerry, Mrs. Ogden Mills, and her sister, Mrs. G. Cavendish Bentinck, and her daughter, the Countess Grunne, and Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps; Mr. and Mrs. Kendall Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Loosey Oelrichs (Marjorie Turnbull), or, as she will be soon known, Queen Guinevere; James J. Vanalen, Miss May Vanalen, Mrs. Elliman Dyer, Mrs. Richard Gambrill, Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Henry Prince, Mrs. Morton, Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Hollingsworth, Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, Miss Beryl Kane, Miss Constance Kane, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, Baron Rudolf von Boddenstein, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Waterbury, Robert Walton Goelet, Mr. and Mrs. John Gordon Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bevaid, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Reynal, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Cornie Nast, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Miss Constance Warren, Mrs. Joseph R. Dilworth, and many others, not omitting Mrs. Nicholas Longworth (Alice Roosevelt).

Mother of Duchess.

Mrs. Goelet, who has not been de ing much entertaining since she lost one $250,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry from her safe a few summers ago, is the sister to Lady Michael Henry Herbert of London, and to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and she has the honor of being the mother of the Duchess of Roxburghe. She is Goelet of Floors Castle. The late Ogden Goelet left his widow some $20,000,000.

MRS. CLEWS LOSES $50,000 NECKLACE

Banker's Wife Hunts Streets at Newport for Fine String of Pearls.

NEWPORT, Aug. 20.—Mrs. Henry Clews, wife of Henry Clews, the New York banker, and mother of Mrs. Herbert Parsons, the author of Trial Marriage," lost a $50,000 necklace of pearls to-day while walking along Bellevue avenue, near the Casino, on the way to her Summer residence, The Rocks.

Residents living along Bellevue avenue were surprised to see Mrs. Clews searching the sidewalk as if she had lost something this afternoon. When asked if she had lost anything, she replied: "Oh, nothing much. Just a pearl necklace."

Spectators thought she was wasting a great deal of time looking for a parasol handle, and her maid was not employed. She said:

"Mrs. Clews has lost a string of pearls, costing $50,000, and she feels awfully badly."

It was later stated that Mrs. Clews did not want it known that she had lost her pearls.

MISS DOOLEY SUES WEALTHY MERCHANT

BALDWINVILLE, Aug. 20.—The attachment of $10,000 placed on the property of Thomas J. Meegan of this town, one of the most prominent and wealthy business men of this section, by Miss Ellen Dooley of Boston, was served to-day. Miss Dooley says Meegan has been the sebastion of the year here. Miss Dooley sues for an alleged breach of contract.

For years the couple have been keeping what their friends term steady company and apparently were mated to each other, and it was among their friends, at least, a certainty that they would eventually be married.

Neither Miss Dooley nor Mr. Meegan will discuss the matter. Miss Dooley is still at the Hotel Bay View at Maquoit Beach even to her closest friend. Mr. Meegan has gone away—on a vacation, his clerks say—and they don't know when he will come back.

Melba After Two Years Returns and Will Sing in Boston

Laughs at Question About Wireless from Rothschild, the Richest Bachelor of England.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Melba, returning to New York today, after a two years' absence, said:

"I've been singing all the time. No—scarcely any holidays, except ocean voyages from France to here."

She said she had received a sixty-word "Marconigram" from Alfred Charles de Rothschild, on which it was remarked that this Rothschild was the richest bachelor of England, she declared with honest concern:

"Oh, it was only business. He takes care of some of my investments."

Mme. Melba, a native of Melbourne, is going to Australia to give her native country a grand opera.

"I sang in England up to the very day I sailed," she said. "After Covent Garden, I went to the Princess. I shall hear Canada, and first sing again in New York on about November 12, on a matinee afternoon, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

"I shall also give four farewells in New York, four times in Chicago and five times in Boston, and on December 16 will sail for England, make a concert tour of Scotland, wind up with a season at Covent Garden and then go to my native land for their first real grand opera."

MOTOR CARS FOR MAILS.

Great Britain Solves Question of Transportation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Great Britain has solved the question of cheap transportation of its mails. Automobile trucks are being used in many instances for the transportation of mails between London and Birmingham, according to Albert Halstead, U. S. consul at the latter city.

The distance between the two cities is 113 miles, and the mail is carried in connect with wagons of similar type along the route, where they carry mails of smaller towns. In this manner, says consul Halstead, a wide territory is covered and better service is insured.

Mrs. Sarah A. Dean is 92.

Mrs. Sarah A Dean of Stoneham celebrated her ninety-second birthday yesterday by receiving her friends at a reception given in her honor by the Ladies' Aid Society in the chapel of the Congregational Church in that town. Mrs. Dean is the oldest member of the church society and attends church regularly each week.

Hurt in City Auto Crash.

Driver Robert Jones of Wiley street and Assistant James Saunders of East Boston, employes of the Boston City Bath Department, were injured in an automobile accident on Massachusetts avenue yesterday afternoon. Jones is in the hospital. Control of the department machine was lost and it struck a telegraph pole.

AUNT DELIA WITH TAFT AT THE RACES

President Disposes of Mass of Mail While Aboard His Yacht.

BEVERLY, Aug. 20.—Still maintaining absolute silence on all political topics, President Taft was up early enough to-day to begin work at 5:30 on the letter which he will contribute to the campaign book of the Republican Congressional Committee. At ten o'clock the President, Mrs. Taft, Miss Delia Torrey, Representative Samuel W. McCall, of Massachusetts, and former Collector George Lyman, of the City of Boston, went aboard the Sylph and witnessed the victory of the American yacht Hanover in the Solent class races. The party had luncheon on board and between times the President disposed of a mass of mail.

This afternoon the President worked on the address which he will deliver at the Corporation Congress in St. Paul on September 5. There were no callers during the day. Late in the afternoon the President took a motor drive with Mrs. Taft and Aunt Delia.

Secretary Norton announced this afternoon the newspaper story printed in New York that the President was requested to withdraw his consent to address the Winona Baptist Conference, to be held in Rev. D. Morgan had refused to speak on the same platform with him. Secretary Norton said that he had no knowledge of any such incident. The engagement was cancelled with a number of others because of the press of official business made necessary for the President to abandon all the engagements he had made.

Lloyd Grimscom is coming next week some time, and will be received. It is not definitely decided to-day that he did not know the date.

SUES HIS MOTHER

Edwin A. Mead Wants a Share of His Father's Estate.

Edwin A. Mead of Boston brought suit against his mother and brother yesterday to secure what he claims as a share in the estate of his father, the late Dr. William F. Mead of No. 228 Tremont street. Dr. Mead died last May. Edwin A. Mead claims, in suit filed in the Suffolk Superior Court, that his father, while mentally incapacitated last April, transferred real estate in Hingham and deposits in four savings banks to his mother, Mrs. Mary A. Mead, and his brother, Frank Mead.

The plaintiff says this property belongs to his father's estate, and that the transfers may deprive him of his share. He asks that the transfers be made void and the property turned over to the administrator of the estate.

HARVARD OFFERS NEW COURSES FOR THE COMING YEAR

Scholars of World Reputation Will Be Heard in the Lecture Courses.

In a little less than six weeks academic activities will begin at Harvard University, for lectures commence Thursday, September 29, in all departments of the institution, and it is expected that this year will be a somewhat busier one, many distinguished men being seated as lecturers during the term.

Some interesting new courses have been added to the curriculum of the Graduate School of Business Administration, as well as a course of special instruction in English for foreigners in the English department, the having been found necessary owing to the yearly increasing number of foreigners coming to the university each year as thoroughly up-to-date and scholarship offered by foreign universities commercially.

This new course has already been nicknamed the "Among Wild Scenes," and in term aptly describes the newly established class.

Noted Men to Lecture.

Another prominent foreigner to visit Harvard during the year is Professor Franz Arthenda, a famous sound engineer of the Government Experiment Station at Stockholm, Sweden. He will be the guest of Professor Richards, head of the acoustic department at Harvard, while in this country. Later he will be heard in certain lectures in the Lowell Institute course in Boston.

The exchange professor this year to Harvard from Germany is Professor Meyer, as Professor Max Friedlander, director of the Berlin Museum, who delivers a series of resemblance to the Conservatory of Music in this city. Professor Friedlander will give a course of lectures in the music department at Harvard and will be received by Professor Spaulding, the head of that department.

Professor Hugo Munsterberg, the psychological expert at Harvard, is the representative of the Cosmopolitan University of Berlin this year, and has already left for that country.

The new course in English, which will be known in the catalogue as English 19, is designed for those who are embarrassed in their college work for an inability to write and speak correctly, and who are ambitious of attaining accuracy of expression. This course, which will be open to all foreign members of the University on the payment of a small fee, will be conducted by Roger B. Lewis, an assistant in English.

Another new departure in courses will be seen in the Graduate School of Business Administration.

One of the new courses which should prove of a great value to students in this school is "All Industrial Plants in the Business of Printing." This course will have a variety of lectures during the year, including A. Frederick McKay, chief of the Typographic Department of the Chas. E. Hooper Co., Philadelphia; and Arthur D. Little, chief chemist for the American Paper and Pulp Association.

"Industrial Organizations."

In the course on "Industrial Organization" the students of the school men as William B. Dickson, first vice-president of the United States Steel Corporation, Gresham Smith, comptroller of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, and Russell Robb of the firm of Robb & Webster, managers of Public Service Corporations. In this course Joseph B. Eddy, industrial authority, who is also employed as a special man on the Boston & Maine Railroad, will again be heard at Harvard.

In the course on "Transportation" given in this same school, the Attorney-General of the United States, George W. Wickersham, will lecture, while Thomas W. Lamont, vice-president of the First National Bank of New York, and others prominent in the world of finance will come to Cambridge to deliver lectures.

With the opening of Harvard this Fall the new degree of Master in Arts will be open to any one who chooses to complete the work required for the award of this degree. To obtain this degree the candidate must pass in a group of courses to the same number of courses as is required for the degree of Bachelor in Arts, of which the equivalent of not less than five full courses shall be given by officers of instruction of Harvard University or by the university of Harvard. These courses, at least one course shall be selected from each of the four following groups:

1—Language, Literature, Fine Arts, Music.
2—History, Political and Social Sciences.
3—Natural Sciences.
4—Philosophy and Mathematics.

Under this system entrance examinations to or residence at Harvard University is not necessary, the courses to be taken being the examination which a candidate for certain Courses agreed to by Harvard University, Tufts, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston College, Boston University, Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Wellesley College and Simmons College.

"We Pay the Postage."

CONGRESSMEN DEMAND SPEEDIER SHIPS FOR BOSTON MAIL SERVICE

Keliher and O'Connell Intend to Get Quicker Boats on Run From Here to Europe.

WITH the intention of securing fast mail ships from Boston to Europe Congressmen John A. Keliher and Joseph F. O'Connell have begun an investigation into the method followed by the U. S. Postoffice in distributing more than $2,000,000 annually among steamship companies for carrying foreign mails.

Congressmen Keliher and O'Connell are awake to the complete neglect of this section in regard to the proper handling of its foreign mails and the fine representatives will find business men ranged solidly behind them in their effort to get justice from the Postoffice Department.

The interests of Boston and of the whole United States demand that fast mail steamships convey the United States mail from Boston to European ports and be the landing places of the great British and Continental mails in the United States.

The whole country is compelled to submit to the rule of Penn Line for taking in the delivery of foreign mails to suit the convenience of that steamship corporation, lines which draw $1,450,970 annually from the United States treasury, and which prefer to land their mails and take the American mails at New York rather than at the hours further from Europe than Boston.

Mails Are Delayed.

By this system mails in San Francisco and Chicago are delayed by at least five hours and even mails in New York city are delivered two hours later than if Boston were the port of landing instead of New York.

New England is the worst sufferer because the present method of delivering foreign mails on the Monday of six out of six to twenty hours to New England mails and places Boston at a disadvantage of 24 hours in advantage in competing with New York for foreign business.

The establishment of fast mail services to Boston would mean a fast passenger services, and better trains to the South and West. It would initiate an improvement in the transportation facilities of this section and be of the greatest benefit to the port.

"The sailing of fast mail steamers from Boston would not only benefit this section but improve the U. S. mail service between all parts of the United States and Europe," declared Congressman John A. Keliher. "Great quantities of mail were once sent from Boston to Europe but the great increase in speed of the New York steamers and the failure of the steamship lines to place faster boats on the Boston service has compelled the postoffice department to adopt the practice of sending the mails through New York.

"The fact is that the postoffice pays enormous sums to the steamship lines for carrying the mails and is called to demand the most direct and shortest route to Europe be followed.

Will Try for New Law.

"There is no likelihood that all the fast mail ships will ever be transferred from New York to Boston, but there is no reason why a number of express steamers should not make use of this port.

The people of the United States support the postoffice and demand that the mails be delivered as speedily as possible, and are not interested in any private reasons the steamship lines have for taking the mails at New York instead of Boston.

"I shall at once call the attention of the Postmaster General to the manner in which the postoffice has neglected the logical mail port of the United States and I shall do all in my power to secure a provision in the next mail subsidy appropriation bill that fast mails be sent from Boston as well as New York.

"It follows as a matter of course that the port would benefit greatly by the placing of fast steamships in the service of it. It would mean that the steamship lines in order to make connections would have to go out and hustle for passenger business, defect from New York if necessary. The trouble now is that the steamship lines have no service from Boston and New York are indifferent which port is chosen by prospective passengers.

"You may depend upon me to do all in my power to attract the attention of the postoffice and of the country to this matter.

O'Connell's Opinion.

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell was equally alive to the possibilities for Boston if an attack on the present mail subsidy arrangement.

"I am surprised that Boston did not long ago get after the Government for the use of this port as a place of exit for United States mails to Europe. The mails for the European mails go largely from New York is because the steamship lines were established there and didn't want to.

"The purpose of paying a steamship line such a ridiculous high rate as eight cents a pound for letters and postal cards, which is the rate to Great Britain, Germany, and thirty-five cents a pound, which is the rate to foreign countries, was to encourage American shipping and to secure the speedy delivery of the mails.

"Fast steamers can convey mails Boston to Europe in ten hours less time than from New York, and there isn't any question in my mind that such steamers could also get all the passengers they wanted to carry if they tried, as hard to get them as they do in New York.

"New England pays a large proportion of the million and a half that goes into the coffers of the steamship companies every year, and possessing the best possible mail port New England is entitled to some of the service and it pays to get it.

"The Boston postoffice seldom sends mails on Boston steamers because they are so slow, but if fast steamers began from this port New England's foreign mails would soon assume great proportions.

Fast Boats For Boston.

"The steamship lines will not apparently put fast boats on this route of their own accord, and the ports will remain dead until it gets them. Therefore, if the United States postoffice can bring about the establishment of such a service I will be content in making it do so.

"You may count on me to keep after the department until we get some results."

Congressman John F. O'Connell said that the present mail subsidy arrangement should prevent the Postoffice Department from helping Boston to get faster ships, but he is not averse to amending and broadening the law.

"I favor a ship subsidy man," said Congressman Weeks. "I believe we cannot have too many steamship lines and they should fly the American flag. I shall do all to see lines to South America from Boston. There is a great field of business down there and we could get our share of it if we had direct steamship services. I am in favor of making subsidies so large that it would pay to establish additional lines.

"It would be an excellent thing for Boston if fast mail ships could be added to this port, and there is no question but that it has the advantages to bring this about if the laws stands the government does not pay for carrying the mails on ships which are available and can maintain a service fast enough to be satisfactory.

Mail Subsidy Won't Pay.

"I don't think the steamship companies would send big fast ships here unless they thought they could get passengers and freight enough to make it pay for the, would not earn enough from the mail subsidies alone. It is a matter worthy of serious consideration, however, and I am in favor of anything which might increase the commerce of Boston. There is no reason why the present mail subsidy law should not be modified."

The quiescence of Boston business interests in watching the New York lines increase the speed of their vessels without demanding fast boats for Boston is partially responsible for the present situation, that the Postoffice Department in permitting steamship lines to carry mails to New York when so many hours can be saved by landing them in Boston is most culpable.

The British postoffice has just completed the Grand Line of fast mail ships and its mails at Fleetwood instead of Liverpool. The Postoffice Department has failed in securing or sending them from London by New York and Boston, but in recent years the steamship lines have been speeding faster and faster and New York and have not increased the speed of their Boston steamers. Yet still enjoy subsidies for carrying mail from Boston and the eight-day steamers which sail from this port are a source of profit to the steamers. The White Star line collected from the United States on ships which in 1905 $2,294 for carrying mail weighing 7,000,000 grams from Boston.

At present the handicap of the New York business men is enormous. They are fairly so since Nature arranged that things should be so in favor of Boston. It gains six hours on the Boston man which he writes or receives a letter before the mail must go to New York by train if it is not good enough to escape the Boston so called mail boat.

CRANBERRY MEN MEET.

Sales Company Stockholders Plan for Season's Crop.

MIDDLEBORO, Aug. 20.—The annual stockholders' meeting of the New England Cranberry Sales Company was held in Cushing Hall with an all-day session. Plans were made for the coming marketing season, and the matter of adding new brands to their selling lists was discussed. The afternoon session was given up to the discussion of the advertising scheme that has been before the cranberry men for some time. The scheme whereby each grower is taxed ten cents per barrel for each berrel marketed does not meet with the approval of the majority of the growers, and it will not be adopted at present.

CRIPPEN AND GIRL SAIL FOR ENGLAND

Were Secretly Hurried Aboard Steamship at Quebec, Closely Guarded.

QUEBEC, Aug. 20.—Dr. H. H. Crippen, accused of murdering his wife, Belle Elmore, in England, and his pupil, Ethel Clare LeNeve, sailed to-day for England in custody of Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard.

The departure was marked by almost sensational attempts at secrecy on the part of Dew, who chartered a special boat to catch the Megantic, which sailed out sight from Montreal.

Dr. Crippen and his companion were spirited from the prison and hurried to Cape Rouge, seven miles southeast of the city. There the special boat was in sailing, and they boarded immediately to escape pursuit. Three representatives of the provincial police accompanied the prisoners and their guard.

Reservations for the party had been made on the liner Megantic, and special orders had been given to see that the boarding here while she was on her way from Montreal.

Big Crowd Gathers.

Dew since his arrival here and the capture of the fugitives on the Montreal of Father Point had become angered at the attentions of the police and the newspapermen. It was known two weeks ago that he might attempt to slip the prisoners out of Quebec without the fact reaching the public for days.

When the news spread that the start for England had been made a crowd of 500 reported that the couple were about to leave the prison to go to court, and they were quickly gathered on the heights of Abraham to along the water front.

A force of police attempted to disperse the crowd. They had difficulty in driving the curious away.

Secrecy in Departure.

Inspector Dew spent little of last night at the St. George House, where he has made his headquarters. Sergeant Mitchell, sent from London with papers bearing on the return of the couple, was also not to be found.

Mitchell with the two wardresses sent from London to accompany Ethel LeNeve, Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Stone, had received special instructions.

How made his departure as dramatic as his arrival, when he came as the Rev. Mr. Laurentie, under an alias and posing as a cleric.

The prisoners' few belongings were packed in satchels hourly expected for them. Ethel LeNeve was apathetic, but Crippen was apparently happy at the prospect of returning to England.

WHEN IS DOG CATCHER?

Sharp Tilt Expected in City Council Meeting Tomorrow.

Two-cent's scheduled meeting of the city Council will probably be enlivened by a discussion on: When is a dog catcher not a dog catcher? The city has three official dog catchers who are constables and paid $1,000 per year each. They are Hunting-ton Smith of Dedham, Julian Codman of Hamilton and Dr. Frank J. Sullivan of Cambridge, and all three are directors of the Animal Rescue League. They were appointed constables with ratings as dog catchers under the Hibbard administration and the term of office expires June 30. It was not until June 13 that toy where reappointed and they were not confirmed until June 20.

During the time that their commissions were not in existence they caught 924 dogs and they want to be paid for their work. While they were not officially dog catchers during the period from May 1 to June 20, since the law says that all dog catchers must be constables, they believe they should be compensated for their services during that period. It will require a special order of the City Council and Councilman Matthew Hale will introduce it.

HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVES; THE MOTHER ON ONLY $12 PER WEEK

SECOND ARTICLE.

By REV. ALBERT E. GEORGE

SITTING one evening in the back room of a tenement in the congested part of this city this summer, I was much impressed with the ways of a mother who was fighting this world with an income of only twelve dollars a week.

To keep four on this sum requires some ingenuity and skill.

There are heroines in the tenement districts of Boston that are never known to the great outside world.

Day in and day out these heroines—these mothers of small children—go about their work quietly in the kitchen—the kitchen which answers for a sitting room, a parlor and a dining room.

We often talk about the women who are doing so much charitable work in this city, but let me see and respect the mother who toils so many hours in one room these hot days, doing the washing, ironing and a hundred other things to keep the humble home tidy and neat and the children respectable.

SHE LIVES IN THE FUTURE.

As soon as the hard-working man drops that wage envelope on the table Saturday night, the mother has already anticipated what she will have to do with most of it.

There is the rent. There is the life insurance. These two items are important. I heard them talked over this summer. That insurance MUST be paid. Then there is a little portion to be given to the husband. He must have his mite. The children, too, must have their bit out of those twelve dollars. It may be just a little candy. But it is always looked for the night that the pay envelope comes. Everyone has something to expect out of that envelope.

The hardest thing to get in some families are the shoes. They really cost the most. If shoes could be bought for $1 a pair—good, durable shoes—how many blessings would this in itself bestow upon the poor family?

The mother must buy the shoes. Now it is quite an art to make a little money go a good way in buying shoes.

Then there is the cooking and getting the meals together. I have sat down to many a good meal in a tenement house. Poverty—makes many women good cooks. That is to say they can do much with a little food.

GOOD MEALS FROM LITTLE FOOD.

I have eaten better meals at the table of a poor man than at the table of the rich, and helped wash the dishes afterward and enjoyed every moment of it.

Of course there is not the variety. But the cooking is very good. I took this Summer one of the best dinners I ever had in my life down in New Bedford among the homes of the poor workers in the cotton mills.

It is truly wonderful what good meals some of these poor people get up on a little. I have tasted the shin bone done up in a style for an epicure.

But after all I have pity upon the mother who bakes, washes, mends, sews, cleans, and plans new dresses and that leans constantly over that kitchen sink.

What pleasures have those women? Clad in a calico wrapper all day long and having one dress to appear in public with and often afraid to venture too far with that because the style is not up to date.

NO CLASS DESERVES MORE PRAISE.

However, there is no class deserving of so much praise as the ordinary woman, you would call her, the mother in the tenement districts of this city.

What she does on $12 a week is simply wonderful. Cutting out garments, even when there is not enough cloth to conform to the pattern, I have seen them as they worked late at night upon the kitchen table, use their wits to splendid advantage and piece out wonderfully well.

After all, the poor people are wonderfully happy in their homes. Personally I have had more real pleasure in calling upon them than I can well express.

But I do pity the children these warm days with no place to go and waiting for some organization to take them for an outing, but the poor mother keeps on struggling with those twelve dollars and doing so much with them and getting such meals. She is truly deserving of all praise and has earned a place in the hall of fame. You can't say too much in her honor.

BIG APPLE CROP FOR THE BAY STATE

State Agriculture Board Secretary Discusses Yield and Urges More Spraying.

This is "apple year."

Secretary J. Lewis Ellsworth of the State Board of Agriculture, who is something of an apple-grower himself, raising four hundred barrels of the fruit on his farm at Worcester, says that the Bay State is going to have a big crop, but, unlike the International Apple Shippers' Association, doesn't go into ecstacies over what New England is accomplishing for an apple yield.

He believes that if carless growers were aware of the benefits derived through the spraying of the trees in the Spring, so that the coddling moth is put out of existence, a much greater crop, great as the crop may be, would have resulted.

Secretary Ellsworth is an apple boomer in every sense of the word and believes that the future holds much in store for New England, when orchards receive planned tending, to show what the latest methods of apple culture can accomplish. With J. Howard Brown of Marlboro, the secretary of the Massachusetts Fruit Growers' Association, he plans to bring the apple raisers of Massachusetts together soon, so that the various phases of culture may be discussed for mutual well being.

"Why," he said to the Sunday American "it would be a calamity to fail what the future holds forth. We do not know what the crop will be next year. It is a matter of opinion. Some time ago out West the seers of fruit circles said definitely that the crop was to be of tremendous proportions. Then the growers came along and they declared that there would not be enough apples to go around, and the country to make up a fair-sized apple pie. That is the way it goes. It is all a matter of guesswork.

"It is hard to determine just what crops will be on account of the fact that the farmers seem to ignore them. Of this, This is what is known as the Baldwin crop, and there is no large number of apple trees have been set out. This means that four years from now the new trees, unless they are Baldwins, will begin to bear, while if that variety is placed it will take from six to eight years.

"The prospects look bright for New England and our own State for the future years. Just let the growers learn what spraying will accomplish and the results attained will be astonishing."

BRINGS HONDURAS TO TIME.

British Warships Soon Have Practical Results.

CELBA, Spanish Honduras, Aug. 20.—The British cruiser Scylla has again sailed with a request to return at an early date. The Honduran officials of this district have consented to the peaceful means of demands by the British Government for alleged indemnity for British subjects. The president has recalled Governor Medina, who was in charge of the northern district of Atlantida, Mayor De Plaza Planas, who was charged with the killing of a British Honduran or Negro named Rhodes and a Honduran officer named Gonzales, who is charged with the murder of a British Negro, a British subject, are reported to have been put in irons.

English Churchman Here.

The Rev. W. L. M. Cary of England, assistant supervisor general of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, is the guest of the Rev. Robert H. Gardiner of the Bowdoin street. Father Cary will preach at the Church of St. John the Evangelist on Bowdoin street to-night. This is his first visit to America, and he will inspect the work of the Cowley Fathers in Boston, the order of the Holy Cross at West Park, New York, and will later meet the Rev. Charles N. Field, S.S.J.E., of Boston, America's supervisor of the order, at Quebec. They will visit the branches in British Columbia and Japan.

NEW BEDFORD POLICE READY FOR STRIKE RIOT CALL

PARADE IS TURNED DOWN

Strikers Embittered at News of Work to Be Started on Monday.

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 20.—Following the announcement today by Chief of Police Mason that the striking workmen would not be allowed to parade the police held themselves in readiness all afternoon and evening for a riot call as many of the strikers were worked up to a frenzy at the attitude of the authorities regarding them.

More than 200 of the strikers gathered at the Labor Temple on Pleasant street and for a time it looked as though there would be trouble among the ranks of the strikers because of the absence of Strike Leader d'Allesandro who, it was declared, had gone in Providence. There were those in the crowd who were ready to denounce d'Allesandro. James Murray made a speech in which he questioned the ability of the strike leader and accused him of keeping facts from the English speaking strikers that they should know.

Sta't New Work Monday.

The strikers were further embittered when they learned late today that the builders had informed the police that work would be started on one of the big jobs on Monday and that they wanted ample police protection. Chief Mason told the builders that he would have plenty of police on hand to take care of any situation that was likely to arise.

The mills upon which work is to be resumed Monday are the Nefid, Beacon, Sharpe, Quissett and the New Bedford Storage Company.

The one thing that angered the strikers was the fact that Chief Mason and Mayor Ashley turned the proposed parade down flatly without giving any explanation. When the men gathered at the Labor Temple instead of finding Strike Leader d'Allesandro there ready to lead them through the principal streets of New Bedford, they were confronted with this sign:

No parade to-day because no permit. Meeting to-morrow at 2 o'clock at No. 45 Delano street.

This was posted in English and Italian. It was after reading this that Murray mounted a rostrum and made a speech in which he said: "I want to find out," shouted the speaker, "if d'Allesandro has the written agreement of the bricklayers' and carpenters' unions to call this strike. If he hasn't I want to have the man reported. I want to state also, right here, I think the man isn't qualified for the position he holds."

Held Up Big Contracts.

General organizer d'Allesandro left New Bedford at 1:30 this afternoon, on the train for Providence, where he is to attend a labor meeting to-morrow. It says he will be back here Sunday evening or Monday morning. It was also today that he is a younger brother of Dominick d'Allesandro, vice-president of the International Hodcarriers' Union.

"The strike situation looks good for the strikers," he said before he took the train. "We are going to win because the contractors cannot get the labor they are after."

The strike leader seemed very confident of success and said the strikers were going to conduct their fight in an orderly, lawabiding way. The strikers say that the pardrone system must go and that building laborers throughout the country will soon be organized and be sure of wages that are up to the American standard.

During the week building which involves more than $7,000,000 in contracts have been held up by the strike, but on Monday the contractors propose to resume operations.

OFFERED PRESIDENCY.

Maine University Wants Westerner as Its Head.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 20.—The presidency of the University of Maine was tendered to Dr. Robert J. Aley of Indianapolis, State superintendent of instruction, by vote of the trustees at a special meeting in this city to-day. Dr. Aley will take the matter under consideration. The resignation of President George Emory Fellows, tendered last June, goes into effect September 1.

MISS ANNIE MORECROFT.

GIRL SURE SHE CAN SWIM TO THE LIGHT

"I AM going to swim to Boston Light, and when I get there I will swim out and around the island it's built on."

That is the prediction of Anna Morecroft, fifteen years old, called the iron girl, who will attempt the swim from Charlestown Bridge to Boston Light to-day.

Miss Morecroft made this statement after a performance with the diving girls at Wonderland last night. She turned her big blue eyes on the reporter to impress him with her earnestness, and declared that if they let her alone she would go far beyond the light.

"I shall start from Charlestown Bridge at 10:10 a. m. It is not yet decided if I shall follow the routes taken by others who have tried. I may go over the Inbound course or possibly the route taken by Annette Kellerman. We are taking a pair of swimming through the channel. I will be guided by my advisers."

"What was the longest time you have ever been in the water?" she was asked.

"The Base Point swim last we. was the longest experience I have had. Some say it was five hours and fifty-five minutes; others that it was ten minutes longer. Anyway, it was the record for that course.

"Previously my longest time in the water was two hours and twenty-five minutes, when I swam to Nahant. Neither journey tired me. I have no idea how long I could remain in the water swimming—perhaps all day and night, if the water was at a reasonable temperature."

ELSIE ACKROYD IN FRONT.

Boston Swimmer in Lead Forced Out by Cramps.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Miss Elsie Ackroyd, of Boston, Mass., an amateur swimmer of note and classed as a perfectly performed girl, failed to finish in the fifteen mile swim on the Thames through London this afternoon, though she led the forty-nine starters at Hammersmith bridge. After going three miles, however, Miss Ackroyd was compelled by cramps to leave the water.

The race was won by P. A. Battersby of Wigan Club, in 3:21:12. H. Taylor was second in 3:24:42. A. R. Latherwick was third in 3:46:06. Of the forty-nine starters only twenty-seven finished.

SCHOOL AGE CHANGED.

Wakefield Children Must Be Five Years Old.

WAKEFIELD, Aug. 20.—The custom of years past of admitting children who would be five years old before December 1 to the public schools has been abolished by the school committee, and commencing September 7 all children entering the primary department must be five years old before October 1. The new rule was adopted after carefully considering the matter for two reasons, the overcrowding of the schools and the necessity of many of the children taking the first year's course over again.

FR. O'CALLAGHAN IS WELL, SAYS CABLES

South Boston Prelate, Now Abroad, in Good Health, Despite Rumors.

Monsignor Dennis O'Callaghan, the venerable and beloved prelate of St. Augustine's parish, South Boston, is in excellent health and is continuing his travels through Ireland.

This positive assurance can be given to the Monsignor's thousands of friends who have been greatly distressed since it was reported that he was ill to a hospital in Cork.

Monsignor O'Callaghan and his friend, Dr. P. J. Timmins of South Boston, have been enjoying a tour of Ireland. The parish has been sending cables of field well being. The report, published in some of the Boston papers Friday, that the Monsignor was a patient in Cork Hospital with stomach trouble was a severe shock to friends at home.

The Boston Sunday American was besought by scores of people of St. Augustine's and other parishes to ascertain the Monsignor's exact condition as soon as possible. A cable message was sent to Cork on Sunday American's correspondent at Cork, who is Editor Crosbie of the Cork Examiner.

CORK, Aug. 20.

Boston American:

Monsignor O'Callaghan and Dr. Timmins are in excellent health at Cowtownbutler, County Fermanagh.

CROSBIE.

This gives positive news that Monsignor O'Callaghan is in good health and that he and Dr. Timmins are at Cowtownbutler, County Fermanagh, and not in Cork. It is news that will be most welcome in Boston

BAREFOOT COUNTESS TELLS OF NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—The Countess Thamara de Swirsky, the titled Russian, whose barefoot dancing has been the sensation of Newport's social season, has passed under America's lorgnette and been appraised. All the time the Countess was forming a few impressions of her own. She has written them for the Boston American

By COUNTESS DE SWIRSKY.

Not before I reached Newport did I feel that my impressions would be of value, for the reason that the fashionable people from larger cities is so cosmopolitan that one would be at loss to say which were the real Americans. Then, too, I feel that Americans in the more intimate relations of their daily life.

Newport society has its fruits. All exclusive sets owe a part of their fruits and their charms, and the balancing is good.

As a rule the American women are very well dressed and well behaved, bright, good manner. At the balls and receptions in on places in the world could be found more than a more dazzling display of wealth. I speak particularly of Mrs. J. R. Hagedo, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs and Mrs. Astor.

Likened to Imperial Rome.

Newport as a Summer resort is rather unique, and so far as I can see there is no place in Europe with which it can be compared. I imagine one would have to go back to Imperial Rome to find a Summer resort like Newport.

Newport itself is beautiful with its blue sea and blue sky, and the villas from Truro Park to Ocean Drive afford grow cold and hard. Every one of these villas is a veritable museum of fine art from coast, or the smiling, starlit Italian nights. The same sort of a picture might be made about the American woman.

Deplores Women's Frown.

Is it not a pity that so many beautiful women make a study of maintaining a severe east of countenance? Instead of training their lips to smile, which would make their faces amiable as well as beautiful, they train themselves to a set frown which makes them almost ugly. Then, too, they disfigure themselves with the inevitable corsets, which entirely spoils the beauty of their figures.

I, for instance, never wore a corset in my life. About the only thing that is worn much has been said that there really remains little to say about it. The American man is a connoisseur in all of character and strength, and, therefore, in the appreciation of the beautiful in the ideal man.

COTTON MEN TO MEET.

National Convention at Portsmouth Next Month.

The National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, which is composed of over a thousand members, will hold its annual convention at Portsmouth, N. H., at the Hotel Wentworth, on September 15-17, at which time delegates will gather from all parts of the country. In addition to the business and reading of papers there will be prize and golf contests. Mayor Adams of Portsmouth will welcome the guests and President Franklin W. Hobbs of Boston will deliver an address. Following the meeting President Hobbs will hold an informal reception for the members and their women friends. The committee in charge is composed of Col. H. Martin Brown, chairman; Col. Charles H. Child, Henry C. Dexter, R. L. Faulkner, Edwin Lynam B. Goff, John E. Kendrick, Charles R. Makepeace and Frank P. Sheldon.

TO DEPORT DESPERADO.

Boston Ordered to Send Home Central American.

The Boston Immigration authorities received orders from Washington yesterday to deport to Santo Domingo Pierre Bailly, alias Georges Bonheur, a Central American desperado who has served various prison terms for crimes ranging from assault and battery to safecracking. He will be deported under the "undesirable citizen" law. His record, as supplied from Washington, bears out the charge. He escaped from the penal settlements in Cayenne in 1900, landing in Santo Domingo. There he succeeded in slipping to Boston. At the port he deserted. He resumed his desperate practices and was finally landed in jail on combined charges of larceny and safe-blowing.

MAYOR WANTS ACTION.

Again Calls for Rapid Transit to Dorchester Section.

Mayor Fitzgerald stirred up the question of rapid transit for Dorchester again yesterday when he addressed a communication to the Boston Transit Commission urging them to hasten hearings upon the proposed subway or tunnel to Dorchester through South Boston. Under the provisions of the law the commission was directed to give public hearings upon this question and report upon the matter. On July 18 the City Council appropriated $3,500 for the expense of these hearings, but the Mayor has been unable to learn whether any action has been taken by the Board.

DRAPER APPEALS TO RAILROAD HEADS

Urges Them to Make Lower Rates for the Shipment of Milk Here.

Governor Draper has taken the side of the farmers of Massachusetts in their effort to force the railroads to lower the milk rates into Boston, and if his efforts to bring the change of conditions sought meets with success the new increased demand of the milk producers for better prices from contractors including perhaps another milk strike will be averted.

Under the Saunders bill which went into effect on August 1, the railroads were given an opportunity to advance rates for carrying milk. They took advantage of the opportunity. The farmers subjected and final y President Stanley H. Alford of the Massachusetts Co-operative Milk Producers' Association appealed to Governor Draper for the special session of the Legislature that the Saunders bill might be repealed or amended in such a way that the milk producer is not suffering from the effects of the increased railroad rates.

Governor Draper recently notified him that it would be impossible for a number of reasons to favor the call for a special session, but in his letter to Mr. Alford he says that he has personally written to President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford; to President Tuttle of the Boston & Maine, and to the general manager of the Boston & Albany division of the New York Central Lines, asking them from the two standpoints of justice and of making lower rates on shipments of milk in the future.

And here the matter rests and until the next Legislature. If the efforts of Governor Draper are not successful, many of the farmers will demand that the incoming members of the Legislature and Governor pledge that the Saunders bill will be changed and the railroads forced to give a very low rate.

PUBLIC WEDDING FAILS IN WAREHAM

WAREHAM, Aug. 20.—A big crowd gathered in the central part of the town today to see what couple had the nerve to be married in public in front of one of the business houses. It had been heralded from one end of the Cape to the other that such a wedding was to take place, and it was known that a great many applications had been made.

Apparently the requirements were very simple, but it seems that when the prospective bride and groom began to inquire into the particulars that they found a pretty long string to the affair.

The wedding was to take place at 9:59. Long before this hour the street was jammed.

"Where's the brass band?" one of the crowd asked. "It was certainly advertised."

No band appeared. Time went on. The crowd increased. Nothing doing in the way of blushing bride or pale-faced groom on the platform provided for the ceremony. A committee appointed itself to wait, and somebody was sent to the manager of the "The fact is," quoth Mr. McClellan, "the wedding is off, and it's a long story. The trouble was that none of the people in the place up to the specifications."

"What was the trouble with them—too old, too poor, or simply—"

"Well, it was a condition of the weddin' license. Certified couple must live here, you know."

"Why, what's that?"

"They wouldn't, that's all."

The information was circulated and the crowd melted into the darkness much disgusted.

CREASED TROUSERS ISSUE.

Boston Railroaders Worried Over New Jersey Order.

The question whether a railroad brakeman is any more skilful at setting a brake or any quicker at obeying orders if his trousers are creased may become an issue in Boston railroad circles.

The brakemen, announcers, gatemen and others in the Boston terminals and along the three systems putting into Boston have read with appreciation the order issued by the Public Service Commission of New Jersey City terminal to wear clean shaves and creased trousers. Clean shaves are all right, the railroad men say. But creased trousers is for another proposition.

Boston railroad men, having forced a raise, are of the mode only. This Spring hardly like the idea of giving up part of that raise in a valet every week for trouser dressing.

The gatemen and announcers can keep creases in their trousers quite a while, if they stand up at their work. But brakemen have to climb around considerably. It will cost them a dollar to keep their creases up to the standard.

TEST MILK INSPECTORS.

Mayor Will Ask Special Examinations by Civil Service Board.

Mayor Fitzgerald announced yesterday that he would call upon the Civil Service Commission the coming week to hold an examination for the position of milk inspector in the health department.

While there are still several hundred applicants for city jobs there are none which can be certified by the Civil Service Commission as qualified to be milk inspectors. The health department recently established a bureau of dairy inspection. It has been unable to carry on the work for the reason that there are no inspectors.

DARTMOUTH CLUB PLANS ANNOUNCED

Starts With More Than 200 Members and Headquarters at Hotel Bellevue.

The Dartmouth Club of Boston, the new social organization of the alumni of the New Hampshire college, has leased a suite of three rooms at the Hotel Bellevue, which will be ready for occupancy in September.

The club starts off with a membership of more than 200, and large additions are expected when the organization gets well under way, as there are nearly 1,000 graduates of the college residing in and around Greater Boston.

It is proposed to fit the rooms up in attractive style and make them a Dartmouth social centre for Boston, where the alumni may drop in at any time, and where visiting Dartmouth men may make themselves at home at any and all times.

The club proposes to have a weekly Saturday lunch throughout the year, a weekly social evening and a monthly dinner. It is planned to extend the scope and operations of the organization, with the ultimate goal of an independent clubhouse.

Somerville Girl Is Made a Victim Of "Widow" Hoax

Joker Signs Young Woman's Name to Letter Answering Application of Bride Seeking Westerner

A letter received by Mayor Fitzgerald and purporting to be an answer by a Somerville "widow" to the application of a Western miner for a young bride-woman for a wife, turns out to be an ill-chosen practical joke, attempted at the expense of an unsuspecting Somerville girl.

Mayor Fitzgerald has received from this western miner a letter asking for aid in getting the miner an eastern wife. Various organizations are given in the miner's letter. The move caused the usual amusement, with some curiosity as to whether any applicants would appear. The Mayor received a letter a day later signed with the name of this Somerville girl who was to be the victim of the hoax. The letter was given out but the name signed to it was withheld. It was published, however, that the supposed signer lived on Rogers avenue, Somerville.

The Somerville girl whose name was signed to the letter is with her parents in Wayland for the Summer. She knew nothing about the letter, of course, and was quite indignant that such a joke had been attempted at her expense.

BOY SCOUT IDEA NOW FOLLOWED BY CZAR

Russian Boy Soldiers Reviewed by the Ruler and His Six-Year-Old Son.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 20.—The Czar has followed the example of the New York American in adapting the British Boy Scout idea to the conditions of his own country. Only in Russia the conditions are so different from those in America and England that the organization evolved here is of the purely military, parade ground order.

The Russian boy-soldiers are termed "yuy-koshnoe voysko" (play troops), and the organization is really a revival of the juvenile corps formed by Peter the Great, the Emperor Paul, and other czars, in their youth.

The boys are uniformed, armed and drilled, just as miniature soldiers. One corps is the Imperial Boy Guard, the honor of being reviewed by the Czar himself, who was accompanied by the six-year-old Czarevitch; while the Minister of War inspected the others.

The movement is to be extended to all the elementary schools, where military movements, side drill and gymnastics will be taught. Although differing widely from the British and American boy scouts, the formation of the new Russian corps has been traced directly to the Czar's interest in General Baden-Powell's account of his organization which he gave His Majesty when visiting St. Petersburg recently.

OH, YOU YANKEE MAN! RESIST HER IF YOU CAN!

EMILIE M. GARDNER, OF BRITISH PARTY HERE URGING VOTES

MISS EMILIE M. GARDNER.

Of all the wondrous sights they're seen since touching Boston sward—these two are English suffragettes. Miss Bondfeid and Miss Ward—the wonderful-est sight of all is not Bunker Hill or Dorchobble skirt, or subway or our Big Beverly Bill.

It's the ever kind he-Yankee.

"He throws no sass," Miss Bondfeid says. Miss Ward says, "Nor don't curse." Of course she talks good English, but you can't do that in verses. "He doesn't yell for bobbie, doesn't punch and doesn't jeer. We must say, after English crowds, it strikes us truly queer."

"He even tells us, 'Thankee!'"

Miss Bondfeid says: "We're not accustomed like that in London, now. In London when we try to talk men raise an awful row. They call out 'Boo!' They rush us. Then they chuck us into jail. That's how we're always treated by the chivalrous British male."

"It's monstrous, quite."

"Yet here in Massachusetts, where I've seen three weeks a guest, we've talked and talked, but none have been yet arrested with arrest. Myself, I've hit your policies full many a verbal crack, but though my audience squirmed it has not yet seemed to back."

"Your men are SO politer"

"And, oh, so brave," adds Miss Ward. "I've noticed that you're not afraid of sobersess. Time questions show deep thought. And you're not gone they pole-der well the things we've said. I know it. Much more than the English crowd, which simply rolls its slow lip."

"With a rudeness most emphatic."

Miss Bondfeid says: "Why everyone is talking 'votes for women!' Here in the States the suffrage cause is positively wide-mia. Your Boston ladies voting we shall very shortly see, for Boston men cannot resist that 'equal suffrage plea——"

"Because they're democratic."

But first, before in Boston equal suffrage is a fact, will Boston women do the things like Englishmen act? (Excuse me, there's grammar, please, for just this second time —mind make some big concessions to exigencies of rhyme.)

Will they, you raise the divil?

"Oh, no!" Miss Ward makes haste to say—so does Miss Bondfeid, too—"those militant methods are not needed here for you. Were they so, we know your Boston women wouldn't hesitate. But Boston men will come around before it gets too late."

"For they're so sully civil."

To the mill towns which they visited New Bedford and the rest, they spoke with brilliant surprise on mill towns of their best. In England, they explained, "you don't find mill towns like these—in crowded houses, clean surroundings and rows of handsome trees.

"To shade the broad, smooth street."

"The English mill girl, we regret, is apt to be a mess. She doesn't get very well washed up, nor is a stylish dresser. She isn't apt to wear a net, nor ruffle, nor coronet braid; she doesn't sport a bun-dean nor a smock; we're much duller."

"Your mill girl's awfully sweet."

COHASSET SHERIFF AFTER SELECTMEN

Wants 'Em Punished for Failure to Prosecute Boys Who Cut Up Last May.

SELECTMEN NOT SCARED

Selectman Bates Says: "Boys Will Be Boys, and We Gave 'Em a Good Fright."

WHAT'S an immunity bath? That's the question that is worrying a lot of people in Cohasset, and Deputy Sheriff Gaffney of Hingham declared yesterday that he proposed to put the matter up to the next Grand Jury.

The Selectmen are Philander Bates, who has been a Selectman for thirty-seven years; Herbert W. Brown and William O. Souther. Mr. Souther is a new man on the job, having succeeded Joseph H. Burke, the Boston banker, last March, after one of the hottest campaigns ever seen in the town.

Wentworth declares that he will not only charge that the three Selectmen committed an immunity bath, but that they are guilty of malfeasance in office.

Here is what sheriff Wentworth claims a crowd of young men did last May-day night:

Stole a three-gallon can of gasoline, placed it in a buggy and touched it off.

Upset a hen house and tried to burn that.

Smashed a front yard fence.

Young Men Confessed.

Sheriff Wentworth and the constables of the town got busy and the information they had gathered in the offending culprits. Then the Selectmen sat on the case. Mr. Bates, who is also the truant officer for the town, got confessions from the accused young men. It was about all that came of the matter.

And right here is where Sheriff Wentworth charges that the three Selectmen committed an immunity bath comes in. This is Sheriff Wentworth's side of it:

"Two men risked their lives on account of that can of gasoline last night. They were Constable Henry Brennan and Fireman Allie Morse. They threw the can out of Elmer E. Bates's buggy. Bates drives the children from Beechwood to school here.

"The boys had tied the buggy and dragged it in front of the school house. Then they stole a can of gasoline from a lady living near by, poured the gasoline in the buggy and lighted it with a fuse. Brennan and Morse, who had reached the spot just in time to save the buggy, threw the can out and it rolled into a field, otherwise there would have been a conflagration here.

"I asked Selectman Bates if he had administered an immunity bath to the boys. I asked Mr. Souther the same question. Both declined to discuss the affairs. I pointed out that I was a citizen of this town and a tax-payer. I told him I'd see what I could do about it when the grand jury came in. It is the general impression that Selectmen Brown did not favor the immunity bath."

Selectman Bates was told what was in store for him by a reporter for the Hingham Journal. He looked a little frightened. He did not talk readily but when he did he talked from the pitcher's box and let them play the game.

Speed Boys Depressed.

The Speed Boys, who camp on the hill north of the West Monponsett Lake, are depressed. They had set their hearts on winning the usual prize for the winners of the Labor Day baseball game.

But Bunker Hills, who are encamped on the East Lake, are likewise sad. They were certain of capturing the prize if the Speed Boys didn't.

The two clubs will try bury the hatchet long enough to hold a protest meeting to-night in Cunningham's barge, Cunningham, the caterer, the leader of the anti-Speed Boy movement element, will preside, provided the Speed Boys get possession of the barge first. If the Bunker Hills get titles clear of them, "Pinkey" Dorsey will occupy the chair.

Mrs. Johannesen, one of the leaders of the Women's Auxiliary of the Monponsett Citizens' Improvement Association, suggested last night that a nice game of baseball between the two clubs be played in place of the usual ball game on Labor Day. A mate assured from the Women's Auxiliary has brought this suggestion to the baseball fans and received answers that wouldn't bear repetition in a family newspaper.

Offers Use of Front Lawn.

And as it goes Everybody has a suggestion of some sort, but most of the suggestions meet obstacles. Bill Kennedy, a baseball rooter from way back, has offered to chop down the pine grove in back of his house on West Lake, but the rest of the fans figure that the stumps couldn't be pulled out of the ground in time for the Labor Day game.

Joe Martin has offered the use of his front lawn for ball games, but the lawn has been found to be too steep for safety in base running. Former Representative John Lynch suggests a game of water baseball, but the boys fear that the game off shore would spoil the usual fun with the umpire.

There is more or less difficulty, too, over the selection of an umpire for such games as may be arranged. Former Senator David D. Leahy had promised to serve as umpire in any but Dorsey spoiled the bright work in the front of his quonset with the flag a pickled line in Lapham's store the other day, and it's hard now to distinguish whether he's saying "Ball!" or "Strike!"

BASEBALL STOPPED BY HEAVY HITTING

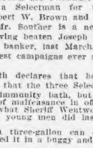
RUINED CRANBERRY CROP

Outfielders Trampled on Berries Chasing Three-Baggers and Must Quit It.

They've put the Indian sign on baseball down at Monponsett. Think of it! After taking off the lid on kissing, allowing Saturday night hops, granting a pony express license—after doing all those things and some others to make the place attractive, they've gone and prohibited the greatest outdoor game in the world from being played in the popular little Summer colony.



Mr. Snow is the big fellow in the combination of real estate. Other capital has money invested, but Snow manages things. About an acre of the land in question is used for a ball park. The rest of it is devoted to the growth of cranberries.

Too Many .300 Hitters.

Let it not be supposed that Mr. Snow is an individual who soured on baseball because Sexsas and Mr. McCosco were traded to the White Sox. Nothing of the sort. The fault lies in the fact that there isn't a baseball player in Monponsett who can bat anything higher than a three-bagger.

Think it over. Here's a community that can't enjoy seeing a ball game, not because it hasn't any players, but because its players are too good. If that isn't a paradox, what is?

The majority of cottagers on the East and West Lakes might still be enjoying ball games every Saturday afternoon and every Sunday since the constables stopped coming—if Joe Sullivan and Al Martin and Al Moran and "Young" Lally had not put the Monponsett B. B. C. back and to the rear fence instead of banging long ones into the far outfield.

"Outfield" in Monponsett is synonymous for "Snow's cranberry bog." The "plowed ground" is in the outfield. It is a bog and by two or three outfielders dashing right through it and out and after said baseball aren't the best things in the world for a cranberry crop.

Wherefore, Mr. Snow has jolested the baseball fans from baseball. And wherefore, in addition, the Summer colony of Monponsett is sad. There are two reasons always by which ball games may be arranged. Neither of the two is worth much to the fans. One is to buy the cranberry bog and the ball park—a mere matter of about fifteen thousand dollars. The other is to procure an aggregation of never-was players who don't know a fly from a catcher's mask, or who at least can't hit when they see the pitcher's box and let them play the game.

Speed Boys Depressed.

23 MORE VACATION DAYS FOR CHILDREN

REPAIRS BEING RUSHED

Children Making Best of Holiday Fun, but Officials Have a Hustling Time.

JUST twenty-three more days of vacation for Boston school children, and then the school bell rings and some 95,000 varieties of boys and girls will get out their pens and pencils, books, straps and bags and hurry off to register for another year's work.

Although the school children are just now trying to cram into the last days of the vacation the very best times they can possibly have, for different story will be the men who have charge of the Boston schoolhouses, and the preparation for the reception of the big army which is to invade them on September 14. There is all manner of cleaning and sweeping, repairing and oiling of the floors, blacking of blackboards and whitewashing of boys' walls. And then several buildings are to be opened for the first time this year, and there is no end of preparation to prevent some of the necessary convenience being forgotten.

The School Committee has a fixed rule that the schools of the city shall open on the second Wednesday in the month of September and open they do whether every last nail has not been driven and every window put in.

Expect 92,000 Pupils.

And the 92,000 students will be scattered among sixty-five elementary schools and eleven high schools. This means some 97,396 boys and girls registered during the school year. But while from month to month the figures vary many pupils drop out for various reasons, the average attendance is still given at 92,000.

Each year there is an increase of about 2,000 pupils, and for the current year the opening of the schools this fall will be in the neighborhood of 2,000 more than it was five years ago the opening attendance was 90,000.

To care for the increase in the number of pupils, new buildings and additions to other structures are needed. This fall will see the opening of Peter Faneuil school, one of the handsomest modern buildings which is the best elementary school building in the city. It will be located on Bolton street, in what is known as the Phillips Brooks district. It will give room for about 850 children, and will relieve the congestion in the Quincy district schools.

The new addition of the Dorchester High school will be ready for use, it is thought, or the other new buildings and improvements planned for Dorchester are the Blackington School addition in Jones Hill district, Dearborn School addition in Jim Hill, Roxbury, and the Adams School on Worcester street, East Boston.

Many Teachers.

With the 2,000 new pupils who will tramp into the schools will also come about 100 new teachers. While perhaps the first day or two there will be a small increase of the working force, many of the teachers who have been on the list of those retired and those who have married.

However, it has been found that the great number of those who are to be married will not be until December or November, although all might be June brides. And the reason for this is not far to seek for it all comes down to money in a manner in which teachers are paid in Boston.

The many who are paid for their full year's work in twelve payments but the June and July calls for two payments. For that reason they are paid for June and July in August and they receive the August and September payment in September. Having worked a year they are scheduled for pay and July and August. But right here comes in a little rule which says that any girl who is to marry. And so to get married right after the August money. So it is that many of the teachers will start work in the Fall and then along in October will resign and start housekeeping.

Many Courses Modified.

This year there will be no new courses added to the curriculum of Boston schools, the same as there was not believe in giving subjects which make for mental power but such courses must be kept alive. Better courses are being found each year and better methods of teaching tried out. If these improvements are not given a trial the courses would lose their flavor and the whole system would be in a rut.

This year a number of the courses will be modified and changes made but all are natural and are done only on the advice of the committee which during the past year has been studying the various courses and changes by which a greater benefit might be derived.

BANK MEN ON OUTING.

Old Colony Trust Employes Guests of Coolidge.

More than 20 of the officers and employes of the Old Colony Trust Company were entertained by T. Jefferson Coolidge, jr., at his beautiful estate at Magnolia yesterday. The party left the South Station on a special train early in the afternoon and made a round trip to the big resting ground so kindly offered them. Baseball, bowling, quoits and other amusing were only a few of the diversions which the men enjoyed and when 6 o'clock came around the bank men showed the west burst of appetite for an outdoor affair they answered the call of the dinner bell. The party left Magnolia about 9 o'clock for the return trip.

NEW CHOLERA CASES.

Deadliest Form of Disease at Trani, in Italy.

BARI, Italy, Aug. 20.—Five new cases of cholera and three deaths are reported from Trani. The disease manifests itself in its deadliest form, many of the victims being attacked without the usual premonitory symptoms and dying after a few hours.

In other parts of Apulia the situation is more hopeful, the precautions now being taken by the authorities to enforce hygienic measures and the sanitary measures adopted, the march of the cholera to new localities has been checked.

RED CROSS AIDS JAPAN.

Flood Fund of $5,000 Forwarded to Sufferers.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—A $5,000 contribution for the relief of the flood sufferers in Japan was forwarded to-day by the American Red Cross in Tokio, the amount was taken from the contingent fund of the organization and a call for funds was found not to be necessary.

100 Pages of Exceptions.

SALEM, Aug. 21.—Attorney M. L. Sullivan, counsel for Mayor White of Lawrence, to-day filed in the Essex Superior Court his bill of exceptions in the case of Mayor White, who was recently convicted of conspiracy to attempt to bribe, in connection with the alleged graft scandal in Lawrence. The exceptions filled 100 typewritten pages

Mayor Gaynor Has Best Day Yet: Will Soon Be Taken Home

From St. James He Will Go to the Adirondacks to More Fully Recuperate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—To-day was Mayor Gaynor's best day since he entered the hospital. His physicians announce that he is now practically out of danger. The following bulletin was issued:

The Mayor is rapidly gaining in strength.

Parrish, Arlitz, Stewart.

Mr. Adamson, the mayor's secretary was asked whether any definite arrangements had been made as to the place where Mayor Gaynor will spend his period of recuperation. Mr. Adamson said that no arrangements had been made as yet, but in al probability, Mayor Gaynor would be taken to his home in St. James as soon as he is able to leave St. Mary's Hospital. It is probable that he will remain there several weeks and then go to the Adirondacks, where it is expected that he will entirely recover his strength.

SEARCHING FOR WIFE.

Nobe Connelley Loses Better Half Through Confusion of Places.

Nobe Connelley, a traveling man, living at No. 17 Paris street, Boston, is anxious to hear from his wife Aimee, from whom he has received no word for over two weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Connelley became separated through a confusion of meeting places while traveling together.

Two weeks ago, while Mr. Connelley was back at the Rockingham Hotel in Portsmouth, N. H., he sent his wife to look after his business in Portland, Maine, she having left for that city and telephoned daily. When he got to Portland, she had left her hotel and had left him a note making an appointment to meet her at the next office. Although Mr. Connelley waited there several hours, he failed to see his wife. She has searched Bangor and several other cities in Maine in vain.

Although Mrs. Connelley carried considerable money about her no fears are felt on this account. He says that she is completely with him at his Boston address should she chance to see this notice. The couple are from Memphis, Tenn., and have been traveling for the past two years in the advertising business.

AFTER BEACH BOATS.

Mayor Seeks to Have Them Put Under State Board.

A petition seeking to have the steamboat lines plying between Boston and the harbor resorts placed under the jurisdiction of the railroad commissioners or some other State board will be filed with the next Legislature by Mayor Fitzgerald.

At the public announcement yesterday, after he admitted that his attempts to have the Nantasket Steamboat Company put on a line that would reach and accommodate those living in Boston was desired to stay at the sessions until late in the evening have been futile. The Mayor said that he had written three letters to the company, and had received in return but one letter, which he declared was very unsatisfactory. He believes that if the statutes are amended so that the railroad commission may exercise the same authority over that and other steamboat lines as it does over railroads and trolley lines, the public will be better served.

FOLSOM REUNION.

Hingham Settler's Descendants Will Meet on Wednesday.

The descendants of John Folsom, who settled in Hingham in 1638, will hold their second annual reunion at the town hall in old "Ship Church" on Wednesday, two sessions being held, one at 11 in the morning and one in the afternoon at 2. Previous to the public is invited.

The members will be welcomed by a member of the 275th Hingham anniversary committee, and different members of the family will read letters from Folsoms in Hingham and of his home in England. Mrs. Mabel Folsom Hutchinson of No. 30 Cottage street, Melrose, is president, and Mrs. Folsom of No. 10 Mt. Vernon street, Hingham, is recording secretary of the society, which is called "The Descendants of the Indistant John Folsom."

Revival Meeting Tonight.

J. Hiscon Irving, the English evangelist, will open his sixth series of meetings tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Willard Hall, near Washington and Dudley streets, Roxbury. The services will be held every night during the week.

BOSTON ACTORS FORM REAL UNION

Vaudeville Performers Organize Because of Grievances With Booking Agents.

By PHILIP J. HALVOSA.

What's that? An actor's union? Surest thing you know! Made up of the knights and ladies of the vaudeville stage, right here in Boston, too. And what's more, it isn't a makeshift union, either. They'll be a regular American Federation of Labor local, formed along the same lines and for the same purpose as the Hod Carriers' Union, or any other labor organization.

Seventy-five of the best known vaudeville performers in this city already are enrolled on the membership books of the new union. Fully 100 more have made application for membership. James Barrie of New York, general organizer of the International Actor's Union, is now in Boston to deliver their charter. Officers will be installed, members obligated, delegates to the Central Labor Union elected, and the usual perfecting details arranged at Bowdoin Hall, Green street, at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. The actors, having sought the Union fever, are pushing the idea to the very limit.

Not that they intend to make the "prop" and "props" handle none but union slap-sticks in knock-about acts. No, indeed—the woman who plasters on any such intention. They also ridden the very idea of calling a strike for higher wages, time-and-a-half for overtime, or any of the other inflationary trouble as to which sketch team has the right to kick when it's a Saturday standoff. "Why is a hen?" But, they have formed a union to remedy the evils, if any, of those grievances that this unique trade organization is being formed.

Grievances With Agents.

These grievances do not take in the managers of the vaudeville houses. Even the ladies in the song and dance turns acknowledge that the managers, bless them, "ain't bad fellows, when it comes to a square deal." They have searched Bangor in the greater number of managers in this city favors the union formation. The trouble lies with some of the booking agents.

For months past, the actors themselves say, one big booking agency in particular has made life so miserable for the vaudeville performers playing the Boston circuit that it has become a question of forming a union or getting out o fthe business entirely. And these same performers say they don't propose to stand for that kind of dog and bunger.

It is a common thing, they declare, for performers to be shipped here from other cities on a supposedly genuine contract, only to find that it is not worth the paper it is written on when it comes to the test. The result has been stranded players.

Chief Explains.

"You have some idea of what this union means to us. We have grown tired of being made the victims of that type of booking agent. The evil has become so prevalent, and our individual efforts to check it were so futile, that we simply had to form a union. It has become a matter of self-protection.

"This view of existing conditions was shared by the men, too. They, like us, anything, more outspoken in their condemnation of certain booking methods than the women. A trade union, they asserted, was the only way out of the difficulty.

This isn't a press-agent yarn, gotten up by some enterprising newspaper man for publicity. It's a straight out-and-out trade union affair. The vaudeville performers of Boston are going to have a union and it is going to be organized this afternoon at Green street, at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

TO HONOR FIANCE.

English Woman Goes to Africa to Put Cross on Grave.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—On a journey from England to Central Africa that she may erect a marble cross on the grave of her dead sweetheart was begun today by Miss Mac-Leod, daughter of Sir Reginald Macleod, who was murdered by a native near Abosbir, last April. Alexander's body was recovered and buried at Matlock, a Britain post near Lake Chad.

Miss Macleod will require seven months for the journey and it has never been accomplished by a white woman before.

John McGillicuddy Dead

LEWISTON, Me., Aug. 20.—John McGillicuddy, aged eighty-six, father of Daniel J. McGillicuddy, Democratic candidate for representative to Congress in the second district, died here after an illness. Mr. McGillicuddy was one of the oldest residents of Lewiston. He was a prosperous merchant and contractor.

Lumber King Dead.

RYE BEACH, N. H., Aug. 20.—Jonathan Thomas, a millionaire lumber man of the West, died here today from hardening of the arteries. He was sixty-nine years old. He came to the Farragut House here from his home in Topeka, Kan., in June, with Dr. Fraser J. McGuire in the hope that he could stop the progress of the fatal disease. The body will be shipped to the West.

Two Hurt in Collision.

BROCKTON, Aug. 20.—Joseph Mahoney, seventeen, of Rockland, employed as a stenographer and clerk at the office of the American Motor Cycle Company, and Adelard Pain, No. 68 Tyler street, were hurled bodily on Centre street when his motor cycle which Mahoney was driving struck Pain just after he had stepped off a street car. Both are now at the Brockton Hospital. Mahoney has a bad scalp wound and Pain a broken collar bone.

The Potency of OUR ALTERATION SALE PRICES Must Be Wonderful

The Greatest Volume of Business we ever did during a single week in August was that of the past week—Now comes the second week that should logically surpass all past records—HERE'S THE REASON—We had to place orders for Fall Merchandise the same as if no alterations were in progress—Much of this merchandise is now coming in—and will continue to arrive daily from now on—We haven't room to hold it as we ordinarily would do—so as fast as it arrives it must be thrown on the bargain tables and sold at decided price reductions. "NOT GOOD BUSINESS TO LOSE MONEY ON NEW GOODS," you'll say, but if you'll tell us what else to do under the present congested conditions of this store we'll be mighty glad to take advice. In this sale the people of New England gain by conditions that force us to adopt methods which under ordinary circumstances would not prevail here. IT IS A SALE THAT OFFERS MORE AND NEWER MERCHANDISE EVERY DAY IT CONTINUES—Here's a partial list of its splendid opportunities :

FITZGERALD STRONG WITH DEMOCRATS IN BARNSTABLE

Looks as Though He Would Command the Delegation in That County.

FALMOUTH, Aug. 20.—Unless the Barnstable County Democrats put forth a united front to the contrary, Mayor Fitzgerald will command the party organization in that county and possibly act as sponsor for the contest in Dukes and Nantucket counties.

Mayor Fitzgerald is spending the Summer with his family at Falmouth Heights. His lieutenants are certainly handling the situation most delicately. This is done to avoid so far as possible any suspicion as to the dominating power in the political affairs in this section of the State. First came the reception tendered Mayor Fitzgerald by the citizens of Falmouth, when people of all creeds and party politics assembled to bid him a hearty welcome. Even many rock-ribbed Republican leaders of the town, including the local postmaster and Republican Representative to the General Court, were present.

Then Came Church Fair.

Then followed a church fair at Woods Hole and another recently at Sandwich, where Mayor Fitzgerald was received and red fire, brass band and the cheering of the people. At the latter place his old friend George F. Child was in charge of affairs, and his clever hand was seen in all the arrangements to make the visit to Sandwich one long to be remembered by the Mayor of Boston. In fact, the local Democratic Committee and the members of the Democratic Columbian Club figured quite conspicuously at this meeting. Mr. McLaughlin, in order to make the occasion the more impressive, invited gentlemen of every political denomination to seats upon the platform, and there were perhaps some personal reasons one hesitated to accept so cordial an invitation, but Mr. Laughlin would assure him that there was no politics in the affair. To several this significant remark brought forth a smile that even the old politician was forced to recognize as of doubtful meaning. Anyway, Mayor Fitzgerald had a grand reception at Sandwich, even the nearest Republicans had to acknowledge his leadership as being a great orator and a splendid maker of new friends.

No Caucus in Past Years.

It is openly asserted that the Mayor of Boston will take full charge of the Democratic campaign on Cape Cod this Fall. In years past Barnstable County has been anything but enthusiastic over political politicos, with perhaps the exception of the last congressional campaign, when Foss was elected. Year after year the Democrats in many towns have failed to have a caucus for a choice of delegates to the various conventions, but this year Mayor Fitzgerald will insist that every town hold a caucus, for he realizes that with a real test in the State convention, every vote will be needed. Mayor Fitzgerald proposes to visit many of the towns on the Cape and meet the Democratic voters personally. As one Democrat stated a few days ago, there is no doubt but that Mayor Fitzgerald will know pretty well for himself the Cape delegates will vote for Governor if a contest is on between Fitzgerald and Foss.

With all of his enthusiasm in Cape politics there is no disposition to overstep the bounds of Mayor Fitzgerald dictating and assuming control of affairs in this section, something so far as to assert that his proposing will not meet the hearty support of the conservative Cape Cod Democrats.

Thacher Not Present.

One feature of the campaign is noticeable and that is, that while Mayor Fitzgerald has had some of the Barnstable County leaders in conference, Congressman Thacher of Yarmouth, was not one of them. Mr. Thacher is a candidate for Congress on the Democratic ticket. He has long cherished an ambition to serve his district in Washington. As president of the Barnstable County Agricultural Society he has used this position to go about the county making addresses on agricultural subjects, and in this way has introduced himself to many people who scarcely knew him before. This friendly campaign he has had a good following among Republicans especially here on Cape Cod.

DEMOCRATS TO CLEAR UP THEIR MUDDLE ON TUESDAY

State Committee Meets to Find Out Who Ought to Run for Governor.

THE democratic gubernatorial muddle will be cleared up this week—to the extent, at least, that the Democratic State Committee will get together at headquarters, No. 15 Beacon street, next Tuesday, and try to find out where its members want to be nominated for Governor.

With former Senator James H. Vahey admitting that he wants it and declaring that he'll fight for it, with Democratic leaders in every corner of the State clamoring for somebody else, and with the several "somebody else's" running away from questions as to whether they would accept the nomination, the men who are trying to steer the party to success have almost decided to abandon the roles of smoothers-out and allow the convention to improvise as best it may.

The fear, however, of what might result from a gathering of delegates as much at variance on the question of a candidate as the men who expect to be delegates now are is all that has held these leaders to their task of harmonizing the dispiriting elements.

Convention in Boston Oct. 7.

While next Tuesday's meeting of the State Committee is called ostensibly to fix a convention date and agree upon convention officers, the main purpose of the committee leaders is to get the slates of selections together and let them thresh out the gubernatorial situation.

The convention date and place have practically been settled. The men in charge of the State Committee rooms say Friday, October 7, for the date, and Faneuil Hall for the place, are preferred to either is expected from the committeemen. As for the convention officers, it is the chairman and members of the committee on resolutions who will draft the party platform, the selections will probably be left to the State Executive Committee.

Who's in the race for the gubernatorial nomination, who isn't, who could be induced to get into it, and who couldn't, will be the main topics at the gathering of committeeman. It isn't altogether unlikely that some harsh things will be said about the various candidates, but the party leaders would rather have hot words passed at a committee session than behind closed doors, than in the open convention.

Westerners Want Hamlin.

Senator John F. Malley of Springfield, who came to Boston recently with a boom for a Hamlin-Hayes ticket, "Charles S. Hamlin," he said, "would run better than any other part of the State, and any other man from the East, while the nomination of Congressman Gardner Hayes of Springfield, for second place would arouse solid enthusiasm.

"Springfield leaders of a half-dozen years ago would not be found opposing the Hayes candidacy, while the younger blood of the county takes kindly to the mention of John F. Fitzgerald as the Democratic nominee in the nature of real opposition to Vahey. Both sides are saving their powder for the Hamlin in particular, would make a better race.

Whether or not Tuesday's meeting of the State Committee will clear up the situation, the Democratic campaign will begin in real earnest at the big Representative Thomas F. Riley's troupe of picked orators, to-day and to-morrow, in a whirlwind tour of Hampden and Hampshire counties. Two days and Eastern local leaders will be addressed. The tour will end at noon Sunday with a monster meeting at Springfield.

Representative Frank X. Quigley, a member of the Executive Board of the Democratic Legislative Campaign Committee, will guide the tour. Chairman Macleod of the State Committee, Secretary Dolan, Treasurer McDonald, Committee, Chairman Riley of the Legislative Campaign Committee, Representative O'Brien of Dorchester, Shaw of Charlestown, Walsh of Roxbury, Carmody of Worcester and Parks of Fall River will make up the speaking force.

CONGRESSMAN O'CONNELL'S Organization Turns Loose the Oratory at Squantum.

CONGRESSMAN JOSEPH F. O'CONNELL had good reason to be proud of the turnout of his friends and fellow members in the Young Men's Democratic Club of Ward 20 yesterday. It was the annual outing and clambake of the Red Devils. Squantum Inn at Squantum was the place. Friends of Congressman O'Connell to the number of 2000 thronged around the pavilion tent and exhibited enough enthusiasm to count as an augury of future success for the Congressman Predictions were made that Congressman O'Connell will succeed himself, and that his three opponents for the Democratic nomination—James M. Curley, James H. Connolly and former Congressman William S. McNary—will be on the losing side.

A number of clever stunts kept the good natured bulling of Representative Flowerpot Madden was the first to witness the launching of a boom for himself for Governor. Henry Lee of Ward 20 was raked over the coals. And the club members—the Young Men's Democratic Club themselves—heard James H. Vahey talk about Congressman W. Murray Crane for Governor. He was accorded a rattling sendoff.

Kinkhead Makes a Hit.

One of the guests of honor was Congressman Eugene F. Kinkhead, of New Jersey, friend of Congressman O'Connell. Congressman Kinkhead is nothing if not a political talker. He says just the most appropriate stuff. The Ded Devils filled their plates at the rim and declared that they were thrilled to the core, and that again and again. Congressman Kinkhead's speech was due to the ability of the New Jerseyite.

One strong point about the run-together affair was the absence of booze. There was the name of an opponent of Congressman O'Connell mentioned. The mentioned had a day's leave of absence.

Congressman O'Connell's friends say: Congressman O'Connell, who was introduced by President Charles Conroy of the Red Devils organization; Joseph A. Maynard, president of the Democratic City Committee; James H. Vahey, candidate for Democratic nomination for Governor; Frederick J. McLeod, chairman of the Democratic State Committee; Congressman Kinkead, and Representative Riley.

At the speaker's table, in addition to those mentioned, were William H. O'Brien, who is out for State Senator; Humphrey O'Sullivan, present State Democratic Committee; Deputy Sheriff John Scully of Suffolk County; Presley Cooney, former Mayor John H. if. McNamee of Chelsea; Police Captain Dan Riordon, Michael F. Cuthbey, chairman of the Ward 20 Committee; Alderman Dunton, Calvin Brett, John Reardon and Daniel T. O'Connell, brother of the guest.

Ovation for O'Connell.

Congressman O'Connell was given an ovation. The Congressman dealt with the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and aimed his shafts at Senator Lodge. He declared this year would be another victory for the Democratic party. He also declared that the same surprise will be sprung on Lodge on November 8 as was handed him in the defeat of Augustus Gleann in the 14th District.

Congressman O'Connell said those present to work hard and strenuously to elect Governor Foss. He declared that the latest lists showed a falling off of 10,000 in the Republican vote.

In introducing Attorney Vahey, Congressman O'Connell said: "Here is the man who had borne the Democratic standard through the fight for years in the ranks and "makes us sire of success." Then Vahey spoke, saying: "Congressman Riley as he arose, saying:

"Gentlemen—Everyone is not enough for him. Walt till I'm elected Governor. After I make Tom Is to be elected Governor Lieutenant."

Mr. Vahey had intended to speak in party politics. But Congressman O'Connell had handled that subject so thoroughly that Vahey said he is still "serene, unruffled and good natured." He confined himself to congratulations in the ranks.

"I have not been in the habit of asking quarter from anybody, or running from anybody," he went on. "I ask no favors of any man in the Democratic ranks, nor of the party itself. All I ask the party is willing it will have its standard. If some other leader is chosen, I shall follow his. For myself I make claim to no leadership. I urge the Democratic party was as ashes in the gutter, under the feet of all men. To look up the banner when no other was willing, and to-day it flies high aloft in the skies."

A Word from McLeod.

Chairman McLeod stated the Democratic party is on deck. He said he, and he would win, choosing a leader who would stand firmly on a "good old-fashioned Democratic platform."

Congressman Kinkead said he felt sure of the success of Congressman O'Connell in being re-elected. Referring to the Massachusetts senatorial fight, Congressman Kinkead said:

"I do not know whether Mr. Vahey or Mr. Foss be your candidates, but so long as his campaign is based on the principles of Democracy I can predict a grand victory for your nominee. To-day the Anti-Lodge people are preparing to bolt over the rascals who have not kept their pledges and to put into office honest, honorable citizens."

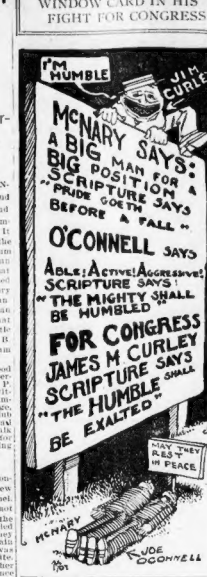
Representative Riley was enthusiastically received. He said his ambition was not to become Democratic leader, but to succeed Senator Lodge back to become town moderator of Nahant.

Wants to Defeat Lodge.

"I want to accomplish the defeat of Lodge. The real name for the spirit in the Republican ranks which we call in emergency is republicanism. The name of the Republican party from within the ranks of the party.

"The legislative campaign committee, composed of members of the present Legislature, for the years 1908, '09, '10, are doing great work. They are laying out for ahead of the State committee in its aggressiveness. Let the State committee to quicken up its pace. The legislative committee has called upon it for analyses, and literature to help those men who are standing for election to the Legislature. We can show that few or no Democrats voted for the election of Lodge to the senate, while in the Legislature the Republicans repeatedly stultify themselves with the Democrats in voting for the Democratic platform measures. On every one of the twenty-four roll calls the record of the Republican position is wrong platform.

CURLEY'S SCRIPTURAL WINDOW CARD IN HIS FIGHT FOR CONGRESS



BIG CAMBRIDGE REPUBLICAN FIGHT

Meyers Threatens to Run as Independent if Beaten for Senate.

The Cambridge political spat light is at present centered upon Principal Assessor Leverett F. Dennison and Representative Meyers, both of whom possess the nice name of "Jerry."

"Jerry" Dennison is a non-partisan in local politics and is boomed as a candidate to lead the party back into power. On several precious occasions Dennison has been suggested as a municipal possibility but this Summer, notwithstanding the fact that the University City election does not occur until November, the non-partisan leaders are all talking Dennison.

Just who will be the Democratic nominee is a matter of much speculation. Ex-Mayor William F. Brooks is now serving his second term. But Brooks has been ill most of the year and he cannot be expected to seek a third term. However, the University City voters will not have to wait long to learn of Dennison's possibilities.

"Jerry" Meyers is a thorn in the flesh of the Republican leaders in the Second Middlesex Senatorial District. Meyers, who has had half a dozen years on Beacon Hill is after the seat in the Senate made vacant by the death of Senator Thorndike Spalding. Thus far, all efforts to get Meyers out of the way have been fruitless.

He claims that last year when he did the "harmony" stunt and stepped aside, he was promised a place on the ticket, and told him that he would be "the goods" in 1910. "Jerry" has been reminding the leaders of this and goes further, stating that if they lent him a hand he will run independent.

Should "Jerry" run independently and should George Raymond be on his Democratic end of the scrap, the chances are that the Democrats would win. Says State Chairman Fred MacLeod a few years ago.

IT'S "BRENDA" CONNOLLY.

Author as Proud of Daughter as if He Were Congressman.

James B. Connolly is handling out cigars, but they do not bear any wrappers announcing his candidacy for Congress in the Tenth District. No. Indeed. James is thinking about even more exciting things than an election to Congress.

A baby girl has just arrived at the Connolly home in Dorchester. James says that the little one will be named "Elizabeth," after Mrs. Connolly. Mrs. Connolly's pet name for the baby's name will be "Brenda," the nearest feminine approach to the author-historic-boy-father's middle name, Brendan.

Mrs. Connolly and "Brenda" are "doing nicely."

POLICE STATION SOUGHT.

Peirce Trustees Planning for Municipal Building.

MIDDLEBORO, Aug. 20.—The Peirce trustees are considering the erection of a building for a police station and court room for the town and already some lockups have been considered. The town has never had a proper lockup and during the past year Chief of Police Swift has been compelled to arrest drunks and disorderly characters and temporarily quarter them in the chief or police would have an office with the cells and court room all in the same building. The Peirce trustees do not like the idea of using funds left in their trust for the town to allow for this use, as anyway they see fit to benefit the town.

LEAGUE ISSUES CALL.

Full Ticket to Be Named in the Empire State.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The State Committee of the Independence League party by its executive committee has issued its call for primaries and conventions, throughout the State. The call specifies conventions for the nominations for all officers to be voted for at the coming election, from governorship down to the Assembly and county offices. A member of the state committee, one from each Assembly district is to be elected at the primaries. Also members of county committees in the various counties. The call is signed by John J. Hopper, chairman of the State committee.

CURLEY HURLS BIBLE AT RIVALS IN 10TH

Planned "Kind Words" Campaign, but Now "Humbly" Turns to Scripture.

SCRIPTURE politics will hit "the Tenth" to-morrow.

"The Tenth" is not "the submerged Tenth." Not so you'd notice it. It is the Tenth Congressional District, which is never submerged, not in a political sense at least.

Scripture politics is the next uplift step in the "kind words" campaign promised by "Jim" Curley, candidate for Congress.

Scripture politics is the next uplift step in the "kind words" campaign promised by "Jim" Curley, candidate for Congress. It is scriptural even unto the point of actual text.

Curley is using the Scriptures to put the political high-sign on billboard advertising, with which his candidature have plastered the district from end to end.

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, who desires to continue in office, has put out two "eight-sheeters," boosting O'Connell.

Former Congressman William S. McNary, who quotes Scripture in support of "the man who came back," has put out one for himself. The district is printer's ink and paste on every billboard-stand.

And Curley Saw 'Em.

The McNary posters read:

BE JOCRATS.

Save the Tenth District. For Congress, A BIG MAN FOR A BIG POSITION.

Likewise flashing into view from Dudley to Dorchester are the O'Connell posters. He who runs may read:

RE-ELECT HON. JOSEPH F. O'CONNELL TO CONGRESS.

ABLE—ACTIVE—AGGRESSIVE.

Now "Jim" Curley can run and "Jim" Curley can walk, but he can't run fast enough to take in the wording of these McNary and O'Connell posters. The more he read the less he understood them. His sentiments might be summed up in the short but forcible phrase, "Aw, fudge!"

With this favorable start Curley kept on reflecting and concentrating on himself.

"McNary—A Big Man for a Big Position," said Curley, "how can't that the end of the limit? It isn't good form in our set to brag so.

Then he stood before an O'Connell poster and mused:

"O'Connell—Able, Active, Aggressive—well, not quite half bad words. Aggressive." Lemme see, seems to me that word has been used in responsible chord in my humble bosom.

Whereupon Brother Curley put one hand to his forehead, thought deeply for a space and then gave "two whoops and a holler," as they say in the West, when he thought he had found the answer—put the Scriptures on 'em.

"Mighty Shall Be Humbled."

It is hard to see how Curley could have shown more consistent strategy. He could keep within the "kind words" limit and the Scriptures, of course, cannot be called political phrase. But the Scriptures, properly, have been barred from political campaigns.

From that moment Scripture politics was born. It will appear to-morrow in the form of 1,000 window cards which will be distributed by the print shop of Curley. They contain a portrait of Curley and the following pence and the following matter:

McNARY SAYS:
A Big Man for a Big Position.
Scripture says: "Pride goeth before a fall."

O'CONNELL SAYS:
Able, Active, Aggressive.
Scripture says: "The mighty shall be humbled."

For Congress,
JAMES M. CURLEY.
Scripture says: "The humble shall be exalted."

Says Curley:

"I'm an humble man. Certainly I am. Why, I said in my speech the other day that I would conduct a campaign of kind words. That I am doing better now. I am giving 'em Scripture.

"O'Connell and McNary have spent over $3,500 in billboard advertising in the district. I haven't the money for a costly billboard campaign, but I have plenty of confidence in the intelligence of the district. So I am appealing to the voters by means of the Scriptures.

"I think that my opponents will see the statements of McNary and O'Connell are more appropriate."

Curley's "Humble" Cartoon.

"McNary is a 'big man,' is he? And O'Connell is 'able, active and aggressive'? Well, I'm humble, I am, just humble. But what good is humility? 'The mighty shall be humbled.' They shall be exalted.

"Why, I'm going to win. As I said before, I am humble. But, so far as McNary and O'Connell go, I'll beat the both of 'em.

Mr. Curley also has an "humble" cartoon, which he will distribute. It depicts Mr. Curley in the Sharon street artist and member of the Ward 20 Committee, carrying a knock on O'Connell in the matter of the Congressman's failure to turn out Speaker Connoll. Under the sketch is the following "humble" request:

"Talk it up for Curley for Congress in the Tenth. He needs the people."

To-morrow the startled Tenth will have its first peep at Scripture Politics, as explained by "Yours Humbly, James F. Curley."

EMPLOYES ON AUTO TOUR.

L. Starr & Co Give Second Excursion of the Season.

L. Starr & Co. gave their employes the second automobile ride of the season yesterday, the participants being those who have been taken into the service since the first trip was made. Friends of the firm were also invited to be guests. The start was made to the popular store were closed at 11 a. m. and after a luncheon had been served, big touring cars were taken for a thirty-mile ride through Dorchester, Mattapan, Fenway, Huntington, Commonwealth and Beacon avenues, Brookline and many other historic sections. The automobiles were handsomely decorated.

Louis Starr, head of the firm, was the host of the day, and he was ably aided by the loyable outing by the employes of the store of Washington, 35-41 Winter street.

LAFOLLETTE A FARMHAND.

But Stops Long Enough to Direct His Campaign.

MADISON, WIS., Aug. 20.—Senator LaFollette is directing his campaign for renomination as the Republican candidate for Senator at the primary election September 6, from his farm three miles from here. His campaign managers and stenographers go over to the farm daily and receive his directions. During the time between his political work and his sleeping and reading hours he goes out in the fields and works with the farm hands pitching hay and grain and cultivating growing crops. He is expected to make one or two political addresses just before primary election day.

Lodge Sees Ball Game and Builds Up His Fences

Senator Is Guest of Essex County Newspapermen at Their Annual Outing.

Essex County newspapermen, seventy strong, formed a county press club at Salem Willows yesterday and listened to nice things said of newspapermen, and particularly those of Essex from United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Lieut.-Gov. Frothingham and others prominent in politics in the Commonwealth. Politics generally were tabooed in the spreads of chicken and lobsters served in the pavilion.

"I've only just motored over to talk with the boys, they're my neighbors, you know," Senator Lodge put it. "This is but a political gathering."

While two teams were enjoying a ball game, the senior Senator found time to do a little fence building. Leisurely smoking a cigar and applauding the fine ball good plays made and laughing at the jungles, he found time to chide the county newspapermen of Essex, who were present, upon the poor showing in their district.

"They're handling things a little better down in Bristol," he remarked to County Commissioner Kimball. Then Kimball went off for a conference with County Commissioner Poor. Essex County is believed to be rather strong, especially in the northerly portion for Butler Ames, for Senator. Mingling with the news writers, Senator Lodge had a kindly word for each. At the dinner, both the Senator and Lieut.-Gov. Frothingham had nice things to say of Essex journalists. Other than the Senator, Lieut.-Gov. Frothingham, Asst. U. S. District Attorney E. Mark Sullivan, W. S. Loftin, and County Commissioner Poor and Kimball.

The County Press Club organized with Fred A. Emmons, of Lynn, as President, and John D. Woodbury of Gloucester, Secretary-Treasurer.

PRESENTS HIS RECORD.

Representative O'Brien Seeks Promotion on Past Doings.

Representative William H. O'Brien of South Boston, now a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Senator in that district, has gotten out a circular in which he particularly calls attention to his record in the House, where he served in 1909 and the present year. In it he says:

"I have been the only member of the legislature to ever be calling the yeas and nays of roll calls, and during my three year of service I have simply tried to do that which I believed the great majority of voters would have me do."

His circular states that in 1908 the total number of roll calls was sixty-four and he was present and recorded on sixty-three of the same. In 1909 he was present and recorded on sixty-nine. In 1910 he was present and recorded on sixty-nine. The total was 205 and he was present and recorded on 201.

TYTUS QUITS POLITICS.

Legislator Plans to Give Whole Attention to Street Railroad.

Word came from Tyngsboro, in the Berkshires, yesterday that Representative Robb de Peyster Tytus is to quit politics for the street railway business. Tytus came down to the Legislature two years ago to introduce a bill to let the Boston & New Haven railroad to own and operate a trolley line. The bill was passed by them. He succeeded in having the bill engrossed in the Senate and passed by the House, but Tytus was elected a director of the Rockville Street Railway Company. He is to stick to the railroad business. He plans to build his Rock Dam house and live in Tyngsham the year round.

Cole's Paper Assails Killam.

Former Representative James W. Kilham of Reading, whom Speaker Walker made chairman of the Legislative Committee on Water Supply, is attacked by the Cole's Andover Townsman. Killam is a candidate for renomination. Senator Cole Sangus and is an Ames man. Cole is helping Lodge.

Herbert Parsons Is Forgiven.

Herbert C. Parsons, of Greenfield, who made the Lodge machine defeated for renomination for Senator in 1899 because he refused to support Lodge for re-election, has been taken back into the G. O. P. fold on his promise to be "a good boy." He has been granted the 500 of State committeeman from his district for next year.

City Hall Notes

Ex-Alderman Daniel L. Flanagan, who is the anti-Donovan leader in Ward 9, has been rewarded by the administration. He has been appointed a temporary inspector of reading in the schoolhouse department at $3 per day per year. Gilbert H. Graham has been appointed a building inspector at $1,100 per year.

The City Council will receive an order to-day for the Chairman's approval authorizing the transfer of street commissioners' land, as well as private side an unused gravel pit in Everett, which has been the property of the city since Charlestown was annexed to Boston. In 1903 an order was passed by the City Council authorizing the sale of the pit at public auction, but no one would give its value. Now $1,000, the highest value has been offered, and the city wants to let it go.

The Fore-gilled Scandian Regiment of infantry will be guests of the Fifth Massachusetts on September 3, 4 and 5. This crack corps is known as the Duke of Cornwall's own Rifles of Ontario, and the City Council will be asked to transfer $1,000 from the reserve fund for the purpose of defraying the bills with adequate entertainment.

The Mayor will send to the Council at to-morrow's special meeting an order calling upon the department heads to authorize vacations to Civil War veterans during the annual encampment of the Grand Army. He will also send an order covering the vacations of employes of the city who are members of the State Militia.

According to information furnished the Mayor's office, the appointments of the executive secretaries are illegal, and the new civil service rules which are now drafted by the Assistant Corporation Counsel.

Valuable Advice to Sufferers From Skin Diseases

Under no circumstances should medicated or plain soap or any preparation containing alcohol or water be used by sufferers from eczema and similar skin troubles. Those things aggravate the trouble and make it impossible for the skin to heal. The new medical compound called Cadum is the best and surest remedy, as it contains neither water nor alcohol. When applied, it excludes the air and other irritating agents, stops the itching at once, and sets up the healing process immediately. Most wonderful cures are reported from all sections. Cadum is just as effective in the treatment of psoriasis, ringworm pimples, blotches, rash, eruptions chafings, itching piles, rough, scaly skin, sores, acne, barpe, etc. 10c. and 25c.

VAHEY TELLS WHY HE SHOULD LEAD PARTY

Entitled to Nomination, He Declares, for Lifting Democrats Out of a Rut.

JAMES H. VAHEY, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, in a speech to the Everett Democratic Ward and City Committee at Bass Point yesterday charged the Republican leaders with attempting to promote a struggle in the Democratic ranks and warned his party associates to give their opponents no excuse for telling the public that Democratic dissension is one of their assets.

Mr. Vahey also let his audience know why he believes that he is entitled to the Democratic nomination for Governor.

"Two years ago," he said, "nobody wanted the nomination. I took it. I made a campaign that put the work in building up the party. Now, when we have a chance to win, other people want the nomination. I believe I am entitled to it."

Despite the apparent frenzy of our Republican opponents to grasp at anything to refute the desperate situation in which they find themselves they are bending every effort and exercise every power in an attempt to convince the public of the belief that its greatest asset they have failed in distinguishing in their Democratic ranks.

"Proof of the fact that I have been the standard bearer for the last two years, and have had a kindly reception from the Democratic nomination this year, more since than ever before, is shown at any one else, I may very frankly say that I have given the party more than its share of time, amount of good nature and an abundance of energy. I have had a part in the Commonwealth in retrieving the ground which was lost to the party in the Republican administration. We all will join to-day in the earnest desire to do the duty which is demanded of each of us by the present situation."

STON'S LABOR DAY PARADE BIGGEST EVER HELD

THOUSAND MUSICIANS

l Bands All Engaged and Others Will Have to Come From Out of Town.

IRTY thousand trade unionists to ding stand pledged by individual note in this city to take part in the com- bor Day parade, to be held Monday, mber 5, under the auspices of the Central Labor Union and the Build- Trades Department of the C. L. U. out question, the labor men them- say, it will be the biggest event kind ever held in this State. ched for by Michael A. Murphy, the marshal; Harry P. Jennings, chief and William H. O'Brien, marshal C. L. U. division.

ir bands, with 1,000 musicians, at have been engaged to furnish mu- for the marching trade unionists. The and for musicians is so great this year, that the officers of Musical No. 9 assert that the local supply been exhausted. If additional bands ssired they will have to be brought m outside cities. It is said to be dition unprecedented in the history local trade union movement, this ch the year.

teamsters alone promise to have men in line. Then comes the Iron- building laborers, with a pledge to ack 3,000 strong. At least 1,500 car- ntenders now have given their per- mises to parade, and it is the un- ss say they will be represented by men, and the type of self-made plumbers. The same proportion holds with numerous other organizations the men in charge of the parade are pondingly happy.

ddition to the local unions this year, will be 600 men in the line of pa- from the Brotherhood of Maintenance Way Employes, representing every h of the country. This is made pos- by the international convention of organization being held in Boston. Delegates to that convention will be ined here for business at Central Hall later in the day. Every live Independent of the Central Labor and the Building Trades Department have been invited to parade with the marshal's staff.

Second feature of the popular parade will in the fact that traffic in and out the Broadway street subway will not interfered with in any way. For the time the Labor Day parade has ever held in Boston the traveling public be safeguarded from all disturbance. This was brought about by a change from the route installed and the places of formation, at suggestion of Michael A. Murphy, the marshal.

route is to be followed runs from rner of Arlington and Beacon streets, to the Park square, to Columbus to Dartmouth street, to Dedham, to Tremont, to School, to Boston, to Park square, where it will be ed and dismissed. The formation will Beacon, Marlboro and Newbury and the cross streets from Arlington Dartmouth.

COURT-MARTIAL TRIAL.

Looks Bad for Russian Charged with Selling Secrets.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 20.—Announcement today that Baron von Ungern-Sternberg is to be tried before a military instead of a civil court on a charge of selling Russian military secrets to Austria is believed to bode ominously for the Baron.

The original intention was to have a public trial before a civil court, so that the whole world might know to what extent the Austrian embassy, with which Baron is said to have been in collusion, had abused the hospitality the Czar extends to it. The only reason assigned for the change is that a civil court cannot punish with death, while a court-martial can.

RAIDED DRUG STORE.

Five Loads of Whiskey and Wines Seized by Salem Officers.

SALEM, Aug. 20.—Five wagon loads of whiskey, beer, wines and other goods were seized by the police today in a raid on the drugstore of P. L. M. Gaudette on on Lafayette street. The raid was conducted by City Marshal Harris, assisted by four men. Over 1,000 people saw it.

LIVING COST ALSO BAFFLED PURITANS

In these days, when the country is wrought up over the high cost of living and the settlement of the liquor question, it is interesting to note that in the early days of the Massachusetts colonies it was found necessary to fix the prices of food and to deal with the liquor problem.

While drunkenness was discouraged, smoking and swearing were regarded as a more serious matter than the use of liquor. At one time wine and liquor were used as a medium of exchange, although it is now regarded as inadvisable to pay a man for his work with liquor.

The first row over the high cost of living came when the frugal Puritans had been but fourteen years in America. They dealt with the subject in summary fashion by fixing the prices at which provisions could be sold. In the same year and in the same act they passed the first piece of legislation absolutely prohibiting the use of tobacco in any of its forms.

Tobacco Barred From Homes.

The year previously the Puritans had provided for the issue of liquor licenses by the town officers of Boston, which regarded smoking and swearing as more serious matters than drinking and more before made the law so light that a man could not take tobacco into his house.

Even to-day there are traces in the law of the attempt made in the early days of the country to fix the prices of food, for the old statutes is the bread law which prescribed that loaves of bread shall be of a certain size. The result is that even to-day there is no such thing technically in Massachusetts as a loaf of bread. What the purchaser gets for ten cents is three-quarters of a loaf and for five cents one-quarter of a loaf.

It was not contrary to any constitution in the old days to fix the price at which any commodity should be sold, nor was it would be an infringement of a man's right to do business.

An examination of the colonial statutes reveals all the way through the drastic ways that our forefathers attempted to regulate human affairs by law. Drunkenness was abhorred, of course, but swearing and smoking were regarded as far worse and subject to severe penalties. To desecrate the Sabbath was to stay away from church were very grave matters.

Given First License.

In 1657 an act was passed favoring the use of malt beverages. Under this law one Captain Sedgwick was singularly enough given a monopoly of the right to brewing business of the colony, the object being to encourage the use of home-made liquor. The General Court at first appointed the desirous. The following year cities themselves were given the right of appointment.

These laws were followed by more severe ones. Drinking was forbidden, and drunkenness in drams was prohibited. In a quaint old wording of the court proceedings the buying of land, and prescribed to a certain extent the freedom of women's dress. There was to be nothing along the line of Merry Widow or Charlotte Corday hats. Any suggestions of low necks and elbow sleeves brought down prompt judicial measures. Together with these regulations measures came laws against treating or drinking healths.

Liquor as Monetary Exchange.

At first nobody could give liquor to the Indians. But in 1644 the General Court, "approvinglie that it was not fit to deprive the Indians of any lawful comfort which God allowed to all men by the fruit of wine," ordered that all retailers should be permitted to sell to the Indians "as much as may be fit for their needful use on refreshing."

In the early days of the colony, when there was a scarcity of currency, wines and liquors were frequently used as a monetary exchange. But in 1645 it was ordered that no laborer should be obliged to take liquor grants in payment for his work.

Then taxes on wine were imposed, and the officers of the law were given the right to enter the houses of licensed vendors and search thereof upon which the taxes had been paid. Toward the beginning of the eighteenth century the old Puritanical and patriarchal laws began to be disregarded. The acts against sleeping during and during in taverns, against frequenting drinking houses after 9 o'clock, against excursions and pleasures were no longer considered.

Held Wine as God-Send.

In tracing the laws from the beginning two facts stand out. The first is that the Puritans held wine and beer to be precious gifts from the Creator. Indeed, when the first Pilgrims came over in the Mayflower they brought a quantity of Holland gin with them since there was much difficulty to keep warm without any opportunity to cook on the Mayflower. Secondly, they believed it wise to encourage the use of foreign liquors.

But the restrictive laws of the old colony were aimed not only at drunkenness, but particularly at the suppression of all forms of pleasure, and it was against these only to regulate the prices of liquors, but of food as well, and to tell the citizens how they should wear their clothes.

After the lapse of over 100 years these laws are gone, to be a more rational treatment of the entire question of rum, drinking society. Two aspects of the liquor question engaged the attention of the lawmakers of Massachusetts, and they tried to draw as much money as possible from the liquor traffic and the other to safeguard the manufacture and sale in a manner that would serve to safeguard the health of the people.

THREE NEW FIRE CHIEFS.

Fire Commissioner Carroll Promotes Captains.

Three new district chiefs are created by a general order issued yesterday by Acting Fire Commissioner Francis M. Carroll, to take effect Tuesday. The men promoted district chiefs are:

Captain Maurice Heffernan, of engine 10, Norfolk street, Dorchester; Captain John Madison, of engine 26-30, Hanover street, and Captain John W. Murphy, of engine company 3, Harrison avenue.

Engineer Harry E. Richardson, of engine company 15, Dorchester avenue, South Boston, is named for advancement to lieutenant. He will take an examination to determine his fitness for the position. New captains are created to fill the vacancies, as follows:

The new captains will be Avery H. Howard, of engine 4, Bullfinch street; Michael Boyle, of engine 12, Dudley street, Roxbury, at present detailed as lieutenant, in charge of the new company 15 at Fort Hills, and Daniel J. Shannessey, of chemical 4, Shawmut avenue.

NARRAGANSETT'S CHIEF ARRESTED

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 20. Chief of Police James D. Caswell and William E. Arnold, proprietor of the Narragansett Club, were arrested by Constable John G. Cross to-day on charges growing out of the sensational raid Cross made on the Narragansett Club on August 7.

Chief Caswell is charged with malfeasance of office in not aiding Cross at the raid. Arnold is charged with maintaining a gambling nuisance. Both pleaded not guilty and were held by Justice of the Peace Edgar T. Watts for hearings Monday. Arnold furnished $1,000 bail. Caswell's $300 bail was put up by Mrs. Watts, wife of the justice of the peace who presided at the arraignment.

Constable Cross was arrested by order of Chief Caswell after the raid on a charge of assault on one of the Narragansett Club members at the raid. In court Cross, who is a lawyer as well as constable, showed that the warrant was improperly signed. The case was quashed.

Caswell is a tri-handed police personality. In addition to being police chief, he is also Town Sergeant, which is a distinct office, and the local member of the Massachusetts State Police.

DRY GUESTS EMPTY VINEGAR BOTTLES

BROCKTON, Aug. 20.—Crimson flushes and mantled red cheeks countenanced Charles D. Bassett, a Centre street restaurateur during the past 24 hours. Not that Mr. Bassett is conspicuously bashful. His job of catering to a hungry and not always polite public wore off the edge of his naturally retiring nature years since. It is all because of a jug of sherry wine.

Mr. Bassett went into Boston and at his wholesaler's purchased two jugs, identical in size and shape. In the one there was vinegar for table use; in the other there was sherry wine for sauces and lobsters. The two jugs were placed side by side in the Bassett commissariat. It is customary to empty, wash and refill the vinegar bottles each afternoon. This daily duty falls to the lot of one of the waitresses.

Just before the supper rush in walks a business man and proceeds to order a meal. In due time the order arrived and was served. The patron sampled the vinegar dressing, relished the atmosphere a couple of times, then astonished the other patrons by drinking up the contents. Men at the other tables investigated theirs, and after the preliminary whiff, they, too, were drinking "vinegar."

Berry Picker Gets The Wrong Restelli

Amateur Sleuths Suspect Every Dark-Skinned Stranger as Quincy Slayer.

BANGOR, Me., Aug. 20.—Any dark-skinned stranger is liable to be arrested as a Restelli suspect, now that the corn skirls sleuths are out for reputation and reward and was recaptured after great effort by a posse of citizens and militia. He died a few days after he was taken back to the hospital.

A dozen cases, the worst ones, were treated in Framingham and Natick hospitals. The other cases were what was known in the old days as "walking typhoid," or mild attacks, not unlike malaria. One severe case was that of a Lynn man who contracted his illness in Lynn, in the opinion of Wayland physicians. The epidemic was stamped out by the energetic work of Dr. Thomas F. Bryant, assisted by seven other physicians.

Hotel Training School.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 20.—Plans for a school where bellboys, bartenders, chefs, cooks, commercials, waiters and others employed around a hotel may receive preliminary training will be discussed at the annual convention of the International Hotel Stewards' Association, which is to open here Tuesday.

CHECK TYPHOID IN COCHITUATE

WAYLAND, Aug. 20.—An epidemic of typhoid in Cochituate, which ran to a total of sixty-five cases with one death, is now believed to be checked. Three people are still on the typhoid list. The fatal case was that of James Morrissey, who escaped from Framingham Hospital and was recaptured after great effort by a posse of citizens and militia. He died a few days after he was taken back to the hospital.

MYSTERIES OF STOCK MARKET EXPLAINED TO INVESTORS BY WOMAN

In presenting this series of articles by Miss Watkins to its readers, the Sunday American believes it is not only offering excellent business advice to women from a woman, who surely has learned by experience, but men as well may read and profit by what Miss Watkins has to say. The first article of the series was published last Sunday, and dealt with "Financial Board on Tumbler Security." This week "Railroad and Industrial Stocks" are treated.

By FLORENCE E. WATKINS.

Written Specially for the Sunday American.

PART one of this article dealt with bonds which constitute a class of investments based upon tangible security. Now we will consider a number of other investments of a different class although in no way opposed as good investments as bonds. The first to be mentioned, in this article, therefore, we will take up the stocks of railroads and industrial concerns in the light of an investment for your money.

What are stocks? I can best explain what stocks are by saying that if you purchase a certain amount of the capital stock of a company you become a part owner, to the extent of your holdings, in that company. For instance, you had purchased, say, a half interest in a corner grocery. That is, you were "silent partner" to the amount mentioned. In

INSURGENT FORCES TAKE GRANADA IN NICARAGUAN BATTLE

Next to Managua This Was the Principal City Held by the Madriz Government.

RUMOR OF ABDICATION

President de Facto May Quit In Favor of Estrada, Which Would End Strife.

BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, Aug. 20.—The insurgent army, under General Mena, has captured the city of Granada, on the Pacific coast, according to official reports received today. Granada next to Managua is the most important place held by the Madriz Government.

Particulars of the fighting have not been received. It is said that [illegible] insurgent forces were helped by revolutionary sympathizers in the city.

Before the news of Granada's capture was received a statement reached here that Madriz had determined to surrender the Presidency to Senor Estrada of Managua, a brother of the revolutionary leader, who has taken no part in the revolution. This would mean the end of the war.

Madriz Wants to Quit.

The United States Government has specific reasons for not intervening in Nicaragua to a greater extent than it has done. The State Department knows that Madriz is anxious that the United States send armed forces to Nicaragua and put him off his throne.

Zelaya was not thrust out of his chair by American bayonets because it was thought that such an act might have aroused the sentiment of the mobs of other Latin republic for "the under dog." Dr. Madriz, who is a Zelayist, is playing the same game, but with the knowledge of Mr. Taft and the State Department.

It is not controverted by the State Department or even by Latin diplomats here that Madriz ought to be ushered at once. It is the unknown quantity of consequences as affecting the friendly relations of the United States with the ignorant people of Central and South America that causes the department to pause.

A Curb on Madriz.

But the fact is undeniable that the Nicaraguan government is now limited in its operations to the wishes of the United States. It cannot declare a blockade. It cannot put to death an American citizen who is caught with the insurgent army. It cannot make any appeal officially to the United States. It cannot levy taxes and enforce them in the whole of the western part of Nicaragua. What the United States in its "policy" is permitting Madriz to do can be summed up this way:

It is allowing him to pile up the claims for indemnity which the United States must some day demand and obtain forcibly if necessary out of the customs receipts of Nicaragua; it is allowing the contending factions to exterminate each other after the American Latin fashion which has seldom been prohibited. It is allowing the Nicaraguans to be taught that no ruler will be allowed to communicate with the United States who does not subscribe to a free ballot and a fair count.

MOISSANT UNLUCKY.

High Wind and Motor Trouble Delay London Flight.

LONLON, Aug. 20. John B. Moissant this evening postponed his flight until Monday because of the high wind.

The Chicago aviator started from Bainham at 6.15 a. m. to complete his trip from Paris to London. After covering three miles, he was forced to descend by a faulty inlet to a valve. Later trials had no better results.

The bad luck that has followed Moissant since his sensational passage of the channel with Albert Ffleni, his mechanic, has aroused in his behalf the sympathy of the entire English sporting world.

BROOKLINE OVER 30,000.

Assessed Valuation $104,586,100, or $3,486 Per Capita.

Brookline's assessed valuation is $104,586,100 and her population is over 30,000, according to a statement just issued by the town officials. This is an average valuation of about $3,486 for each person in the town. Brookline is called the second richest community in the land, in proportion to its population. The tax rate is $10.50.

In 1890 the population was 12,000, the valuation $46,537,000 and the tax [illegible].

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—The battleship North Dakota came in to-night from trials with her battery of ten twelve-inch guns which, were fired at one time [illegible] heaviest warship battery ever fired [illegible] in the world.

The report says there were no accidents and no damage to material from the gun fire except of minor nature, such as can be easily repaired on board the newest dreadnaught of the United States navy, commanded by Captain Albert Gleaves.

The board of inspection which watched the gun fire was highly pleased with the practice. Officers and men of the North Dakota were also highly elated to-night over their gun work.

The weather was rainy during the gun fire, but the horizon was fairly clear enabling those aboard to see the spouts of ten twelve-inch shells eight miles away from the ship.

HIGHEST AIRSHIP RECORD.

Kew Observatory Officially Gives J. Armstrong Drexel Credit.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The stamp of official approval was placed today upon [illegible] world's aerial record of any kind [illegible] when the present [illegible] himself and William T. Faunce of the Baptist Church. Mr. Faunce is the wealthy Boston shoe dealer whose home is in this town.

Mr. Faunce not only says baseball is "a most inquitous game," but also adds that Mr. Tuthill is "blasphemous" in umpiring baseball games and in working baseball metaphors into his sermons.

There Mr. T. Tuthill must feel called upon to defend his Congregational orthodoxy from Mr. Faunce's Baptist aspersions.

The town, which is agitated from the Marion line to Fairhaven over the baseball question, is hardly able to make up its mind whether to listen to Mr. Tutuhill's sermon to-morrow or to go over to the Baptist Church and hear what Mr. Faunce may have to remark from the pew.

The Reverend C. Julian Tuthill is the son of all-the-year-around pastor in the town of Fairhaven, where he has been for five years. Concerning his pet sport he says: "Baseball is clean manly sport; umpiring is a labor of love for me. The boys know I'm fair. The game develops a manly spirit and teaches team work. It disciplines a boy to follow definite rules of living. I understand that Mr. Faunce of the Baptist Church says that baseball is wicked and that it induces profanity, among other things. In the five years I have been umpiring games for the Mattapoisett boys, I have heard only three swear words. The boys know that it is offensive to me. So they are extra care ful."

A few weeks ago Mr. Faunce of the Baptist Church objected to a proposed church picnic at Fort Phoenix park, Fair haven, because there might be outsiders who would wish to play ball and other games. The following Sunday Mr. Faunce rose in his pew and aired his views on baseball in relation to professed Christianity.

The fact that William T. Faunce rose from his seat to speak causes no surprise in Mattapoisett, for Mr. Faunce does that when he sees fit. He is the practical support of the Baptist Church. As he admits, "I pay the bills."

The townspeople say he runs the church.

On this baseball issue Mr Faunce said from the pew:

"There's Brother Tuthil of the Congregational Church. He's a good man, but he isn't a Christian. He umpired a game of baseball the other day and no man can be a Christian and have anything to do with baseball—either watch it, play it or umpire it."

Two Sundays later Mr. Tuthill, who has heard, of course, of Mr Faunce's attack on him, delivered his famous "Baseball in Heaven" sermon, which was reported from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate. He said in part:

"God must be conceived as having some pleasure beside that of conversion, as joyful as that must be unto Him. We cannot say there are no games in heaven. The next world is an evolution of this. Even the principles of baseball are ordained by God. Has He not made this world on which we live in the form of a ball."

Mr. Tuthill deplores the controversy:

"I mean no contest with Mr Faunce," he says, "in speaking of baseball in Heaven I was not entering into any discussion. I was merely stating general principles. It was not an answer to Mr. Faunce but was merely along the line of preaching. I agree with Mr. Faunce that people ought to prepare for the other life. But where Mr Faunce and I part company is that I believe young men can practice Christianity on the baseball field."

POPE SENDS BLESSING.

Papal Delegate Leaves Rome To-day For Canadian Congress.

ROME, Aug. 20.—The Pope received today in farewell audience Cardinal Vincenz Vannutelli, who leaves to-morrow for Canada, to attend the eucharistic congress at Montreal as the papal delegate The pontif authorized Cardinal Vannutelli to impart the apostolic benediction to the members of the congress.

MATTAPOISETT IS ALL FUSSED UP OVER BASEBALL PARSON

MINISTER UMPIRES GAMES

Rich Layman Says Baseball Is Wicked, You Know, and There's a Pretty Row.

MATTAPOISETT, Aug. 20.—Question—Is the Rev. C. Julian Tuthill's sermon to-morrow going to make Mattapoisett depart any farther from the real meaning of its name, which is "Place of Rest"?

To-morrow Mr. Tuthil, pastor of the Congregational Church and author of the famous "baseball" sermon which scored a home run on the publicity diamond, is to preach on "Moving Heaven Attractive." He declares that he will not touch upon baseball [illegible] present [illegible]

VOLUNTEER UMPIRE CHASED A QUARTER MILE BY CROWD

CHANGED HIS DECISION

When Last Seen He Was Fleeing to Rockland, Whence He Came.

A VOLUNTEER umpired [illegible] of the game between Q[illegible] land of the Old Co[illegible] Quincy yesterday. At the [illegible] ing in the fifth inning [illegible] of police who ran a quarter [illegible] him to the station house. While about a thousand indignant spectators massed in front of the station house and demanded that the umpire be lynched, the humane police opened a cellar door at the back and the volunteer umpire was [illegible] to a [illegible] ed for Rockland. He is said to have been disguised in a policeman's helmet and coat but the police deny this.

The game between Rockland and Quincy yesterday was for blood. The Old Colony League is a professional organization, but its games are played only on Saturdays and Sundays.

When the two teams arrived at the Quincy grounds they discovered that the regular umpire was not [illegible]

"Who will umpire the game for us?" asked Manager Mike Shea of Quincy.

"I," spoke up Frank O'Donnell of Rockland, who was in the bleachers, "I will umpire the game for you."

Double Umpire System.

The crowd cheered the heroic young man as he leaped lightly to the ground. He was known as a died-to-the-wool fan, and Quincy made no objection to his umpiring, but insisted that a Quincy man be selected as the other umpire.

Joe P. Nunan, sporting editor of the Quincy Telegram, finally consented to be the other umpire. They were told that they would divide seven dollars between them.

When the first of the seventh arrived O'Donnell, who had been in the field, came in and presented a Silk O'Laughlin attitude behind the bat, while Nunan went behind the pitcher.

Rockland was at the bat and Hart was first man up. Pitcher Ford sent over four bad balls and Hart walked. "Pop" Maher stepped to the plate with orders to sacrifice. Everything was peaceful and quiet, and nobody dreamed there would be a cataclysm in a minute. "Pop" bunted. The ball dribbled along the foul line.

"Foul," called the umpire loudly enough to be heard in the bleachers. Maher reached first and Hart was on second. Maher looked around then towards the umpire.

"Do I come back?" he asked.

"Oh, never mind, stay there," called O'Donnell.

Then Came the Deluge.

There was a moment of breathless amazement, then a howl like a war party of cannibals from the bleachers.

"What's the matter with you, you bolered foul," shouted Umpire Sporting-Editor Nunan.

"I did not. I said fair," cried O'Donnell. Eighteen players made a rush for the offender, Rockland to protect him and Quincy to annihilate him. Bats were brandished and fists shaken. In the meantime the mob in the bleachers who were all rooting for Quincy started for the Rockland umpire.

"Kill him!" Murder him!" "The chief!" "What does he think he's up against!" they shouted.

There was a squad of police on the grounds, and the bleachers reached O'Donnell before the game from the bleachers.

"Run, you fool, follow," said the leading cop, grabbing him by the arm, and with one on either side and the rest behind they went over the ground, while the mob pursued to the station.

When the police told the crowd that the volunteer was gone they struggled back to the playing field. After almost half an hour the game was resumed, with Nunan acting as umpire and Rockland won, four to two.

BIG VACATION RUSH.

Both Steamships and Railroads Crowded with Passengers.

At noon yesterday seventy-five names were on the waiting list of the Bangor division of the Eastern Steamship Company, with not another stateroom available. This gives an idea of the rush of vacation travel. The same applied to railroad travel. They, too, big crowds all day at both terminal stations. The Portland and Bar Harbor express and the Southern division express, both leaving at 1 p. m., run in two sections, as did the White Mountain express at 1.40. The Boston & Albany put on a few double-section trains and the New York, New Haven & Hartford had to add extra cars. Travel out of the city was heavy, especially after noon time.

Magnolia Horse Show Attracts Gala Throng

Miss Eleonora Sears [illegible] Miss Katherine Tweed (on horseback), who rode yesterday at Magnolia. Photographed by F. W. Sears of the Boston American staff.

Miss Eleonora Sears Comes Up From Newport and Rides at Brilliant North Shore Society Event.

Of all the gala events along the North Shore during the season none is quite so gay and exciting as the annual horse show at Crescent Beach, Magnolia, and the one held there yesterday was no exception. Society from all the fashionable resorts was out in force, and the various events were reviewed from beautifully appointed yachts anchored in the bay, gay with flags and pennants; motor cars and carriages lined along the shore as well as comfortable boxes in the grand stand.

Most of the grand stand seats were reserved early, however, as the younger fashionable set hung over the rails to watch more closely the entries of their friends or sat about in the sand on the beach. To be sure, many of the smartest of the younger set were either riding or driving their entries, but the majority found pleasure in being "mere onlookers."

Miss Sears Rides.

It was a delightful surprise to all when Miss Eleonora Sears appeared in the ring for a North Shore horse show without Miss Sears is, as one pretty Miss remarked," like a sandwich without the filling."

Miss Sears has been in Newport and came up especially for the show to-day, and returns there either to-night or to-morrow morning.

The day was the very finest that could have been wished for and morning and noon blossomed out in their prettiest frocks and handsomest hats.

The first event was the children's and the class, which was divided, the two blues being won by R. H. Moorhead and James Hetzer. The second was the run about horse, in which Mrs. J. E. Weil drove "Tee Sir" and took first and in which Miss Sears, driving Mr Fessenden's "Lily Love" took second.

Miss Sears was attired in a dara gray habit and black derby, and Mrs. Weil was also in dark gray. Miss Alice Thorndike, who drove Miss Susan Thayer's horse "Pinto" and took third, wore a dark gray suit and black sailor. She and Miss Sears, though they so often compete for honors in the ring, are the best of chums and were constantly together yesterday.

Thoroughbred Saddles.

In the thoroughbred saddle class the society girls entered were Miss Lesie Bradley, who rode "Orlole," and was voted one of the most graceful of the women riders. Her habit was of black, and she wore a trig black sailor. Miss Mary Curtis, who had several entries, was also in this class, having entered two horses, "Typhoon" and "Mesmuite." She, too, wore a black habit and sailor hat. Miss Ottilia Thorndike attracted no end of admiring attention for the grace with which she managed her frisky mount, "Bay Dimple," and though not among the prize [illegible] winners, she should certainly have won a medal for her poise and graceful unruffled bearing, even at moments when it seemed inevitable that she would be thrown.

Miss Katherine Tweed, in a gray habit and black sailor, rode her bay mare, "Turkey," and took third.

The ladies' driving competition through obstacles was the real event of interest and held the attention of the throngs as nothing else on the program succeeded in doing. Miss Mary Curtis took the blue in this and Miss Sears the red.

Rosamond Fish a Spectator

Among the most interesting young people among the on-lookers were Miss Rosamond Fish and her fiance, Mr. Cutler of Brookline whose wedding is to take place in the early Autumn. Miss Fish, who is a strikingly handsome girl, wore a white serge suit and large black felt hat. They were greeted on all sides and Miss Fish was quite the centre of attraction among the younger fashionables who were eager to meet and greet her. Miss Margaret Roosevelt, a cousin of former President Roosevelt, who is at present the guest of Miss Katherine Tweed at her North Shore home was another interesting figure. She wore a gray suit and large panama hat.

Baroness Rogen, with Baroness Elizabeth, watched the races from their well filled box and were among the most enthusiastic of the spectators. They were both in white linen with large flower trimmed hats

Miss Elizabeth Coolidge was in white serge with large white hat and Miss Rosamond Bradley was in white with turban of lavender straw. The pretty Ross twins were dressed alike in dark blue serge suits and blue straw mushroom turbans. Mrs. Ross, who came with them, was in blue with a black hat trimmed with plumes.

Mrs. Britton in Black.

Roger Hill entertained a lively party, including the two interesting sisters, Maud and Gladys Scudder of St Louis, who are spending the Summer on the North Shore. Mrs. William Bagnell was in white linen and her daughter Effie was in white serge with a large red hat. William Culbertson, who is engaged to Miss Effie Bagnell, was also in the party

Mrs. Fraguit I. Amory had a party of young people under her wing, all friends of her pretty daughter, Mary Josephine. Mrs. Amory was in white linen and Miss Amory wore pale pink with large picture hat of pink chiffon.

Mrs. R. Huntington Wolcott wore a light tan suit and black hat, and Mrs. Samuel J. Mixter was also in tan.

John Phillip Sousa and his two pretty daughters, Jane and Priscilla, were among those occupying boxes. Both girls were in white and wore large white flower trimmed [illegible]

NEW DEMOCRACY AMERICA'S HOPE, SAYS JUSTICE GERARD

Possible Candidate for New York Governorship Declares There Must Be Reform; That "Old Dead Wood Must Go"

Progressive Party, He Believes, Will Succeed Because it Will Draw Best Elements in Both of the Political Organizations

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Justice James W. Gerard of New York city, who is spending his vacation abroad, to-day gave to an American correspondent his ideas on current political issues.

Justice Gerard is a young man—a possible candidate for Governor of New York this Fall, who is regarded by many as the best candidate to harmonize the many contending factions—and his views present a definite program for a new progressive, united Democracy. He believes the old war horses and schemes will not do, and must go.

"There is no cure-all for the existing political evils in the United States," said Justice Gerard. "No one slogan covers it all. The only way, in my judgment, to correct the outstanding abuses will be to devote ourselves rigidly to an all-round improvement in the present conditions of government by electing men who will make the changes the people want.

His Views on a Third Party.

"What about a third party? Third parties are not easily created, even by such extraordinary conditions as now exist. In fact, such tremendous uprisings as the greenback and the silver movements in politics failed to crystallize into third parties. In the case of Gladstone's disruption of the Liberal party in England, when he indorsed Irish home rule, it was freely predicted that a new party would be formed, and yet after several generations the two parties are the only ones in England, as they are in America.

"But the hope of America lies with a new Democracy. Progressive Democracy will succeed because it will draw the best elements of both parties to the support of the right candidates. People who say we are praying for votes of the insurgents and the independents of the Republican party may think they are bitingly sarcastic, but as a matter of fact that is exactly what we are doing.

"You cannot reform the Democratic party from within unless you draw into it new men of clean minds, high ideals and steady purposes. They will outweigh the dead wood, the criminally inert and the vicious. It is in this manner that all great reforms are made, and we purpose to follow it.

Curse in Living Cost.

"That there must be reform goes without saying. The conditions of life in the United States to-day are as pathetic as they are impossible. Things cannot go on at the present rate, for the cost of living has grown to such a point that misery is spreading.

"Every day the Republicans complain bitterly that they are held responsible for these conditions. It is a little late for them to protest, considering that they have been fattening on the injustices which they have nourished ever since they have been in power.

"These complaints are not imaginary. They are tangible and tragic enough without any oratory to assist this effect. Wages are where they were ten years ago, and the cost of rent and living are practically double. People complain that in talks about the cost of living the discussion is too academic and technical and not practical.

"The people are bound to have relief, and they know better than to look for any relief from the party that has piled up their burdens to such a height that they can hardly bear them. They have turned away from the Republicans and are looking to the Democratic party for help. People are beginning to think for themselves. This is a grand sign, and it means hope for progressive Democracy.

"Mr. Hearst has done many things in his vigorous campaign for honesty, but none more important than the lesson that he has taught the people to think for themselves. The result of this independent thought is a more and more determined resolve on the part of voters to put men in office who will carry out the reforms in every walk of politics with determination and fidelity.

"We must have good men to make Democracy progressive—young men who are

HIGHEST AIRSHIP RECORD.

Kew Observatory Officially Gives J. Armstrong Drexel Credit.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The stamp of official approval was placed today upon [illegible] world's aerial record of any kind [illegible] when the present [illegible] himself and William T. Faunce of the Baptist Church. Mr. Faunce is the wealthy Boston shoe dealer whose home is in this town.

Mr. Faunce not only says baseball is "a most inquitous game," but also adds that Mr. Tuthill is "blasphemous" in umpiring baseball games and in working baseball metaphors into his sermons.

There Mr. T. Tuthill must feel called upon to defend his Congregational orthodoxy from Mr. Faunce's Baptist aspersions.

The town, which is agitated from the Marion line to Fairhaven over the baseball question, is hardly able to make up its mind whether to listen to Mr. Tutuhill's sermon to-morrow or to go over to the Baptist Church and hear what Mr. Faunce may have to remark from the pew.

The Reverend C. Julian Tuthill is the son of all-the-year-around pastor in the town of Fairhaven, where he has been for five years. Concerning his pet sport he says: "Baseball is clean manly sport; umpiring is a labor of love for me. The boys know I'm fair. The game develops a manly spirit and teaches team work. It disciplines a boy to follow definite rules of living. I understand that Mr. Faunce of the Baptist Church says that baseball is wicked and that it induces profanity, among other things. In the five years I have been umpiring games for the Mattapoisett boys, I have heard only three swear words. The boys know that it is offensive to me. So they are extra care ful."

A few weeks ago Mr. Faunce of the Baptist Church objected to a proposed church picnic at Fort Phoenix park, Fair haven, because there might be outsiders who would wish to play ball and other games. The following Sunday Mr. Faunce rose in his pew and aired his views on baseball in relation to professed Christianity.

The fact that William T. Faunce rose from his seat to speak causes no surprise in Mattapoisett, for Mr. Faunce does that when he sees fit. He is the practical support of the Baptist Church. As he admits, "I pay the bills."

The townspeople say he runs the church.

On this baseball issue Mr Faunce said from the pew:

"There's Brother Tuthil of the Congregational Church. He's a good man, but he isn't a Christian. He umpired a game of baseball the other day and no man can be a Christian and have anything to do with baseball—either watch it, play it or umpire it."

Two Sundays later Mr. Tuthill, who has heard, of course, of Mr Faunce's attack on him, delivered his famous "Baseball in Heaven" sermon, which was reported from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate. He said in part:

"God must be conceived as having some pleasure beside that of conversion, as joyful as that must be unto Him. We cannot say there are no games in heaven. The next world is an evolution of this. Even the principles of baseball are ordained by God. Has He not made this world on which we live in the form of a ball."

Mr. Tuthill deplores the controversy:

"I mean no contest with Mr Faunce," he says, "in speaking of baseball in Heaven I was not entering into any discussion. I was merely stating general principles. It was not an answer to Mr. Faunce but was merely along the line of preaching. I agree with Mr. Faunce that people ought to prepare for the other life. But where Mr Faunce and I part company is that I believe young men can practice Christianity on the baseball field."

POPE SENDS BLESSING.

Papal Delegate Leaves Rome To-day For Canadian Congress.

ROME, Aug. 20.—The Pope received today in farewell audience Cardinal Vincenz Vannutelli, who leaves to-morrow for Canada, to attend the eucharistic congress at Montreal as the papal delegate The pontif authorized Cardinal Vannutelli to impart the apostolic benediction to the members of the congress.

BOOKER WASHINGTON SAILS

Negro Educator to Study Conditions in Europe.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Booker T Washington sailed to-day for Europe on the Carmania to study the problem of the "man farthest down." Most of his time will be spent in London and Berlin, drawing comparisons between the lowest type of labor in those cities and the American negro. He will also devote some time to Southern Italy, observing the agricultural methods of the part of Europe that sends the greatest number of immigrants to the United States for labor in the lower grades of work.

KENNEDY FOR CARDINAL.

Rector of American College to Be Elevated, Report Says.

ROME, Aug. 20.—It is reported in ecclesiastical circles that an American cardinal is to be appointed at the next consistory. According to the dispatch Mgr. Thomas F. Kennedy rector of the American College here is to be elevated, becoming a cardinal in Curia, that is, resident in Rome. Mgr. Kennedy, who was born at Conshohocken, Pa., in 1857, was educated at St. Charles Seminary, near Philadelphia. He came to Rome to study in 1881 and returned a few years later to join the faculty of the archdiocesan seminary at Philadelphia. In 1895, when he was a professor in the Philadelphia St. Charles Seminary, the Pope called him to Rome to become head of the American College.

HEN AS "RATTER."

Rhode Island Red Kids Farm of Rodents.

WEST PARIS, Me., Aug. 20.—W. R. Brooks's farm is kept free from rats and mice. Brooks has no cat. His ratter is a six-pound hen, a Rhode Island Red. "Used to have barrels of rats and mice," says Brooks. "Couldn't get rid of 'em. One day I heard a racket in the hen-yard. This Rhode Island Red was fighting a big rat. The hen won in a walk. She pecked the rat to death. I looked around and found the bodies of other rats she had killed. Her marks were all over them. I give the hen the range of the farm after that. She killed off all the rats. I have to dispose of the bodies. She stops short of eating them."

SET LEBLANC DATE.

Justice Aiken to Decide Trial of Trial This Week.

Chief Justice Aiken will this week set the date for the trial of Hattie Le Blanc, charged with the murder of Clarence F. Hilyer, the Waltham laundryman. At a conference held between District Attorney Higgins and Attorney Melvin Johnson no agreement as to the date could be fixed and it was decided to lay the matter before Chief Justice Aiken. District Attorney Higgins has spoken to start the trial on September 19, while Attorney Johnson does not wish his client to be arraigned until October 3.

AUTO THEFT CHARGED.

HAVERHILL, Aug. 20.—Henry C. Nickerson of Brockton, who is in the auto business in Boston, was in the District Court to-day to answer to a charge of larceny of $75 from Mrs. Henry W. Ford of this city, and after Judge Fuller continued the case for two weeks, to determine whether or not he had jurisdiction, Nickerson was rearrested by Inspector Shea of the Fall River department, on warrants charging him with the larceny of a $600 automobile and $250 in cash.

Cat Finds Missing Baby Girl After a Four-Mile Trail

"Tom" Locates Lost Child, Returns Home and Escorts Parent to Where It Is.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., Aug. 20.—Isaac Edwards of Detroit has a big black cat named Daniel, which must have been a present to some previous tenant, as Edwards, unlike Daniel, is a stranger to these parts.

Daniel is the favorite cat of Edwards' baby, a fair-haired lass, and the two are inseparable companions.

Monday afternoon the baby managed to stray away to Nathaniel Jones's farmhouse, four miles down the turnpike. Jones found her in the road. Marie pointed up the road, but Jones didn't find any immediate neighbor who knew her. As it was getting dark Jones took Marie in the house, where the child began to sleep. Half an hour later Jones heard a frantic scratching at his door. When he opened the door a big black cat dashed in, rushed over to the baby, stroked her face, sniffed around and ran to the road. Later the cat reappeared in front of Isaac Edwards' house. Daniel was missed. Isaac got a flashlight, pointed ground around the house, caught sight of the cat down the road and back again till Edwards' house. Daniel then led Isaac straight down the line to the Jones place. There Edwards learned the other end of the strange story.

Now Daniel is the feline wonder of Fairfield and can have anything he wishes on the Edwards farm.

President Martin of the Exchange Says Mortgage Money Is Easy Now.

President John J. Martin of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange is very hopeful about the Fall trading in the real estate market.

"Never in the last seven years," he says, has mortgage money been easier to get than it is today. Home and mortgage money is plentier than it ever was before. Indeed, I believe there is a healthier tone to the whole business than there has been for a long time. There is a feeling of confidence in the air that is very encouraging to my great business. ANALYSIS OF RUBBER INDUSTRY BAFFLING

Controversy About Supply Being Great Enough to Meet Demand.

To judge of the actual position of the rubber industry one must go deeper than the mere statistics of the visible supply. Although the latest monthly statement of the Rubber Association of America shows a decrease of 1,000 tons in the visible supply during July, as compared with the same month last year, this is not a matter of much consequence, as the greater portion of the rubber coming from the Amazon region is in transit during the summer months, and the decrease in the visible supply is only a matter of seasonal importance.

The man who is investing, or who has been investing, in rubber shares is chiefly interested about the future of the industry as a whole, and as regards the future of the rubber trade, London, but what he wants to know is the probable output for the next few years, its probable cost, and the probable demand for it during that period. The consideration of these questions is not encouraging to the investor who is looking for a quick profit, and who is not prepared to wait and watch developments for a year or two. But on the basis of something like a long view the prospects of the rubber industry are by no means unfavorable. In many recent prospectuses of the companies which have been published this point has been emphasized, and it is probably true that the next few years has been the most critical in the history of the rubber trade.

Whether rubber is to fall a straight away to the cost of production, which is variously estimated at from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per lb., or whether it would certainly be possible to keep it at a price of 3s. per lb. or more, is no less a matter than would be a general agreement among the leading producers of rubber. No doubt it would be to the interest of the producers to keep the price of rubber up to 3s. per lb., or even higher, but in these cases there is a tendency for the consumer to look on the duller side.

The demand from this country and its supply of rubber are subject to different conditions, but speaking generally, while the demand for plantation rubber may increase, there is no reason why the demand for wild rubber should not also increase, and for a long time to come. Here in Canada future purchases of motor cars will be governed largely by the size of the wheat crop of the harvest. The price of rubber in London, Dr. Dan Morgan points out, can be made by the planters themselves and by the various manufacturing which rest upon them for their raw material, and pretty much as they choose. Into the habit of treating rubber upon a par with staple articles, to be moved in accordance with the requirements of the material got rid of more than naturally it has been in the past.

[illegible] is not certain that the [illegible] will be [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] the [illegible] and to work out their own salvation on the basis of something like a fixed price for raw material. Although in many recent prospectus of the companies it has been pointed this point,

PEESIDENT TAFT REPLIES TO ADDRESS BY BOYS

My Boys—I am very glad to see you. I did not exactly know what a Boy Scout was until you defined it. And you have set, as men and as boys, an ideal character that it is pretty hard to live up to. I hope you realize that, and realize that it is only continued effort that will enable you to keep up to the standard you have thus created.

The reason I say this, I suppose, suggests that you enjoy the open air, that you go into the forest when you get a chance; but that it is only a basis for association, for training, for drilling, and for that sort of public opinion among yourselves that keeps you up to the standard you all recognize and all are sworn to maintain. I sincerely hope you are growing up to be men, because these ideals suit you become men. The best in father or the best and as you are a boy, as you will become a man.

I understand you were residents of Beverly and were going to felicitate you upon living in such a beautiful place but as you live in Boston, however, I felicitate you upon living in a city with such historic associations, and as many men who have lived in Boston and made it famous, whose example you can follow, and if you make as good men as they were, you will have justified your being American Boy Scouts.

TAFT RELUCTANT TO BID AMERICAN SCOUTS GOOD-BYE

As the President made his address his words were carefully taken down by the official White House stenographer several times the President seemed to conclude, but looking once more at the line of clean-

I am glad to see you and hope that you will be successful and prosperous, and you cannot be successful and prosperous or anything else worth while, unless you maintain character.

BRILLIANT TENNIS ATTRACTS THRONGS TO NEWPORT GAMES

Tournament Now at a Climax One of the Greatest Ever Known---Former Champion Henry W. Slocum Reviews the Game for the Sunday American---Advent of Westerners and Youth Influences the Play

THE past week has seen one of the most brilliant national championship lawn tennis tournaments that Newport ever knew. On account of the widespread interest in the Newport classic the Boston Sunday American has asked Henry W. Slocum, himself a national lawn tennis champion, to write a review of the Newport tournament and an analysis of the tennis situation at present. Mr. Slocum's article follows:

By HENRY W. SLOCUM.

Former American singles and all-comers' champion and former doubles' champion with H. C. Taylor.

JUDGED from the standpoint of widespread interest in the game, tennis is at the height of its popularity this season. Rarely indeed in any season has the sport aroused the interest that exists at the present time. This is true of Newport; it is true of Longwood, of the East and West. Everywhere tennis has shown its power to interest the public.

Probably one of the more striking features of the current season has been the large number of young men and, in cases, boys, who have appeared on the courts—capable players, to be reckoned with in the future of the game.

These younger players, to speak in a general way, have performed marvelously well. In some instances their work has been astonishing, giving promise of a greater development in seasons to come. A number of these could be mentioned by name whose work has merited the sincere praise of older hands at the game.

WESTERN PLAYERS INFLUENCE THE SPORT

It cannot be said that the present season has been remarkable, or even out of the ordinary, in the line of new or original plays on the part of contestants who have appeared in the field this far, so far as I have been able to observe. The season is better than in some years, or the season before last. Practically no new lines of play have been developed. The game has not been enriched by striking newness.

If we consider the past two years together one fact will loom up as a bright feature. This is the arrival of the young Californian players. Their appearance was noteworthy, for the players have left their impress on the game. And there are striking qualities about their methods which have attracted the favorable notice of experts and the public.

To repeat, the Californians have visibly influenced the present style of play. About the bold lowness of their methods, there is a fresh difference of opinion. Some think that the young Californian players have lacked variety in attention to the serving side of the game. They have appeared to rely more on the element of progress at top speed, strokes.

Lately, they have not thought enough of improving their ground work, while they were improving themselves in serving. Perhaps this has been natural, for serve counts. This is my opinion, in the correct sense of the word. Serve counts in a manner that needs correction, if those players are to show their best talent in the next few years.

McLoughlin a Brilliant and Strenuous.

McLoughlin is a brilliant young player of the type of the other Californians, his emphasis has been on strenuous work. A change for him would be beneficial. McLoughlin is assuredly a most promising player. In him is a world of ability.

Of all the players who have appeared in this year's National tourney, Mathey, of Princeton, is the one who has shown the greatest improvement. His game represents unusual progress, and one thing that has attracted much attention to him this season.

Inman is another player deserving of consideration on the score of improvement possibly next after Mathey. For one reason he is one who has shown marked development in skill and style. Like Mathey he has gained confidence and poise and is one of the number who will be heard from.

In like manner both young Whitney and Pell, who competed in the tandem doubles at Newport, demonstrated their prowess at the game. Both are expert tennis players of young players.

The race one of the most favorable periods and that of the writer of the third. This was Wrenn in '08, but in two or three years he is liable to develop to a good player. It should see form.

But these younger players are not to be picked out individually to be lauded the credit. As a whole the newcomers have demonstrated progressive and effective methods of p . They deserve praise.

Young Men Help the Game.

The advent of so many clever young men makes the future of tennis a bright one. The number of contestants at Newport is an indication of the widespread interest of young men interested in the game. They are enthusiastic and their enthusiasm counts much in the success and development of tennis. The accession of this younger class is encouraging and means much for the future of tennis.

It is well to remember that the popularity of the game. Tennis is one of the cleanest of sports. Played scientifically, it is wonderful in its power to command interest. Anyone may take it up. Of course all do not become champions or experts.

People at large play the game, and become infatuated with it. They may lack skill, but they delight in witnessing contests between good players whose skill is the limit is excluded. People study the game, even if they are not able to play it scientifically. Seeing the championship matches induces them with a just appreciation of the finer points and of the science there is in tennis.

It naturally follows that the game is pursued with more zest. The desire to see the best players leads to greater zeal in perfecting the strokes on to better efforts. And through the work of the best players and the work of those who are only moderately good the interest of the game is furthered. Of course, the great part of the burden lies upon the expert players.

Great Popular Interest Now.

So it has resulted that this season is seeing the culmination of a popular interest in tennis. It is enough to make the hearts of the oldtimers exult, for tennis is coming into its own. But the greatest promise is that in the succeeding years of interest, there is the promise that its future development will be along lines of greater success.

The excellent attendance that has been the rule during the present tourney at Newport is a matter of satisfaction to all those who have close to their hearts the ambition to better the game. The people must have turned out have encouraged the players themselves. The result has been a tournament in which interest in it has been witnessed, and which has given the contestants the opportunity to see the game well played.

It has been said before that the season has up to the present time developed no new plays or changes in style. This, however, does not augur ill for the future. The season has seen good play in the making—young players in whom a few years will work a radical change, if the signs are read correctly.

RESULT OF LAST DAY'S TENNIS PLAY IN NEWPORT TOURNEY

NEWPORT CASINO, Aug. 20.—Ideal weather conditions greeted the tennis enthusiasts in the fifth day of the thirtieth annual tournament of the National tennis championship here. The tournament is steadily becoming a duel between Lee and the West for the premier honors.

As expected Maurice E. McLoughlin, the California wonder, won his way triumphant path of yesterday from J. C. Jones of Rhode Island by a score of 6—1, 6—2, 6—2. The boy from the coast played in his usual slam bang style carrying all before him.

Mathey won a clean-cut victory over S. C. Inman of New York, who was expected by some of the visitors to be a big for the high honors. Mathey played an exceptional fast game, his clever work in the net drives winning him many points.

At the conclusion of today's matches President James Dwight of the National Tennis Association announced that Henry Wright, ex-champion, was interesting all to be with next Monday.

LOCKWOOD WINNER OF ESSEX GOLF CUP

Veteran Player Defeats Yale College Star in the Final Match of Tourney.

MANCHESTER-BY-THE-SEA, Aug. 20.—The first match in the first division of match play between Arthur G. Lockwood, of Allston and Karl E. Mosser of Brae-Burn, a late getter, in the Essex County tournament proved of a very mediocre calibre, as both players went far from the line form they have displayed throughout the tournament.

Lockwood encountered trouble at the outset of his game. He flubbed his drive and was in the brook giving up the hole. Toey halved the second in 4s, and Mosser playing three at the third to Lockwood's four, tied by 2 up. Lockwood won the next 4 holes.

At the eight Lockwood drove out of bounds and was in the brook on his third. He picked up his ball. At the ninth the Allston player sliced his drive to the top of the hill. Mosser won the hole, Lockwood again picking up his ball. Mosser after having topped his tee shot to the 10th, ran down a putt from the edge of the green, twenty-five feet long, and saved himself from the loss of the hole. The 11th was a good half in 4s. The 12th, a short hole, Mosser had a putt of six feet to win the hole in three and he ran it down, squaring the match.

At the 13th Mosser's tee shot hit a bunch and half fell back in a particularly tough sheet the road. He was well out but was bothered on his third. Lockwood, who was on the green in four, took two putts, winning the hole. Lockwood ran down a long putt and won the 14th, 3 to 2 and was 1 up. Lockwood's tee shot was again weak at the 16th, which he lost.

The 17th, which proved the undoing of the Brae Burn player, was the last chance he had away from Mosser. Still, he had a chance to win the hole and carry the match to the 18th, but he failed to sink the putt and he took a 6 for a half and lost by 2 up and 1 to play.

ELMER COLLINS WINS 30-MILE BIKE RACE

Kramer Defeats Fogler in Match Race as Moran's Injury Keeps Him Away.

Before an enormous crowd of fans who completely filled the Revere track bleachers last night, Elmer Collins of Lynn won the thirty-mile motor-paced race over Paddy O'Sullivan Hebir of Arlington and Freddie Hill of Boston. Collins only won by a margin of two laps, as the Australian put up a great fight all the way for the long grind and gave the veteran one of the toughest races of his career. Hill, who met with several fire accidents, was beaten seven laps. Hebir got the start, but was passed by Collins in the second mile, after a hard struggle for several laps.

Collins did his best to shake the foreigner, who, appearing for the first time at the track in a motor-paced race, caught the crowd and was cheered wildly for his attempts to catch the veteran rider he was racing against.

Hebir was a sticker and made desperate attempts to pass Collins, and in the last twenty-second mile succeeded in performing the feat amid an outburst of applause from the big throng around the track.

While riding the twenty-seventh mile Hill had a puncture and rode up the bank forcing Collins to lose his stride. Hebir had a fine chance to improve his standing but was in a spectacular mix-up to take advantage of the accident to Collins for which he received popular acclaim from the fans.

Farmer Moran was unable to meet champion Frank Kramer in the match race, so Manager Fogler took Joe Kramer over the event in two straight heats, taking for the first heat by a half a wheel and winning the unlimited pursuit race in eight and a half miles. Summary:

Thirty-mile motor paced race—Won by Elmer Collins, Lynn; second, Larry Hebir, Lynn; third, Fred Hill, Boston. Time—47.35 4-5.

Mile handicap, class B—Won by Thomas Smith, Newark, N. J.; second, Ernest Ashley, Lynn; third, Joseph Lavigne, Lynn. Time—2.07 1-5.

MEN BEAT WOMEN IN DORY CLASS

Misses Ethel Cabot and Fiske Tie R. W. Emmons, 3d, and T. Crane; Afterwards Lose.

BUZZARDS BAY, Aug. 20.—Although the sonder class was held at the Sippican Club, the team racing held by the Beverly Yacht Club at Wing's Neck, this afternoon, was largely contested.

There was a strong northeaser wind which gave the skippers some excitement, but during to entire sailing no reefs were taken.

To-day the classes were divided into teams, this being the first team race of the season. Each team was credited with points, the winner having the largest number.

The first class started was the twenty-one foot class, the starting gun being fired at 1:10 p. m. Three boats were entered according to the previous records of the year.

Both teams were sent out over course II. This gave them a fair wind to Bird Island and back to Bow Bells Rocks and a beat home.

The boats got away from [illegible] smooth time was made to the first mark, the stiff breeze kept the boats down to the Nest and to Bird Island long and extremely exciting.

Bow Bells Rocks was passed some what the skill of the skippers but by good seamanship kept them all guessing and with luck after luck, on the stiff reaching home. It was [illegible] the real excitement came.

The Flying Mercury, [illegible] Mr. Cabot, the [illegible] Merlin, [illegible] the Jewel, the Mayfly and Tradewind sup ported Alda, the Topsail Boat Mary C. Sherman I. Skeve, Walter J. Forbes and George W. Campbell were the judges.

Americans Return Early.

The great number of prominent Americans who visit London regularly every season have returned to the United States earlier than usual, so the [illegible] can be [illegible] and have [illegible] are scattered far and wide. Many have gone [illegible] of [illegible] cures in Germany, [illegible] at the [illegible] seaside [illegible]. In [illegible] one [illegible] crowded this season [illegible] Americans [illegible] wishing to be [illegible] the [illegible] are giving it a wide [illegible] some of their efforts of Mrs. Hugues Hotel, the American Queen of London [illegible] guished society folks. Mrs. Leeds has struck up a great friendship with Lady Sarah Wilson, the lively aunt of Winston Churchill.

Visiting Scotch Castle.

The Duchess of Marlborough is enjoying a quiet visit to Beaufort Castle, Scotland, which Mrs. Vanderbilt and the Mary Leeds have rented from Lord Lovat. The Duchess is full of her plans for next Winter's entertainments at Sunderland House.

Mrs. Ogden Mills has issued numerous invitations for house parties at Orid Temple, the place in Ireland she has taken from Lord Massereene. Mrs. Mills, who is now taking the cure on the Continent, goes to the United States next month, but returns to London in the Winter.

King Alfonso and Queen Ena of Spain have been strenuously hauled over the coals by their royal relatives, King George of England and the Emperor of Austria. King George, it is said, was greatly displeased when the girl Spanish Queen, Ena, with the bogus Tetl fight, and particularly at the act of Queen Ena in riding in a pony race in her waiting skirt, which England's King thinks very undignified for the Queen of Spain.

Alfonso's exuberance at Cowes, particularly the incident of the mutton's shank, where he tried on sevens, hats, greatly to the amusement of a crowd outside the shop, but greatly to the chagrin of his straight-laced courtiers.

300,000,000 "HAT" BIRDS.

French League Aroused, Yet Rostand Gets "Grand Prix."

PARIS, Aug. 20.—The French League for the Protection of Birds is greatly concerned about the vast slaughter of birds caused by the fashion for "chanticleer" hats. The league asserts that 300,000,000 birds are killed yearly for the adornment of woman.

Last year a single London merchant is asserted to have sold 32,000 hummingbirds.

Oddly enough, the Society for the Protection of Animals this year presented its annual "grand prix" to M. Rostand, the author of "Chanticleer."

DAN O'LEARY VISITS OLD IRISH SCENES

Fame as Pedestrian Seeks Boyhood Friends After Absence of Thirty-Two Years.

HE WON WORLD CONTESTS

Twice Defeated Weston for Honors in Great Six-Day Contests.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Daniel O'Leary, who won fame as the world's greatest long distance walker, rival of Weston, the brave old tramper of coast to coast endurance, is going back to Ireland for a visit after an absence of two and thirty years.

The famous walker is going home to shake hands with old friends in the town of Clonakilty, County Cork, where he was born in 1844.

He came to this country when he was nineteen. He went to Chicago and got busy at whatever jobs he could secure, finally arriving himself to the book publishing business as collector for an insurance company.

O'Leary was just thirty years old when in 1874, lovers of pedestrianism throughout the country were aroused by an offer made by D. P. Weston to some friends that he would walk 500 miles in six days. Someone heard O'Leary say that he could do [illegible] Thereafter he was a [illegible] walker.

STYLES IN ACTORS CHANGE, THIS SEASON "CHARACTER" MEN ARE THE FAVORITES

Swashbuckling Heroes and the Self-Sacrificing Rescuers Have Gone to the Attic Like the Hoop-Skirt of Old.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

STAGE actors, like shirtwaists, change with seasons; fashion is as ruthless on the [illegible] as on the [illegible] new style.

You may have wondered what has become of the swashbuckling hero of the romantic drama of a decade or more ago, or his successor, the manly, self-sacrificing hero of more recent days who thwarted the villain by the old mill. They are merely victims of the ever-shifting styles in drama—like the Merry Widow hat, they have had their day and are gone.

The character actor is the smartest thing in drama to-day, and to him the stage offers the broadest opportunity.

This is partially borne out by Charles Frohman's confession that the day of the self-sacrificing hero and heroine has been torn from the calendar. Another [illegible] of well-meaning actor folk will not agree with Mr. Frohman because [illegible] own light, but the fact remains that the public [illegible] tired of plays that do not deal with every-day people and every-day [illegible] all of which, as Mr. Frohman says, shows the great advance of the movies.

You can only look over the successes of the last three seasons to find the character actor dominating the stage, and in many cases subordinating the star. It began with "The Girl of the Golden West," when Frank Keenan as Jack Rance, the gambler-sheriff, made himself the pivot of the play. Even the skilful Blanche Bates could hardly hold her own against Mr. Keenan's Jack Rance.

Later, in "Paid in Full" and "The City," the brilliant work of Tully Marshall in character parts gave strength to the performances that could not be measured by ordinary standards. In both instances Mr. Marshall "made" the play.

The demand of the times for strong character acting—acting that shows real, instead of artificial people—has not been overlooked by players in the star cases. Of course, World is a character actor only. It is his ability to truthfully portray human types that gives him a grip on the public that [illegible] not equalled by any other actor on the American stage.

MRS. FISKE RECOGNIZES THE CONDITIONS.

Mrs. Fiske, foremost of our women stars, recognized the growing power of character work when she produced "Salvation Nell" and played the role of a scrub-woman in an East Side saloon. She was no fluffy heroine in that play. And last year in "Pillars of Society" she found time to apply her art to a steamboat captain character, and she lost nothing by it.

William T. Hodge, John Barrymore and Forbes-Robertson in the three big dramatic successes of last season played roles known as character parts, and they found that was what the public wanted.

Strangely enough, actors who are big and strong enough to create characters in a bold plan, together and keen favorite stars off the streets are usually satisfied and unable to successfully soar into the starry regions themselves.

Frank Keenan, whose work in "The Girl of the Golden West" was worth many times the production than Most Bates's contribution to the piece, was no [illegible] star of "The Warrens of Virginia," and he registered a complete [illegible] when Henry B. Harris started him in "The Heights."

[illegible] more finished actor in this country than Holbrook Blinn, who [illegible] with Mrs. Fiske has drawn well-merited admiration from public [illegible] but [illegible] that quality that makes an [illegible].

The producers of to-day give more time and closer attention to the selection of their character people than they do to the selection of stars. There [illegible] ive of stars to be found, but good character actors are scarce. The character actor has arrived.

If the truth is told about the outdoor amusements that bid for Summer patronage, you will learn that this has been the most profitable season in the history of open-air theatres and similar institutions. And this, too, in the face of an exceedingly bad start, for the early season was cold and rainy and the opening days offered everything but comfort and patronage.

LITTLE THINGS LOOM UP AS IMPORTANT.

Small things frequently bring success, as George A. Dodge of Paragon Park discovered after he had sunk a fortune in that enterprise only to win it back when the hungry and thirsty public was convinced that a Palm Garden sentence more colorful than cheap railway shows. Mr. Dodge has been face to face with almost every business situation on the calendar during his administration at Paragon Park, but he has always been sufficiently agile to land on his feet. He is emphatically on both feet as the season approaches termination.

Mr. Dodge's experience as a showman has carried him over rough roads that would have upset a less resourceful man.

After several doubtful seasons Wonderland Park has solved its own difficulties by establishing a general free admission to the grounds, which only [illegible] that small things bring strength or weakness to an [illegible]. Under the new order of things Wonderland has prospered.

Norumbega Park nothing in the past twelve seasons has approached the prosperity that has flowed through the gates since the opening in June. The unusual facility of this open-air theatre is not confined to Norumbega, for hundreds of them are in existence throughout New England, but the unusual comforts provided at Norumbega Park has doubtless been responsible for its large measure of success.

It is not an idle, careless occupation to run a Summer theatre, if you can believe Manager Carle Alberte. "You are never sure of your bookings," explained Mr. Alberte, "until you see your acts on your own stage. The great [illegible] theatres in New England has put a big demand on vaudeville [illegible]. I have frequently had engagements cancelled at the last [illegible] people could get better time at some other place. I have [illegible] several times this season to completely rearrange my program [illegible] weeks a week, and I can tell you it is a perspiring [illegible].

SHORT SHOWS WANTED AT PARKS.

Among other [illegible] that I have learned since coming to Norumbega is that [illegible] patronage [illegible] short shows—they want to get away early. That is perfectly natural, for most of our patrons come on street cars, and many of them from considerable distances. Six strong acts in our program gives better satisfaction than a bill that will run two and a half hours. Our greatest difficulty is to find what the public wants—after that it is easy."

Mr. Alberte may look back over the present season's results with a clear [illegible].

[illegible] popularity of Summer parks has doubtless been responsible [illegible] regular theatrical performances in hot weather [illegible] Boston had never been without one first-class attraction [illegible] Shubert's to give [illegible] a season of summer stock. [illegible] a perplexing account of the excellence of [illegible]. But summer parks are thriving in greater numbers than ever, [illegible] the Globe can be found when he was able to book an attraction [illegible] was interested for twelve consecutive weeks, with the [illegible] time more than fifty miles from Boston.

* * * * * *

"MERRY WIDOW" PLAYING TO CAPACITY.

[illegible] "The Merry Widow" at the Majestic Theatre has shown [illegible] that interest in the merry Viennese opera is not dead by any means. Catchy numbers are always welcomed, but not usually seen, in mid-August, and the excitement aroused over "The Merry Widow" is simply proof that quality in any entertainment will draw its own reward.

Considerable rejuvenation will take place in "Three Million Dollars" before that attraction is taken into New York. Evidently the visit of Marc Klaw to the city was responsible for the sudden change of plans that will send "Three Million Dollars" to Philadelphia instead of Broadway, as originally scheduled. Walter Lawrence will succeed Jack Smith in the leading male role in [illegible] performance.

* * * * * *

The present week will find the burlesque houses wide open with new shows, and Wright Lorimer will return to us with his old love, "The Shepherd King," opening at the Shubert Theatre.

MORPHEUS WOOED BY LIGHT OF THE MOON - LATEST SOCIAL FAD

"Rest Colony" Devotees Take Blankets and Seek "Sleep Cure" by Night to Gain More Time for Functions.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

WITH the season at its height and the whole procession of midsummer events moving along at a gay and rapid rate, little time is left the society maid or matron to indulge in the many health and beauty fads which delight the feminine heart and improve many an otherwise dull hour.

But there is one fad which takes no extra time and is said to be the greatest beautifier of them all, so naturally it has a wonderful following. It's the sleeping-out-of-door craze—and a craze it surely seems to be, for, as one young matron remarked recently, "There is little necessity for our favorites of fortune owning their handsome villas now, for both day and night they are practically deserted."

At night the sleepers literally "take up their beds and walk" out into the open, where they select some comfortable spot and proceed to sleep the sleep of the just with the sky for their canopy and the lullaby of the pines for their slumber song, while the day is spent either on the water or attending the various smart functions now the order of the day.

Miss Ellen Mason of Boston started the fad in Newport, where she has established a little "Pine Ridge Camp" on her beautiful estate on Rhode Island avenue, and where she and her sister, Miss Ida Mason, sleep out of doors all season and rest as comfortably as though they were in the more accustomed security of their own apartments.

Mrs. William Endicott Dexter is another enthusiast, and bears the distinction of being one of the most fascinating young hostesses in the famous summer colony at York Harbor. Mrs. Dexter before her marriage was Miss Mary Lindsay. She is a born leader, and more than once has rescued her world weary friends from ennui by devising or taking up new and interesting diversions.

THESE SOCIETY PEOPLE ARE "SLEEPING OUT."

Others who each morning are seen folding up their tents like the Arabs and quietly returning to shelter are Mrs. John L. Gardner, Miss Minna Lyman, Miss Eleonora Sears, Mrs. Harcourt Amory, Miss Sally Thayer and numerous others of that same exclusive set. But during waking hours fads are forgotten for the demands of the moment—and demands in plenty there are these days.

Tennis is the all-important pastime at Newport, and on Tuesday for the navel tennis tournament at the Casino there was the largest and most brilliant gathering of the year. Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. George von L. Meyer were among the interested spectators. Boston was represented by the gatherings on the stands and about the lawns by Miss Eleonora Sears, who was accompanied by Harold Vanderbilt and who wore a tan-colored costume with a large Panama hat. Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer wore an attractive gown of dull blue cheviot and a small white hat faced with black velvet and trimmed with black wings. Other Bostonians there were Miss Sally Thayer and her sister, Mrs. William L. Patten, R. L. Agassiz and Charles H. Hayden. Andrew Robeson, Jr., Miss Mary Shreve Ames, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames and Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth were other Bostonians there.

Horse shows are of paramount interest, and that at Bar Harbor Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of the coming week will be a strong drawing card for the exclusive set from all the fashionable resorts. General Edward Morrell is at the head of the affair, and the entry list is a long and interesting one. Among the gentlemen serving on the various committees are Edward Beals McLean, Philip Livingston, J. L. Ketteringus, Arthur D. Addison and Edward T. Stotesbury.

SOCIETY BEAUTIES TO POSE IN TABLEAUX.

Tuesday is also the day when the Newport society beauties are to pose in the tableaux vivants at the Casino Theatre at that resort, among them being Mrs. Craig Biddle (Laura Whelan) and her sister, Mrs. Robert Goelet (Edith Whelan), Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas (Blanche Oelrichs), Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt (Kathleen Nelson), Mrs. Payne Whitney (Helen Hay), Mrs. John Gordon Douglas (Anna Kountze), Mrs. Charles de Loosey Oelrichs (Marjorie Turnbull), Mrs. French Vanderbilt (Elsie French), Miss Rose Grosvenor, Miss Mildren Sherman, Miss Kenneth Castleman and Mrs. Reginald Norman.

The Summer colony at Ipswich and in that vicinity is in the throes of expectation regarding the open air pageant on the 25th, 26th and 27th, under the auspices of the Historical Society, which will be aided and supported by the leading cottagers in that vicinity, many of whom are to participate in the program.

Mrs. Anna P. Peabody of Commonwealth avenue and Ipswich has loaned a portion of her grounds for the event, and all are working overtime to insure the success of the affair. Mrs. Peabody has forsaken Bar Harbor, where she has spent so many Summers, and is spending the season at Magnolia.

An interesting feature of the pageant will be the military, of which Randolph M. Appleton has consented to be director. Miss Madeline Appleton is to supervise the Indian home life department, in which several of the most important beaux and belles of the North Shore will take part.

BIG MAGNOLIA HORSE SHOW.

The past week has been a decidedly lively one, and the horse show at Magnolia yesterday marked the climax to the list of brilliant events. On Monday afternoon Mrs. Julian d'Este opened her handsome York Harbor villa for a musicale, at which Miss Amy Grant gave "Elektra," with dances by Orchidee. Among the patronesses who were present were Mrs. E. H. Sitor, Mrs. Frederick Beebe, Mrs. H. T. Nichols, Mrs. A. F. Freeman, Mrs. M. D. Nicholson, Mrs. William W. Lee, Miss Lucy H. Lee, Mrs. Denny, Mrs. William Dixon, Mrs. Samuel P. Colt, Mrs. W. T. Councilman, Mrs. Robert Appleton, Mrs. D. M. Morrison, Mrs. E. L. Motte, Mrs. Frank Sherburne, Miss Susan R. Knox, Mrs. Nicholas Luquer, Mrs. C. F. Wentworth, Mrs. James Dwight, Mrs. John Cadwalader, Mrs. C. H. Fiske, Jr., Mrs. J. B. Townsend, Mrs. J. C. Breckenridge, Mrs. W. B. Kendall and Mrs. L. R. Cheney.

The second of Frauline Wolters' North Shore entertainments was given Tuesday at Swampscott, and the third was given the following day at Nahant. The patronesses for the Swampscott affair were Mrs. Arthur Little, Mrs. John Mason Little, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., Mrs. Edward Lovering, Mrs. Samuel Mixter, Mrs. Philip Chase, Mrs. Francis Crowninshield, Mrs. Arthur Rembrock, Mrs. Austin Putnam, Mrs. Walter Fish and Mrs. Robert Beattie. For the Nahant entertainment the patronesses were Mrs. James H. Beal, Mrs. Charles H. Gibson, Mrs. Thomas Motley, Jr., Mrs. Robert Grant, Mrs. Knyvet Sears, Mrs. Eben Wright, Mrs. George H. Mifflin, Mrs. Rufus Sewall, Mrs. Henry Sigourney, Mrs. Samuel H. Hammond, Mrs. Arthur Johnson and Mrs. E. D. Turnbull.

The second of the dinner dances at the Essex County Club took place Friday evening and was decided a success as was the first dance a couple of weeks ago. The entertainment committee was made up of Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Philip Dexter, Mrs. Lester Leland and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas.

MANY GO TO BUZZARD'S BAY.

Plans for entering the German-American trial paces at Buzzard's Bay on September 3 are already well formulated, and among those who are to enter are J. L. Stackpole, who will enter his handsome yacht, the Seacoon; George C. Thomas, Jr., the Reside II; Francis R. Moore and Francis R. Sears, the Vim; Harry E. Converse, the Juniata; Galen L. Stone, the Fog; R. W. Emmons, 2d, the Toboggan; Lawrence E. Percival, the Sally XI.; Francis B. Crowninshield, the Demon; Hugh Bancroft, the Spokane III., and Guy Lowell, the Cima.

Bar Harbor, not content with a horse show, is now planning aeroplane flights, and society on the 29th and 30th of this month will be out in force to witness one of Glenn Curtis's most experienced men go after the record for seven miles from Robin Hood Park. Among the prominent society men enthusiastic over the newest sport is General Morrell, who is president of the first aero club in Maine, and Buster McLean, who is vice-president. John Kearsley Mitchell, 2d, Edgar Scott, Clement E. Newbold and Ernesto G. Fabri are some of the other enthusiasts.

MISS JOHNSON

MISS WARREN TO BE A BRIDE OF AUTUMN

Engagement to John E. Thayer, Jr., of Deep Interest to Fashionables.

ONE of the most interesting engagements of the week was that announced on Thursday of Miss Charlotte Warren second daughter of Mrs. S. D. Warren of Beacon street and Matapoisett, to John E. Thayer, Jr., Harvard '10, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Thayer of Lancaster. Miss Warren who is Miss Helen Sewall's most intimate friend, who came out with her two Winters ago and who traveled abroad with all last year with Miss Sears and her mother, is a most attractive girl with pretty blonde coloring, innumerable accomplishments and a most charming manner.

Miss Warren is a Vincent Club girl and is also a member of the New Riding Club. Her older sister is Mrs. Joseph G. Bradley and her brother, S. D. Warren, married Helen Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, last Summer. Her mother was a daughter of the late Ambassador Bayard Mr. Thayer is one of our most popular young club men and his sisters are the Misses Nora, Evelyn and Nathalie Thayer. Nathaniel and Bayard Thayer are his uncles and among his cousins are the Countess Moltke, Mrs. William S. Patten, Eugene V. R. Thayer, Mrs. Charles E. Mason (Elizabeth Andrew) and Mrs. Rowland Russell.

It is said that the wedding will take place this Autumn and another interesting young matron will be added to the list.

Miss Bartlett's wedding to Dr. Ladd Thursday was the one and only really brilliant matrimonial event of the week. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Barton of Worcester. The decorations were of green and white, asters and lilies being used with palms and ferns. Only the immediate families and intimate friends attended the ceremony, but the reception which followed was attended by society folk from New York, Boston and Worcester.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Davies, rector of All Saints' Church, officiated and Miss Nancy Barton, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. Edward Motley, of Boston was the bridegroom's best man and the ushers were Charles S. Sargent, of Brookline; Guy Fairfax Carey, Louis A. Clark, Jr., Philip Carroll and Crawford Bisdee, all of New York.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of heavy white satin, the entire waist being of duchesse and rose point lace. She wore a lace veil and carried gardenias. The bridesmaid wore white chiffon embroidered with pink rosebuds over lisse of pink satin, and she carried sweet peas and pink roses.

Dr. and Mrs. Ladd left in an automobile for a wedding trip, and on their return will live on Hereford street, Boston.

Among New Yorkers at the reception were Miss Rosamond Fish, daughter of Stuyvesant Fish; the Misses Nathalie and Hortense Howland, Seth Sprague, E. Robbins Walker and Mrs. Clement Scott, an aunt of the bride. The members of the bridegroom's family who attended were Mrs. Elton Clark, Mrs. John W. Hallowell, Mrs. Richard C. Storey and Mrs. Alfred Rodman Weld, all sisters of the bridegroom; Alexander B. Ladd of Milton, a brother, and Mrs. Alexander H. Ladd.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip L. Spalding have returned from their automobile tour through Europe and have joined the Cape Cod colony, occupying their pretty villa at Falmouth.

Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, who have come from their home in London for a visit of several weeks with their relatives here, are at present with Mr. Phillip's mother, Mrs. John C. Phillips, at her country villa, Moraine Farm, at North Beverly. Mrs. Phillips before her marriage in London last Spring was Miss Drayton of New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Walter Channing of Brookline, and their daughters, the Misses Barbara and Rosalie Channing, who sailed for Europe in the early Spring after seeing the Passion Play at Oberammergau, have gone to Munich to enjoy the opera season there. They will later go to Germany and France en route for home.

Mrs. Henry Sigourney, who sailed recently with her son, is to return the coming month and before coming into town for the Winter will be at her Nahant cottage for several weeks.

Augustus P. Loring Jr. is enjoying a month's cruise on his new yacht, the Spitfire. He has as his guests T. Jefferson Newbold, who graduated from Harvard in June, and Stanton Burnham.

SOCIETY IS GETTING READY FOR AUTUMN

"Foreign Legion" Is Flitting About Securing Frocks for the Coming Season.

THE doings of the fashionables both here and abroad are of much interest just now. At home they are flitting about from one fashionable resort to another enjoying life to the fullest, while abroad they are traveling about seeking rest and change and buying their frocks for the coming season.

Miss Elizabeth Sutton, who has been the house guest of Mrs. Robb de Peyster Tytus at her Berkshire country home for several weeks, has sailed for Africa, where she is to join her father, Sir John Sutton.

Mrs. E. J. Call, who sailed for the Mediterranean ports in June with her daughter, Mrs. Henry Hurlbut Abbott of Montclair, N. J., and Mr. Abbott, has concluded her tour of Northern Italy and gone to Switzerland. There they will remain for a time. Mr. Abbott is returning earlier than Mrs. Abbott and Mrs. Call, who are to [illegible] after spending a fortnight in Paris.

Mrs. Louis Curtis of Beacon street, who sailed last Spring for an extended automobile tour through Europe, has returned to Paris, where she is now [illegible] for a few weeks' shopping before coming home.

Dr. Charles S. Minot has sailed for Europe to send several weeks in travel, while Mrs. Minot is at Northeast Harbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Proctor of Commonwealth avenue, who went abroad in the early Spring and who have since been automobiling on the Continent, are planning to return in the early Autumn in order to pass several weeks at their Swampscott country home, "Cold-spring," before coming into town for the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Preston, formerly of Bay State road, but more recently of the Touraine, are about arriving on the other side, where they will spend several weeks in travel.

Mr. and Mrs. Eben D. Jordan, who are touring through Europe with their daughter, Miss Dorothy Jordan, and their son Robert, who has recently joined them, will return to America in the early Autumn to spend several weeks at their West Manchester estate before coming into town for the Winter.

Miss May Colgate Colby, who has recently returned from a long visit in England, instead of joining the North Shore colony, occupying a cottage at Beverly Farms, as has been her custom for years, has gone to New London, N. H., for the remainder of the season.

Talk about the high cost of living! I tried to find out how they do it, but they couldn't explain. I imagine somebody gives them the coal, and the men work for the fun of it. IF THE MOTHERS RULED THE WORLD

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

It Would Be a World Free from Evil and Cruelty; Graft and Corruption Would Be Unknown, and Every Mother's Hope for the Future of Her Children Might Be Realized.

WHOEVER has seen the face of a mother as she bent over the little wrinkled face of her first baby as it lay blinking at the new light in its crib has known something of a mother's love and a mother's hope.

In the picture on this page the cartoonist gives his idea of the kind of world this would be were it ruled by the mothers. The tiger, the most ruthless and cruel of all created things and the enemy of mankind since the years before history, would lose his ferocity and become the playmate and the servant of her beloved baby; all evil and corruption would vanish; all the snares and pitfalls that are now spread for faltering little feet would disappear, and growing up to manhood the child would go out into a world filled with friendliness and never meet with temptation nor enmity.

Did you ever try to imagine what a brutal, selfish, unfeeling place this earth would be were it not for the mothers?

Why does the child who has had the shelter and protection of a home instinctively trust everyone until he has learned better? Because at his mother's knee he has learned that children are to be loved and protected.

Why, despite the bad habits he may fall into later in life and the vices he may acquire, does something within him always point out the difference between right and wrong and make him ashamed of his misdoings and proud of such good impulses as he may have? Because the lessons he learned from his mother are not to be forgotten, and mothers teach their children only to be good.

If men did only what their mothers would have them do, if they held to the standards set for them when they first begin to talk, if when they first become cynical and sordid they could go back to childhood and learn how their mothers view their contemplated action, there would be exceedingly little work for jailers, hangmen and prosecuting attorneys.

Incidentally most of the problems that are now wearying the brains and vexing the souls of clergymen, college professors and philanthropists would have been solved long ago and the misery and poverty that are now the traditional enemies of mankind would not exist.

Because a small fraction of humanity is inordinately selfish and a large fraction of humanity is inordinately thoughtless, laws are unevenly enforced, wealth accumulates in a few hands, and the majority are doomed to earn what the minority are permitted to spend.

To-day on the East Side of New York City and in the tenement quarters of every other great city babies are dying by dozens because certain conscienceless scoundrels are selling their mothers bad milk at a ruinous price, and other scoundrels of the same stamp are selling them poisoned milk.

The majesty of the law, which we are all taught to fear and respect, is not great enough to scare these rascals into honesty.

Indict them and they will hire distinguished lawyers to defend them and weary justice with many postponements and hair-splitting interpretations of the statutes.

By a miracle one of the worst of this crowd became too reckless and landed inside a striped suit in a Federal penitentiary. His influential friends are doing their utmost to release him, and there is a disquieting possibility that they will succeed.

When the heat was at its worst in New York, when the undertaker was the busiest man on the East Side, and when every day hundreds of mothers followed their lost babies to the crowded cemeteries for the poor, this estimable gentleman enjoyed a monopoly of the ice business his "commercial genius" had created. He was piling up profits out of the savings of every mother who had any savings.

When there were no savings there was no ice, and in too many cases that meant that a haggard woman must sit by helpless and see her child die.

Now, how long do you suppose such a condition of affairs would exist if the mothers had their way?

How long do you suppose the food adulterer, the milk pirate and the ice monopolist could continue in business if the matter were left to the women whose babies' lives are imperilled and too often lost because of sordid greed for a few more dollars?

Go from door to door among the tenements and find what the mothers think of the milk trust and its methods and the law or lack of law which makes such a rascally combination possible.

And you need not go only among the tenements. For, whether rich or poor, mothers are made just and merciful by their motherhood, and a census of opinion as to the milk trust on Fifth avenue or in Newport would be likely to give the same results if it were taken only among the women who have borne and reared children.

Even go to the mothers of the very men who are behind these most hideously cruel of all organized monopolies and you would find they had small sympathy for the business their sons were engaged in, and that the hopes they had beside the cradles of their babies have been ruthlessly shattered.

And what are these hopes? Nothing purer, nothing better have there ever been in all the world than the thoughts and silent prayers a mother directs toward her child. If it is a boy she hopes that he will be strong, clean, gentle, generous, and with the power of seeing straight and thinking straight. If it is a girl she hopes that she will grow up gracious, strong, pure, gentle, and be a fit mother for other children.

In history there are records of unnatural fathers who have trained their sons into wickedness and deceit—too many instances, both in history and out of it. And then other men and the world try to finish what these fathers have started.

In all nature the maternal instinct stands for protection and for self-sacrificing complete care. When we were savages and whenever we wanted to deify some particularly beneficial process of nature we created not a god to account for it, but a goddess. For every myth in which protection and care of children are attributed to a male force we have a score in which they are attributed to a female force. It was not Osiris who mercifully cared for the lives and fortunes of the Earth children, but Mother Isis.

So, even in the dim beginnings, man realized that it was only at his mother's breast and on her heart that he could find full solace, comfort, sympathy and protection. That was his refuge when he first opened his eyes to the world, and it is his refuge in every crisis.

And why? Because he knows that with his mother his own welfare comes first of all; that there is a sympathy which ignores details and an understanding which is truer than the fact-bound logic which others mete out to him. If he is a good son he knows, too, the pain that he can inflict upon that mother, and he does not do that which will cause her pain.

"The hand that rocks the cradle moves the world" is a very ancient and a very wise saw. But it is the cradle-side hope which keeps the world moving—and moving in the right direction always.

If every child as he grows into manhood could live up to those cradleside hopes he would go to his grave with no regrets. He cannot, it is true, go through life protected from evil and temptation as his mother would have him.

The experiences that she would keep from him are for his good. He must fight or he cannot win. Spared temptation, he would never know his strength to resist it.

Too easy the mother would make the pathway of her child; too light would be the load she would have him carry.

In this world the tiger is not to be tamed, save for the vaudeville performance. Since the days of Bible history the wicked have not ceased from troubling, nor will they cease in any times that the present generation can foresee.

The baby that now is struggling with the pains of colic must have many another struggle this side of his grave. He must suffer much pain, fight many a hard battle with his enemies and many a harder battle with himself.

He must learn that the world is full of enemies to be met and conquered; that only by tremendous efforts can he attain anything like success, and that the sooner he learns absolute self-denial the sooner will he have a chance of happiness.

But while the mother's hopes cannot make smooth his road, the mother's ideals WILL give him the strength to conquer it.

And if at the end, when he has gone the whole distance that we call life, he can tell himself that in the main he has tried to do as she would have him do, that he has tried to treat the children of other mothers as those mothers would wish them treated, he will have done more than most men can do.

Mothers do not rule the world—yet. Some day they will, for their influence, even now, is greater than any other influence that touches humankind. It brings to the world what good there is in it, softens the harshness of its wickedness, and is responsible for CONSCIENCE, which is the one saving grace in us all.

When the time comes that mothers shall rule the world it will be a wholly good world. Until then we can only try to do as every mother would have us do, and thank Heaven that Mother Love and Mother Hope are in the world to keep it headed in the right direction.

Here Are Some Dainty Dishes for Dessert in the Hot Weather Season

SOMETHING dainty for dessert—that's the demand of the family.

For the dilatant of dainty desserts does not look particularly e ing to the house wife who has stewed and broiled over a hot fire getting ready for a one or two course dinner. Many women are more enjoyable than ever during these hot days because they have a better sense of values and they know that that sort of cooking is scarcely worth while. The fruity is just as nourished with less effort. Instead of the one with creams and pastries which must be cooked and then allowed to cool. The result is the same, either way a cool dessert.

Besides cooks have prepared some very dainty recipes which can be made from the various ice cream powders on the market, and those prepared for the Jello manufacturers are especially good.

For a Simple Ice Cream.

For a sample ice cream, stir the contents of one package of the ice cream powder, any flavor, into a quart of milk and freeze in the usual way. Do not cook or boil the milk. Do not add sugar, flavoring or anything else, as everything is contained in the package of ice cream powder. This will make nearly two quarts of delicious ice cream. Condensed milk thinned with water, can be used instead of cream, and two heaping tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar to each quart of milk.

Here Are Other Receipts.

CHOCOLATE MOUSSE—Freeze and pack chocolate ice cream powder according to directions, and when frozen, add 1 a pint of cream, whipped; repack and mold as desired for two hours.

BANANA CREAM PIE—Mix together one half package vanilla ice cream powder and one banana tablespoonful cornstarch. Dissolve in a little cold milk and add to two cups boiling milk and cook until sufficiently thick. When partially cool pour it over the sliced bananas and two tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar. Then fill the baked crust and put in oven to brown.

ORANGE CREAM—Peel three medium oranges, cut them fine and put in a dish. Add two tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and let stand. Dissolve one package vanilla ice cream powder in one quart of milk and freeze in the usual way. Turn into a chilled dish and serve with the oranges.

How Is This One?

PEACH ICE CREAM—Dissolve one package vanilla ice cream powder in one quart of milk and freeze very thick. Add one pint of peaches, mashed fine, and sugar to taste. Turn into a mold, cover with paper and bury in ice and salt for two hours.

BANANA ICE CREAM—Thoroughly mash one dozen ripe bananas, add one quart of milk, the juice of one lemon and one cup of sugar. Freeze as usual.

How Is This One?

PEACH ICE CREAM—Dissolve one package vanilla ice cream powder in one quart of milk and freeze very thick. Add one pint of peaches, mashed fine, and sugar to taste. Turn into a mold, cover with paper and bury in ice and salt for two hours.

ORANGE CREAM—Peel three medium oranges, cut them fine and put in a dish. Add two tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and let stand. Dissolve one package vanilla ice cream powder in one quart of milk and freeze in the usual way. Turn into a chilled dish and serve with the oranges.

A Delicious Sherbet.

LEMON SHERBET—Juice and grated rind of two lemons, one cup of sugar, one quart of water and one egg beaten light. Mix and freeze.

A delicious pineapple sherbet may be made by substituting pineapple juice for lemon juice.

KENTUCKY CREAM—Dissolve one package of vanilla ice cream powder in one quart of milk and freeze. Add one cup of whipped cream and one cup of maraschino cherries or any other preserved fruit. Serve in sherbet glasses.

MAINE ICE CREAM—Dissolve one package of vanilla ice cream powder in one quart of milk. Add one pint of cream and one cup of sugar. Freeze. Grate a cocoanut and mix it with one cup of sugar and one cup of water. Cook until clear. Add one tablespoonful of gelatine dissolved in a little cold water. Stir into the ice cream when it is nearly frozen.

COCOANUT CREAM PIE—Mix together one cup of sugar, one cup of cocoanut, one cup of sweet cream and the yolks of two eggs. Bake with one crust. When done cover with the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth with two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Brown slightly.

Making of Lemonade

The secret of making delicious lemonade is to use plenty of sugar and ice. Squeeze the juice of the lemons and add the sugar and ice. Then add water to taste. Do not add the water before the sugar and ice, as the lemonade will not be as delicious.

THE MEGAPHONE MAN AT CITY POINT

SCENE—South Boston Point on a Sunday afternoon. Residents of Cambridge, Winthrop, Revere and West Roxbury in profusion. Inhabitants of South Boston non aunt (Last for somewhere else.) Rubberneck Wagon approaches. It is duly percussated and picking its steps.

MEGAPHONE MAN—We have now reached M——

VOICE (from rear seat)—City Point, you mean.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Think of describing such a beautiful stretch of parkway and watercourse as City Point. It is——— one who call it ——— Marine Park is its proper

LITTLE BOY (from Worcester, to mother)—Mama, I want to go in swimmin'

MOTHER—Well, you can't go. Do you think the man would stop to let you go in the water?

MEGAPHONE MAN—I am sorry, my little man, because I'd like to go in swimmin', too.

OLD MAID (on front seat)—I thought you were going to tell us about points and places.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Excuse me, lady. If you will now glance to the right you will see the Pendleton Hotel where James J. McShane, the well-known sporting authority dispenses hospitality. There's Mr. McShane on his piazza, bowing to us; in the short, stocky man with the cauliflower ears. How's 'em?

OLD MAID—I don't care to know at

FAT TRAVELLING MAN (on seat behind)—Sure we don't, do we miss. (Old Maid glares at him and does not answer.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—On the left you will notice this long pavilion with a ——— store in front. That is known as O'Neil's Folly. A man named O'Neil built it on the assurance of politicians that he could get a license to run a sunshine dance hall. When it was built the people of South Boston went after those politicians with a baseball bat and O'Neil didn't get his license.

OLD MAID—I'm glad of it.

LITTLE BOY (from Worcester)—I want to go in swimmin'.

MOTHER—Hush, Johnny, don't interrupt the gentleman.

YOUNG LADY (from Buffalo)—I know where you got that quotation.

"Those bells of Shandon
That sound so grand on
The pleasant waters of the River Lee."

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, I didn't just thought it up myself.

TWO PRETTY TWINS—Oh, see the long pier, and see the other pier.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Coming to them, ladies. Pleasure Bay is the home of the biggest fleet of yachts in the world. If you don't believe me, look at them. Away down on the right you see four attractive buildings painted green; they are the Boston, the Head House, so called because it South Boston, Columbia and Puritan is at the foot of the pier. yacht clubs. Further down is the Mosquito Fleet. And there goes Charlie Mooney, vice-commodore of the Mosquitoes, this minute.

LITTLE BOY (from Worcester)—I want to go on a yacht, and I want to go swimmin'.

MOTHER—Will you be quiet!

MEGAPHONE MAN—It is a public landing used by yachtsmen from all over the country and just beyond is the bathing beach. The city of Boston has main tained a bathing beach here for many years. On hot days 3,000 people go into the water at this point.

Strangling sound as Mother chokes little boy from Worcester.

MEGAPHONE MAN—This ornate structure that you see before you is

TWO PRETTY TWINS (in unison)—Then why don't they call it the Foot House?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Because there is a restaurant there.

OLD MAID—What difference does that make?

MEGAPHONE MAN—You will notice that the Head House is decorated with pictures of Indians, Pilgrims, pioneers and Puritans.

FAT TRAVELLING MAN—A healthy place for a picture gallery. Gosh, I should say so.

TWO PRETTY TWINS (in unison)—Oh, see the pretty whiskers.

MEGAPHONE MAN—That is ex-Congressman McNary. He is known as the man with the changeable whiskers, now he has them, now he hasn't.

LITTLE BOY (from Worcester)—I want to go in swim—— (Crack, comes mother's hand.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—We are now passing the South Boston Pier. The origin of this wonderful structure which points in four different directions is lost in antiquity. It is believed that the original intention was to build a bridge to Thailand across which Washington might lead an army, but the funds gave out. After a while they got some more money, but this was in Spanish War times, so they pointed the pier in the direction of Cuba. The third spasm was contructed withoutit's a long walk any place in view, and at the end of it they built an island.

(New Yorker and Girl from Augusta shut up, and look embarrassed.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—Notice that smooth-faced gentleman in the door of the Head House? That's Charlie Bova. He has been running the Head House for fifteen years and can serve you a steak, furnish you a bathing suit or open a bottle of ginger ale with the best of them. How's business, Charlie?

BOVA—Pretty good, but you should have seen it when bicycles were in fashion.

MEGAPHONE MAN—We shall now pass along the Parkway. On the left is the statue of Admiral Farragut, a South Boston boy.

SCHOOL TEACHER (hitherto silent)—I never heard that before. Are you sure?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Do you 'spose they built a statue to him if he wasn't? Now we see the house in Fort Independence, known now as Castle Island. All who want to go to the Island will have to walk over and back. Everybody get off.

OLD MAID—I don't know whether it's worth the trip. What's it noted for?

MEGAPHONE MAN (clearing his throat)—In the days of the Revolution this fort was known as Castle William, and was occupied by the British grenadiers. It is full of dungeons where the American patriots were confined. It is my board of standing ever happening over there—McDonald and the other corps around here keep too sharp a look out. All those who want to cross the bridge raise their hands.

(No hands.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—Very well, we shall now return along the Parkway. That band stand to the right is where the Municipal Band plays on Sunday evenings when it is not on a strike. Seated on that bench you will see City Treasurer Charles Slattery getting a whiff of fresh air after his week's work. On the next bench, ladies and gentlemen, you will observe James E. Connolly, author and athlete and candidate for Congress from the Tenth. He is mixing with his constituents.

LITTLE BOY (from Worcester)—I want to go——Blub-blub!!!"

MEGAPHONE MAN—Here we are in front of Najjar Brothers. This restaurant has been here since the Park [illegible] and you now [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

WHAT I DID YESTERDAY

ON MY SATURDAY AFTERNOON OFF

(Copyright 1910, by American-Journal Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved)

Drawn By Nell Brinkley.

AFTER all, the dear old simple pleasures are SWEETEST. Bill and I had talked it over and we agreed that we had made a mistake, on our Saturday afternoons off, in being too ELABORATE in our ideas and preparations. So yesterday we did the simplest thing we could think of, and the success of it was beyond our FONDEST DREAMS. What did we do? Why, we just put up a little lunch in a basket and went out toward Blue Hills, and found a grassy hillside all sprinkled with wild flowers and sat down all by our LONESOMES and flew a kite! We were just like two little kiddies—not a duty or a responsibility in the world, and not a care for the future—though to be strictly truthful, Billy did say a few DELICIOUS things about our growing old TOGETHER, but never too old to go kite-flying.

SOME OF THE FUNNY THINGS THE LITTLE CHILDREN SAY

ETHEL was going to visit her aunt in Staten Island. While on the ferryboat she spied the Statue of Liberty. Turning to her mother, she cried:

Oh, mamma, look! That lady is saying 'Never again!'"

MY little nephew had been very naughty, and for the first time his dad spanked him. That night when he said his prayers he did not ask God to bless his father, and so his mother said:

"What would you do if poor papa should be killed on his way home tonight? You had better ask God to bless him."

That set the boy to thinking and he had just bowed his head when he heard his father's step on the porch. Quick as a flash he bounded into bed, saying:

"I think I'll risk it this time."

MRS. THURSTON gave a lawn fete in which several of the neighboring children participated, and at the close of the festivities I entertained them with a few appropriate tricks, concluding with the famous "black and white" trick, in which the head of a black duck is transferred to the body of a white duck, and vice versa. This last made a great impression upon the little folks.

That evening while sitting on the veranda I saw a little girl approaching with a body of a china doll in one hand and its severed head in the other. Walking up with the utmost confidence, she laid the mutilated doll in my lap and said:

"Please, Mr. Thurston, will you make dolly's head go back on again, like you did the duck's? It broke off yesterday."

A DOCTOR prescribed for a little girl, saying that her system was quite upset. After he had gone she said to her mother:

"I knew I was upset, mamma, because my foot's asleep again, and things must be pretty bad when you go to sleep in the wrong end."

"Oh, mamma!" he cried, "we had a fine time playing kissing games and kissing all the girls. But nobody kissed the little girl who gave the party."

"That wasn't very polite," said the boy's mother. "Why didn't you kiss her?"

"Oh, I couldn't mamma, she was such a hard looker."

A SUNDAY school teacher was trying to impress on the minds of her pupils the use of grace before meals; so she asked little Willie, whose father was deacon in the church, what his father said before meals. Willie answered, innocently: "He says 'Go easy with the butter, kids, it's forty cents a pound.'"

* * *

A SMALL boy friend of mine was asked to mail a letter for a woman. After a few minutes he returned and handed the lady two cents which she had given him to pay for the stamp.

"I waited until nobody was looking," he explained, "and then dropped the letter in the box without any stamp."

LAST Sunday I was playing tag with my little girl and I noticed that her hands were very dirty.

"Marion," said I, "go wash your hands, so you won't soil papa's white duck trousers."

She trotted into the house and her mother washed her hands and said: "Now, Marion, your face is dirty; let me wash that, too."

"What's the use?" said Marion. "Him ain't playing with my face."

ONE morning Norman was intently watching his mother kneading bread, when he suddenly asked.

"Mother, is God a baker?"

"Why, no," answered mother; "what makes you ask such a question?"

"Well, then," persisted Norman, "if God isn't a baker, who makes our daily bread?"

"LET'S play school and I'll be teacher," said my little five-year-old niece one day when I was visiting her house.

While the school was in progress I asked her what God made us for. The little teacher, without the least hesitation, replied:

"God made women because He likes to hear them talk."

A TEACHER at the opening of school was asking the children their names, also their mother's maiden name, and added:

"I don't know what my father's maiden name was."

MY little brother was told that one hundred per cent. meant all. One night, when parting with some friends, he didn't want to say good night to each one separately, so he called out as loud as he could:

"Good night, one hundred per cent!"

WHEN going to bed one evening, Jerry, aged five, asked his mother who made him.

"God made you, dear," she answered.

"Don't you think He did a pretty bum job?" returned Jerry.

PART of little Oliver's punishment when naughty was the selection of the switch to be used in punishing him. One day, when his mother had sent him, as usual, for the stick he returned after a long absence and said earnestly:

"There is no stick out there big enough for such a bad boy as I am. I think we'll have to wait a month for one to grow."

ROSE, who had recently seen a family evicted for not paying their rent, was asked why Adam and Eve were turned out of Paradise, and her reply was:

"Because they didn't pay their rent."

"GOOD night, precious lamb," said mother to her son at bed time.

"Mother," said the youngster, beseechingly, "if you must call me something, wouldn't you just as soon call me a billy goat?"

* * *

A MOTHER and her daughter were at sea during rough weather. The mother asked:

"Are you seasick, dear?"

"No, I think not," replied the daughter, "but I'd hate to yawn."

* * *

SOME children of the neighborhood were suffering from chickenpox, and Jewel's mother cautioned her not to go near their home or play with them, for fear she would get it. Jewel, who is only three years old, looked up very seriously into her mother's face and asked:

"If I should get chickenpox, mother, would I have feathers on me?"

A LITTLE girl, while playing about the yard one day, heard her father remark that he felt like "three cents."

"Well, papa," she said, "why don't you spend yourself?"

LITTLE Dorothy's papa had been very ill with appendicitis, but at last she was permitted to see him. When the nurse came to take her away she hung back a moment.

"Haven't I been very quiet, papa?"

"Yes," whispered the patient.

"Then won't you do me a big favor, papa?"

"Certainly, what is it, dear?"

"Let me see the baby."

* * *

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Katherine had been given a little fancy cracker that had a scalloped edge around it. A few minutes later her mother found her eating this edge of the cracker. Looking up at her mother, Katherine exclaimed:

"See mother, I am eating the embroidery off the cracker."

MY uncle is the father of two small children who are not fond of the teachers at their school. One night, while passing through the hall after the children had retired, he heard the boy saying to his sister:

"Yes, and every time I go to school with chewin' gum in my mouth the teacher always says: 'Robert, come right up here and put that in the basket,' and I do b'lieve, Margaret, if I went to school with the measles she'd say, 'Robert, come right up here and put them in the basket.'"

I HEAR you have a little sister at your house," said the grocer to Johnny.

"Yes, sir," said Johnny.

"How do you like her?"

"I wish she was a boy, so I could play marbles with him."

"Well, said the grocer, "why don't you exchange your sister for a boy?"

"We can't," said Johnny sorrowfully, "we've used her four days."

FREDDY was looking through a big picture book, when he at once began to cry.

"Don't cry, Freddy," said his mother. "Those lions aren't going to hurt Daniel."

"I'm not crying about that," said Freddy, "but there's a little lion there, and Daniel's so small I'm afraid the little lion won't get any of him."

MARY was at her grandfather's farm for the first time. One of the hens had been having a fight and naturally there were a lot of feathers scattered about. Mary, seeing these, said:

"Why don't you do something to keep your hens from wearing out?"

"THE other day I was at my aunt's, when my uncle called my Cousin John and told him to come in for supper. He told his father that he did not want anything to eat. His father asked him why, and he said:

"What's the use of eating? You'll only get hungry again."

THE children and grandchildren of our family were gathered at a family dinner, and in seating themselves about the table there was, naturally, some delay.

Little Harold, who had clambered into his chair among the first, hastily bowed his head, ready for the blessing to be asked. He waited a minute, then, as none seemed forthcoming, claimed:

"Hurry up fellows!"

THREE-year-old Elma received a dime for taking a dose of castor oil. The next day her big brother Fred asked her to pick up a basket of cobs.

"How much will you give me?" she asked.

"A nickel," replied her brother.

"Humph!" said Elma, "I can make more than that taking castor oil."

WILLIE'S father was telling him of the discovery of the North Pole by Lieutenant Peary, and how one of the many explorers now on their way there may discover the South Pole.

"And then," said his father, "the last great place of interest on this earth will be discovered."

"No it won't!" said Willie. "They will still have to find Dr. Cook!"

A LITTLE boy was getting his first lesson in arithmetic. His father said:

"Now, Willie, if I had six slices of bread and took away four, what would I have left?"

"A sandwich," replied Willie, after some thought.

ROBERT was watching a fire one day. He saw the engine at work and said:

"Does the engine scare the fire when it goes chug, chug?"

ONE day as we were sitting on the porch talking a girl passed us who was very small for her age.

"Isn't she small for a girl of sixteen?" asked Edith.

"Yes," said Elsie. "I hope I won't be so small when I get bigger."

JAMES had bought some post cards with his own money, and when he found one was slightly torn, he couldn't bear to waste it. A few days later his aunt received this torn card with the following on it:

"Dear Aunt—Having a fine time here. This is a beautiful view, but it's torn just a little. I guess it got done by the mail people, because it wasn't done when I sent it. James."

SMALL Grace had a severe cold, and holding a rose to her mother's nose, asked:

"Does it smell good, mamma?"

"Yes, dear," replied her mother.

"Can't you smell it?"

"No, mamma," answered Grace, "my nose is deaf and dumb."

BUD, it seemed, had just learned how to whistle. One evening, while taking his bath, he told his mother he could whistle "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." She asked to hear him do it.

"Well," he said, "which verse shall I whistle, the first or the second?"

THESE PEOPLE BELIEVE IN SIGNS

DO you think I would have parted with that skirt I wore in "The Chorus Lady?" Not for all the money now being paid by managers for royalties!

The skirt parted several times, to be sure, but I patched it and patched it, until there wasn't much of the original goods left. There was a rent in the back and two in the front, and every day my maid had to go over it and reinforce the strained spots.

Along toward the last I used to wonder when I went on if the good old friend would last until the final curtain; but it stuck, as all good old friends stick, and it was a good thing it did, for if I had been obliged to don a new skirt I know the show would have gone to pieces.

I AM not particularly superstitious, but take that darling little Hindoo idol from beneath my gaze in my dressing room and I would get my clothes on askew and forget half my lines.

The very first thing I do when I take possession of a dressing room is to take out and set up in a prominent and honored position the little idol. It is my trial audience. I rehearse difficult lines and scenes before it just before going on. If I am morose, out of sorts, blue and not in harmony with the part I am presently to assume I commune with the philosophical little image and he puts me (call it "he" because it seems so human) in a properly sympathetic mood.

I got it on one of my trips abroad, it has never left me and it never will, for it has brought me good luck ever since coming into my possession. I dread to think of the consequences should I lose it.

IF I should make my entrance without first slashing the dressing room air to pieces with my trusty sword I'd mouth my lines worse than any town crier and my Hamlet would be of the quality that has given such impetus to the hennery business in times past.

When ready for my cue I snatch up my rapier and do a little shadow fencing, and when I've sufficiently perforated my imaginary adversary and taken the kinks out of myself I'm ready to go on. At first this practice was simply a matter of getting limbered up, but it has actually grown to be a superstition with me, I'll admit.

NO hoodoo, big or little, green, pink, red or blue, has any terrors for me while I have my bit of green paint with me. I've never been without it since the first night I appeared on the stage.

It is a fragment of the first piece I ever used, and I wear it in a little solid silver box hung on a neck chain. Don't think I could act without it, because I couldn't.

SIMPLY because I've been playing black face for years I don't think I've become imbued with the superstition of the colored race; but I could never get away with the funniest joke on earth if I were facing an audience without humming the chorus of the first song that won me a good big hand.

And the strangest thing about it is that I can't remember the name of the song or the words. The tune, however, has clung to me, and when I've finished humming it in my dressing room I'm ready to take a chance out front. I wouldn't have words set to it and sing it on the stage for a million dollars. It would break the charm. And I won't hum it when anybody's listening.

I'm not at all curious as to the name or the words of the song, for the tune gets my hoodoo goat.

I WOULDN'T ride behind a white horse if the theatre was ten miles away and that was the only carriage in sight. I'd walk first. And if I couldn't walk I wouldn't use the horse anyway; for if I should ride behind it something would happen to prevent the show, so what would be the sense of using that horse?

I always personally instruct the advance men to be absolutely certain that there be no white horses on the carriages which I am to use going to and from the theatres in the various cities where I play.

JUST ONE REVERE BEACH --- By William F. Kirk

"I'VE been somewhere east of Suez, where the best is like the worst;
There was lots of yeast in Suez, for I surely raised a thirst.
I have been in Arizona, where ten million stars looked down;
I have rambled through El Paso, I have dined in London town.
I have paddled down the Congo, winding through the jungle trees;
I have wooed the Queen of Travel, following if I had to crawl—
But there's just one old Revere Beach, after all.

"GET your hot dogs here,
With a dipper full of beer!"
"Come and knock the babies down on every hand."
When a lot of full-grown men
Want to act like kids again,
There is just one old Revere Beach, after all.

"WHEN I hear the happy crooning of the kiddies on the beach,
When I note the blissful spooning of the lobster and the peach,
When I wander on through Wonderland, or stroll in Luna Park,

"HERE'S a boat full of beauts,
Come along and shoot the chutes;
It will only wet your stockings if you fall"
When a lot of full-grown men
Want to act like kids again,
There is just one old Revere Beach, after all

GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE YOU KNOW IN AND AROUND BOSTON

WHILE he does not exploit his talents, it is a fact that Editor John Murphy of the City Record Boston's municipal paper, is a finished water color artist. Just how the municipal editor is on his vacation and a snapshot taken by one of his friends and sent to City Hall shows him busily engaged in reproducing one of the picturesque bits of scenery near Annisquam. Besides being an expert with the brush he is the official lightning calculator of the administration, being called upon to furnish most of the statistics that are constantly being sought by the Mayor's office

IT isn't many that would lose an opportunity to make $550 in one day without turning a hand, but that is what Dr. P. J. Kingsley, the well-known Dorchester physician, did a few days ago. He attended the auction sale of the furnishings of the home of former Governor Guild. A rosewood piano of antique design was knocked down to him for $150. It was beautifully carved with a highly polished case and mother of pearl keys and was bought by the M. D largely as an ornament for his home. Within ten hours he was the recipient of eight offers for the instrument, the last from the wife of a Harvard professor and seeking the bargain for $500. "I might be tempted to sell the piano but you know that old song 'My Wife Won't Let Me.' Well that happens to me," says the doctor.

THERE are quite a few persons who seek employment in city service through the Mayor's office. In fact a good many of the Mayor's callers are office seekers, but the individual who tackled Eddie Moore, the Mayor's advisory secretary, with a proposition to go to work takes the sugar bun. "I'll guarantee to clear the Common of all the bums and those you don't want there in a week for $100," he said "How'll I do it? With these," he said, as he exhibited two brawny arms and a pair of rugged fists. "What they do you suppose I got 'em for." Secretary Moore thought that such treatment might be a little too strenuous even for Common victims and referred him to Police Commissioner O'Meara as the proper official to furnish him with employment.

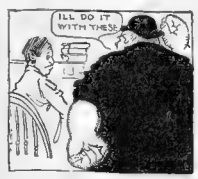
SECRETARY FOLSOM of the board of assessors is not one of those who suffers much from the heat. He has a substantial house and he lives five months of the year upon it, managing to escape much of the warm weather of the city. As an enjoyable adjunct he has a motor boat that can clip off some fast miles and many of the City Hall employes have been the recipient of joy rides on the water with the secretary as a host.



HOW long will it take me to learn to swim? Quite a number of those who visit the public bathing beaches for the first time ask the instructors that question. Instructor Joe Goode of the L street bath answers the question with an experience he had with five boys who visited the South Boston beach for the first time last week. They all wanted to know how to swim. The instructor gave them their first lesson and then promised the lad who was the most proficient in one week a ticket for the ball game. At the end of seven days the winner of the ticket was able to navigate twenty-five yards in the water without exertion. The others had all learned how to keep afloat and could swim a short distance. And they were not exceptionally apt pupils at that.

IT must be a case to be well known, when most of the walk about alone through city streets. They do not hear the word oozing mouth to ear "That's so and so," as they pass down some thoroughfare along in town.

Yet, take "Ben" Wells, who used to be the fire leader. Say, why, he has got a wide acquaintanceship. It stalks abroad. From lip to lip there floats the words in spats and spells "Gik on ter him. There goes Ben Wells." "Just turn yer head and yer kin see who once held superintendency of city streets." "He is O. K." "There goes Ben Wells," you hear them say. Through Tremont street or Washington, his form of stalwartness plods on and in the crowd he's passing by one after t'other gives the cry

"There goes Ben Wells."
"There goes Ben Wells."
"There goes Ben Wells"
"There goes Ben Wells."

YOU'VE heard about the "Eleanor." The pertest craft you ever saw, she is the politician's yacht for taking down to clam bakes hot the leaders and the rank and file, who run all things on Noddle Isle. John Sullivan and "Joe" Conry have sailed in that ship's company. Then Donovan, whose ferries ran up to the time Mayor Fitzgerald began to reign first Nine in City Hall, has listened to the whistles real on Nix's Mate from off her deck, when fog banks made her seem a speck.

Some mighty hefty plans were made within the cabin cushion laid. "Pat" Kennedy who run the ward has often times put his foot on board and given forth while on the main how Democrats, a fall campaign for city places, ought to work. "Jim" Nolan, never known to shirk his duty in a party fight, has patrolled Boston Light. Tom Dalton, clerk of district court, has proven, too, how good a sport was pulling sculpins from the brine, when anchored off buoy No. 9.

The Eleanor still runs below, but some have lost their hold you know on ward affairs. The younger crew are now days planning what to do, so that the vote may be brought out. Good natured Bill McClellan, stoutly maintains his grip on old Ward 1, but in Ward 2 new leaders run the places held by those who saw old ocean from the Eleanor.

CONGRESSMAN LEONARD FOSS enjoys a drive in and about Cohasset, his Summer home, in a four-seated surrey, and is invariably accompanied by a driver. Since his election to the National House of Representatives and his publicity given his name as one of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Mr. Foss attracts considerable attention. Here is a story told of Mr. Foss which is gospel truth, for it comes from one who saw the incident:

One afternoon Mr Foss, accompanied by his driver, was driving along Atlantic avenue, Green Hill, Nantasket, in the direction of Jerusalem Road. Several young men connected with a Roxbury outing club saw Mr. Foss and one of them, wishing to get a "rise" from the gubernatorial candidate, yelled, "Hello, Governor! How does it look for the State House?" Instantly, as if by a sudden impulse, the driver turned his head in the direction of the questioner, saluted and bowed his head.

Meanwhile Mr. Foss, true to his Sphinx-like attitude on the gubernatorial situation, did not move his head one way or the other. This led to much speculation on the part of a number of loungers who did not know Mr. Foss as to which was which in the party.

HENRY ABRAHAMS, who, as secretary of the Central Labor Union has captured all labor records for addressing church gatherings, is out with the following story on Representative William H. O'Brien of Ward 16, the vice-president of the C. L. U.:

While speaking at a church out in Ward 14, I chanced into the Sunday school. And, wishing to test the children's knowledge on an important point in scriptural life, asked the little ones this question:

"If Noah had three sons, Shem, Ham and Japheth, who was the father of those boys?"

A little red headed fellow ventured the guess that it was Ham, while still other children were equally positive that either Shem or Japheth was the father of the three

Then, thinking to make the point clear by a simple illustration, and being conscious of the fact that our vice-president was known to almost every man, woman and child in that section of the city, I said

"Representative O'Brien has two children, Margaret and Thomas—who is the father of Margaret and Thomas O'Brien?"

"Mr. O'Brien, of course," replied the little red-headed fellow, who had been at a loss to answer properly before

"Well," I went on, "Noah had three boys, Shem, Ham and Apheth, who was the father of those children?

And every mother's son and daughter of the entire class rose up in a solid body, while their shrill little voices chanted in perfect if somewhat inharmonious unison

"Why! Representative O'Brien, of course!"

THE establishment of the new bureau of information as an adjunct of the Mayor's office has so increased the telephone service that it has become necessary to put in a new switchboard, double the size of the old one, and install a new telephone operator. The new hello girl is Miss Callahan, who became proficient in the art of managing a switchboard through service at the Fitzgerald campaign headquarters during the last municipal campaign. Under the new order of things the Mayor's office is available by telephone up to 8 p. m.

LAY OF THE LAST VACATIONIST

THIS is the happy day
When vacationists are gay,
Seek a shady nook that's cool,
Drop your fly into the pool;
Get a bite, jerk, swear,
You've smashed
Your rod
In two.

WHEN the setting sun grows dim
When 100 feet from camp
You're the victim of a cramp.
If a farmer hadn't
Saved you
You'd have Died.

THROUGH the forest paths you tread;
Bluest sky is overhead,
Interlaced with many million waving boughs.
But while you on pleasure roam,
At the tent you call your home
All your food and clothes
Are eaten
Up by Cows

WITH the instincts of a brute
You go out some birds to shoot
(Brute?—No. "Victim" would be better, would it not?)
See a turkey; think it's wild;
Kill it. Gee! the owner's riled!
And it costs five bones
To pay
For what You got.

PRETTY girl and birch canoe!
Cosy! Only room for two!
All around the moonlit water floweth wet.
Love reciprocated—Bliss!
Hurried hug and hasty kiss!
Yells for help!
The doggoned
Boat has Overset!

SO, my friend, if you're left out
When outings are passed about,
And a sombre frown your classic profile mars.
Pause! Reflect! It's just as sweet
To die in a crowded street;
Crushed by autos
Or the Peaceful
Trolley cars.

IF you walked past Keith's, or any other high-class vaudeville theatre, and saw a bill like the one on the left advertised, would it appeal to you? Would the names of these artists make you go down into your pockets for the price of a seat?

What. You wouldn't go across the street to see such a bill? You never heard of any of these people? You think a manager has an awful nerve to put on such a bunch of of unknowns before a Boston audience?

That is what ninety-nine theatregoers out of a hundred would say, and yet—take our word for it—this vaudeville bill includes more stars of the first magnitude, probably, than ever appeared or ever will appear on a programme together. In fact, the expense of presenting such a bill as this would be so great that the manager who attempted it would have to double or treble his admission prices.

The reason this bill does not appeal to you at first glance is because the real names of the artists are given instead of their stage names. For example, Joseph Relinsky is none other than Joe Welch and David Woolfeld is the great David Warfield of "Music Master" fame

Delia O'Callaghan was Trixie Friganza's name until the courts gave her the right to exchange it for the more euphonius title by which she is now known. John Chancellor is Chauncey Olcott, and Elsie Bierbower is Elsie Janis. Samuel Barnett and Edwin Fitzgerald are the comedians who have amused you so many times under the names of Sam Bernard and Eddie Foy

The great Mme. Nordica's real name is Lillian Norton. Billy Gould, now appearing with Valeska Suratt, used to answer in school to the name of William J. Flannery, and Cliff Gordon, the "German Senator" started life as Jacob Solpetre.

SCIENCE AND THE CYCLOPS

POLYPHEMUS, THE ENRAGED CYCLOPS, HURLING THE ROCK AT THE ESCAPING ULYSSES AND HIS COMPANIONS. PAINTED BY A. BOCKLIN

The Strange Homeric Legend Confirmed by Recent Experiments in Breeding One Eyed Fish and Frogs

MODERN science has just furnished remarkable evidence that the monstrous one-eyed Cyclops of Homeric and other ancient legends may really have existed.

In the Journal of Experimental Zoology, a leading scientific publication, Charles R. Stockard describes a series of experiments, in which he subjected the embryos of many fish to the influence of magnesium salts dissolved in sea water. A large percentage of the embryos treated in this way were found to possess only one eye, situated in the middle of the head, instead of the ordinary pair. These embryos batch out and swim about in a perfectly normal manner, and the single eye is evidently fully functional. The mouth is displaced toward the stomach, and gives rise to a proboscis-like structure. The abnormality was present in varying degrees in different cases, ranging from embryos in which the eyes were merely unusually close together, through the typical Cyclopean condition, to others in which no eye at all was developed.

A type of monster with one perfect asymmetrical eye and the other eye of the normal pair either reduced or absent was also frequently met with during the experiments. The investigator and other scientific authorities suggest that these experiments indicate that the monstrous Cyclops of legend may have been produced by environment during development. In other words, they think that the ancestors of Polyphemus and the other Cyclops took an overdose of magnesium salts in their nourishment or some other substance which has the same effect on human beings as magnesium on fish.

Why the presence of magnesium salts should cause abnormal eye development is a mystery if biology which is as yet unsolved.

It is a significant fact that in the ancient legends of many lands there are persistent stories of cyclops, or one-eyed monsters. Not only in the Greek mythology are they mentioned. In the story of Sindbad the Sailor in the Arabian Nights there is a highly circumstantial account of a giant who was "as tall as a pulm tree, and perfectly black, and had one eye, which flamed like a burning coal in the middle of his forehead."

The most famous cyclops was Polyphemus, who is described in Homer's Odyssey. When Ulysses and his companions were returning home they landed on the island of the Cyclopes in search of supplies. They were seized by Polyphemus, who put them in a cave and ate two of them every day.

The crafty Ulysses saved the remnant of his companions by making Polyphemus drunk and then destroying the giant's only eye by thrusting into it a sharp stake, made redhot at the end. They were still in the cave, which was blocked at the entrance by a great stone. Ulysses showed his companions how to escape by concealing themselves under the bellies of the Cyclops sheep. Polyphemus felt the backs of the sheep as they passed out of the cave, but did not feel underneath.

When Ulysses had reached his ship he could not restrain himself from yelling his derision at the baffled giant. Polyphemus hurled a great rock in the direction of the voice, and nearly upset the Greeks' ships. This episode is the subject of the famous picture by Turner, entitled "Ulysses Deriding Polyphemus."

Polyphemus also figures in the story of Acis and Galatea. He pursued Galatea, a beautiful sea nymph, with his ferocious attentions, but she loved the youth Acis, and shunned the monster. One day Polyphemus surprised Acis and Galatea meeting under the shelter of a cliff. He hurled a great rock at Acis, killing him, and from his blood originated the River Acis, which rises at the foot of Mount Aetna.

While the ancient Greeks commonly speak of a Cyclops as a one-eyed monster, they often represent him in art as having two ordinary eyes and one eye of extraordinary size in the middle of his forehead.

There appears to be some connection between these ancient legends and the existence of a spot called the pineal gland, midway between the eyes, in the centre of the forehead. According to physiologists this is the vestige of a third eye, which in some former stage of existence was a working organ.

Mrs. Anna Besant, the well-known theosophist, has recently announced that her aim was to develop the third eye among her followers, which would give them a mental and moral vision far beyond that of existing human beings.

The advantages of an extra eye—making three altogether—seem much superior to any gain that would result to humanity through a development of the Cyclopean principle, though the latter would considerably cut down the present outlay for eyeglasses.

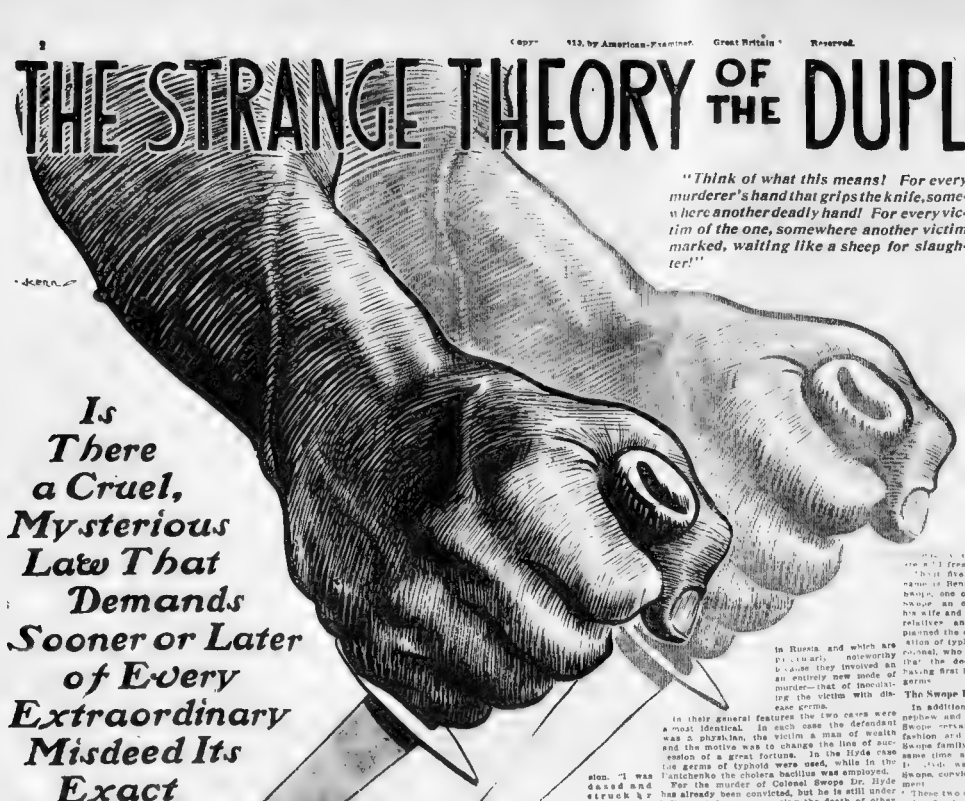
THE STRANGE THEORY OF THE DUPLICATE CRIME



"Think of what this means! For every murderer's hand that grips the knife, somewhere another deadly hand! For every victim of the one, somewhere another victim marked, waiting like a sheep for slaughter!"

Is There a Cruel, Mysterious Law That Demands Sooner or Later of Every Extraordinary Misdeed Its Exact Parallel?

What Is the Law of the Parallel?

By Max Nordau,

Author of "Degeneration," etc.

CRIME is the most mysterious of human actions. Its effects are more mysterious than crime itself. Old axioms are based upon a foundation of truth always, though their interpretation may be faulty. Why is it that "a lie will go round the world while truth is waking a mile?" And why is it that practically every strong criminal act will demand a parallel?

Yet so I have found it. Is evil stronger than good? Do we respond to the suggestions, the vibrations, of evil more quickly than we respond to those of good? Why does primitive man fear those manifestations that harm and which he personifies as a devil more than the personified being who is ruler of good and whom he calls God? Why does primitive man propitiate evil forces before he thinks of the good?

Mind stuff of men is a curious stuff indeed. More and more have I marvelled at this strange phenomenon of the parallel crime, and more and more do I come to believe in the essential harmony of one or more minds with another. These minds, like all primitive ones, vibrate more quickly to the waves of evil; are most sensitive to the criminal suggestion. They are connected by invisible threads. Being sensitive to evil, being harmonious with their unknown doubles, it follows that they are constantly open to the sinister suggestions that emanate from each

And so when murder is done, outrages are done, robberies are done, that sympathetic mind performs imitates its sister. That expansion, it seems to me, is more adequate to rest forever on the shoulder of "coincidence" when we know that continued coincidence must point to the existence of a law, even though we do not understand that law.

EXTRAORDINARY paralleling of unusual crimes between the time of commission and the time of discovery of what may be called the initial misdeed, has recently aroused the attention of criminologists. The coincidence between the murder of [illegible] wife by Porter Charlton in Italy and the murder of his wife by Dr. Crippen has prompted Dr. Jacques Bertillon, the famous Frenchman, and Max Nordau, the equally famous German, to formulate a strange theory of the law of the duplicate crime—a not understood sympathy whose working demands the paralelling, sooner or later, of the offense.

On this page, J. F. Wilkinson, who was the late Inspector Byrne's colleague, discusses the new theory, and gives remarkable instances of recent crimes in this country, which illustrate the workings of this mysterious "law."

"Alma Kellner had been killed by a club."

"A hideous murder was perpetrated by Albert Wolter."

By James E. Wilkinson,

(Associate of the late Inspector Thomas F. Byrnes.)

NORDAU and Bertillon have now voiced a theory which was held by Inspector Byrnes during the latter part of his career but which he felt would be thought so fantastic that he never voiced it except to his intimates.

Byrnes called the phenomenon the law of Duplicate Crime. He held that every unusual, striking crime in which either passion or intellect played an unusually strong part had and must have its parallel either at the time or shortly after. For instance, if a murder were done that had extraordinary elements of premeditation, motive and execution, sooner or later [illegible] would be found to [illegible] about the time of the other. Sometimes the duplicate crime would be committed [illegible] and sometimes [illegible] first to appear. But invariably crime trailed two behind. So in the case of defalcations, of [illegible] robberies and crimes against society.

As it is to be understood, is far different from the crimes which follow the publication of the details of an offense. There the course of suggestion [illegible] some of the arguments against the [illegible] mainly by the newspapers. The [illegible] it be murder or robbery [illegible] sends. The weaker minds, susceptible to the suggestion of criminality, receive their [illegible] from the printed page. The similar crime [illegible]

The duplicate Crime law operates without [illegible] of printed suggestion. The parallel [illegible] [illegible] each other before any of the principals could know of the acts of his criminal double [illegible] case of Dr. Crippen and of young Porter [illegible] form a perfect illustration of the working [illegible] mysterious system. Charlton, an American [illegible] famous and of excellent education, married a woman who resembled [illegible] and even in appearance Belle Elmore, the wife of Dr. Crippen. They both went abroad to live.

Charlton confessed to having killed his wife in a fit of passion. He hid her body in a trunk and sent it to Lake Como, Italy. He tried to escape to this country and was captured before he had a chance to land. He was unable to give any adequate reason for the murder. He declared that he had acted upon an irresistible impulse while in a fit of passion. "I was [illegible] and struck her with the short leg of a mallet. I struck her two or three times," he said.

Charlton's wife was a much larger woman than he physically, and of dominant personality.

Crippen, it is supposed, killed his wife also in a fit of depression. In no other way can the result of conflict between the two be explained. Crippen, being a doctor, had special knowledge at his command. He disclaimed the body according to the charges by the English police, burnt the bones and buried the flesh of the woman in his cellar beneath a mass of quicklime. He tried to escape to America and was captured aboard the steamer. In Crippen's case there enters the element of the other woman which is lacking in that of Charlton, but it is not enough to overturn the odd coincidences present in each.

Charlton killed his wife in May. Belle Elmore's real name took place probably the latter part of March. In Charlton's mind a weaker duplicate of Crippen's and did the message of criminal suggestion set vibrating by the physician find its other pole in the mind of the young American, forcing him to a similar murder? The Inspector would have argued so. I do not know.

The explanation of the law is not [illegible] terms of psychic. Telepathy in its larger sense implies a conscious effort to implant a thought or the impulse for an action in another mind, not necessarily harmonious. The Law of the Duplicate Crime seems to be independent of any conscious effort. Somewhere in the world there is a mind keyed to the same pitch as that of the first criminal. The explosion of nerve cells which results in the crime of passion runs along like the fire in a fuse between the mysterious connection and, whether the parallel mind be three miles or three thousand miles away, the first explosion sets that mind off and the duplicate offense results, modified only by the varying circumstances of the principals. The Germans believe in the Doppelganger—the double which each man has. The theosophists and the Hindoos believe in the astral body. It is a part of all ancient religions that every act has its duplicate in another sphere not under the cognizance of dwellers in this. How if there were a grain of truth in all this but that what man has been trying to recognize and what he has formulated as the Doppelganger, be but the dim recognition that every human mind has its exact counterpart here on earth, a mind that is responsive to the same vibrations and so delicately sympathetic to the mind of its double that it must perforce repeat the actions which that mind creates?

The Kellner-Wheeler Parallel.

It is an odd theory, it is true; maybe fantastic; maybe not. How otherwise account for the coincidences? Coincidences repeated beyond the bounds of coincidence to perpetuate a half dozen, become a law. So it is of the duplicate crimes.

In December of last year a girl, Alma Kellner, of Louisville, mysteriously disappeared. No trace of her was discovered until June of this year. Then her body was found hidden in the cellar of a school house. She had been wearing trinkets valued at a small sum, but there were other reasons for supposing that she had been murdered for robbery. Joseph Wheeler, a janitor, who disappeared shortly after the [illegible] was accused of the crime and [illegible] Grand Jury. She had been [illegible] with it.

In the meantime, between the date of the Kellner murder and the discovery of the body, a hideous murder was perpetrated by Albert Wolter, of New York. He enticed fifteen year old Ruth Wheeler to his rooms in an East Side tenement house and there murdered her—whether for robbery or other purposes is equally uncertain, so in the Kellner case. Was Wolter the mental double of the man who killed the Kellner child, and did the train of thought create by that murder find its response in the German youth, prompting him to a deed that to this day he has not seem to realize?

Perhaps the most striking [illegible] of these parallel crimes were the Hyde-Swope and the Pantchenko-Buturlin cases, which occurred at the same time, the former in this country and the latter in Russia and which are [illegible] particularly noteworthy because they involved an entirely new mode of murder—that of inoculating the victim with disease germs.

In their general features the two cases were almost identical. In each case the defendant was a physician, the victim a man of wealth and the motive was to change the line of succession of a great fortune. In the Hyde case the germs of typhoid were used, while in the Pantchenko the cholera bacillus was employed.

For the murder of Colonel Swope Dr. Hyde has already been convicted, but he is still under indictment for encompassing the death of other members of the Swope family. Dr. Pantchenko has not yet been tried, although he has confessed that Baron Buturlin, for whose murder he is about to be tried, was by no means his only victim. In this respect, too, the two cases are strikingly similar, the culprit in each instance posing calmly encompassed the death of every one who stood between himself and the fortune to which he aspired.

The Russian crimes were planned and committed at various times within the past two or three years, but it was not until the death of Baron Buturlin and the subsequent confession of Dr Pantchenko that they were discovered. In the meantime, and before he could possibly have had any knowledge of Dr. Pantchenko's diabolical plans, Dr. Hyde is believed to have been duplicating the Russian crimes in this country, the only difference being that whereas the Russian was using the cholera germ, Dr. Hyde was inoculating his victims with typhoid germs.

The crime for which Dr. Pantchenko is to be tried was the murder of Baron Vasilli Buturlin of St. Petersburg. According to the doctor's confession Buturlin was to inherit $4,000,000 from his father, which would go to his sister, Countess De Lacy, however, in the event of the Baron's death.

Killing by Cholera Germs.

To obtain this large fortune, declared Dr. Pantchenko, Count De Lacy offered the doctor $200,000 to put Baron Buturlin out of the way, and a proportionate amount if he would bring about the deaths of certain other legatees. The doctor found it a comparatively easy matter to earn his bloody fee, for Baron Buturlin suffered a slight attack of arthritis and Dr. Pantchenko was called in. At the first opportunity that offered the doctor injected cholera germs into his patient's blood and the Baron's death followed in due course. The Baroness sanctioned [illegible] and the investigation that followed resulted in the doctor's complete confession, in which he established himself as a deliberate murderer. In every instance he had used disease germs to bring about the victim's death.

The facts in the Hyde-Swope case which were [illegible] at the doctor's trial last April, are well fresh in the public mind.

Until five years ago the doctor, whose full name is Bennett C. Hyde, married Miss Frances Swope, one of the nieces of Colonel Thomas H. Swope, an octogenarian millionaire. Between his wife and the Swope millions stood nine other relatives and Dr. Hyde is accused of having planned the death of all of them by the inoculation of typhoid germs. In the case of the aged colonel, who died October 3, 1909, it was charged that the doctor administered strychnine after having first inoculated his victim with the fever germs.

The Swope Duplicate Crime.

In addition to the colonel Christian Swope, a nephew, and [illegible] Hyde, [illegible] one of the old Swope servants, met their deaths in a similar fashion and no less than eight members of the Swope family were stricken with typhoid at the same time, although all of the latter recovered. Dr. Hyde was tried for the murder of Colonel Swope, convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

These two cases, which stand unique in the annals of crime lend considerable weight to the theory of the criminologists that cleverly planned crimes are usually committed in duplicate. It is certain that there was no material connection between the two physicians and there would be none but a mutual, real mode of communication between them.

Think of what this means! For every murderer's hand that grips the knife there must be another deadly hand, and for every victim of the one there another victim is marked, waiting like a sheep for the slaughter.

These are only a few of those crimes which seem to support this strange theory.

Another striking instance of the parallel course of crimes were the Runyon and the D'Apree embezzlements. Chester B. Runyon, a young married man, paying teller of the Windsor Trust Company, New York, walked out of the bank one Saturday afternoon with $96,317 in bills, packed in a suitcase. For a week he eluded the detectives, who were hunting him by remaining in a flat which Laura M. Currie, a woman of the Tenderloin, with whom he had become infatuated, had furnished for him. Influenced partly by the reward of $2,500 and 10 per cent of the amount recovered, which the bank offered for the arrest of Runyon, and partly by the fear of her own connection with the matter, the Currie woman notified the police of Runyon's whereabouts and he was arrested indicted and pleaded guilty, receiving a sentence of seven years. The unique feature of the crime was the fact that the defaulting teller was happily married, was not addicted to gambling or speculation, and stole an enormous amount of money in a fashion that was almost ludicrous to squander upon a woman who didn't realize its value and would have been contented with one-thousandth part of the amount stolen.

Remarkable as was this crime in these respects, it was duplicated the very same afternoon in Marseilles, where Lucien D'Apree, paying teller of the Bank of Villon Freres, walked out with some two hundred thousand francs, which he lavished on an unattractive grisette named Mathilde Laurent, with whom he had become acquainted only a few days previously. For several days the couple dissipated the bank's funds, and then the young woman delivered her generous companion over to the authorities, having learned his identity from the newspapers. D'Apree made no defense, and was sentenced to ten years. Like Runyon, he was married to a charming young woman who was prostrated for two weeks as a result of the disgrace which her husband had incurred.

"THE SORROW OF BEING BORN ROYAL"

The Unhappy Daughter of the Late King Leopold Tells Why She Believes the Archduke "John Orth" Is Not Dead but Hides, Because Like Herself He Was Sickened with the Wicked Hypocrisies of Court Life.

By Princess Louise of Belgium.

"Courts are merciless to princesses who break the royal code of etiquette, but kind to princes who beat their wives and break every commandment but the eleventh."

"The Balkan Princes lashed their bare backs with a cowhide whip."

"My husband left me, helpless, and fainting, tied to a bed."

"The pretty Crown Princess of Roumania is the most outrageous flirt in Europe."

THE disappearance of the Archduke John Salvator, of Austria, after his renunciation of all claims to the throne, forms one of the most remarkable chapters of a day when the profession of kingship is becoming threadbare.

He gave up all his pretensions, says his cousin, the Princess Louise, of Belgium, because the sorrow of being born royal proved too much for him.

She was the eldest daughter of the late King Leopold, of Belgium, and married, in 1875, her cousin, Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg, who resided at the Court of Vienna.

After thirty years of married life, during which her husband treated her with increasing cruelty, she ran away with a young officer. She was caught and incarcerated in an asylum, although clearly sane. Her husband obtained a divorce and she was released on hard conditions.

By Her Royal Highness Princess Louise of Belgium.

Paris, Aug. 7.

I HAVE never believed that my cousin, the Archduke John Salvator—John Orth, as he preferred to call himself—was dead. He ran away from the Court of Austria because he was wearied with the colossal hypocrisies, the sickening immoralities, the gilded vice and assumed piety of royal life. I know that he was not drowned when he went away. If he is never heard from, it is because he is only too glad to be forgotten by the world that disgusted him.

The only man he cared for in Austria was his cousin, the Crown Prince Rudolph, and he is dead. He died in the most pitiful manner—a suicide. Yes, I repeat, a suicide, although so many believe that he was killed at Meyerling. He was yet another victim of the Moloch of royalty.

Few know what a charming fellow Rudolph was. Royalty throttles genius, as it exalts stupidity. Rudolph was warm-hearted, brilliant, talented, broad-minded, democratic. For such a soul, the life of a court like that of Austria means death, moral or physical.

Rudolph was forced into an unhappy marriage. I know what I am speaking of, for was not his wife my own sister, Stephanie? They were utterly unsuited to one another. They fought from the first day of their marriage. But they were required by royal convention to appear as a happy pair in public and go to church together regularly. As long as a prince does that, he may do what he pleases in private. But Rudolph was not a man to accept hypocritical royal conventions.

He sought the companionship of one he loved. They spent long hours of freedom together in the little shooting box at Meyerling, in the woods and in the mountains. He planned to go away with his companion, to marry her and live a quiet life as a private citizen. When the Emperor learned that, Rudolph was warned that all the power of the Empire would be exerted to prevent him from carrying out his plan. He knew that he could find no refuge in any monarchical country. He did not believe that even in America there could be peace for him.

So Rudolph and the Baroness Marie Vetsera committed suicide to escape from the tyranny of the royal caste.

I believe that in the suicide of Rudolph, the elopement of Louise of Saxony, the escapades of the Archduke Leopold Ferdinand, in my own revolt against my unspeakable husband, in all the incidents that disturbed the sepulchral calm of the Austrian court, it was the reckless and rebellious spirit of Archduke John at work. He was the oldest of them. I do not say that he approved of everything they did, but he spurred the needs of revolt.

Those who argue that John Orth must be dead because he has not claimed his mother's fortune know nothing of him. What does a fortune know nothing of him. What does a ardent soul desire? To forget the world and to lead a life of freedom and meditation. As long as he had enough to live on, the loss of millions was utterly indifferent to him.

I call him to mind now—his slight, active well-knit figure, his strong jaw, wilful and scornful air, with which he regarded most men and things. I see him as he came to lunch with me or my sister Stephanie. There were two different men in him. One whom life had embittered to such a point that he was pitiless to the vices and faults of others. The other was the man that occasionally came to the surface in the society of those who appreciated his fine qualities.

My sister and I kept silence while he talked to us about the future of the world. You may remember that he shocked Europe by publicly declaring that Austria would have to fight Germany or Germany would rule Austria. Well, what he foresaw so clearly has come to pass.

Sometimes he sat at the piano and played his own charming compositions, full of grace and sadness. One of them I remember was called "When I Think of Thee, Margarethe." It was a name dear to him, the name of one he had lost. This name he gave to the ship on which he sailed for South America.

He was a young, silent, lonely dreamer, versed in a court that was involved on beliefs and traditions. He believed that a common laborer might be as good as a king in a country where no man might sit down to table unless he had sixteen quarterings. John invited a distinguished inventor one day to lunch when one of his imperial cousins was present. For this he received a crushing rebuke from the Emperor.

He wished to offer himself as a candidate for the vacant throne of Bulgaria, in order that he might put into operation some of his ideas in that wild country. The Emperor forbade his candidature. The throne was taken by my brother-in-law, Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg, now Czar of Bulgaria.

John was keenly interested in his work as an army officer. He found that the majority of the Austrian artillery officers were incapable of handling modern guns of long range. He published this and other facts in a pamphlet. For this he was rebuked by his uncle, the Archduke Albert, commander-in-chief of the army, who told him previously that his statements were all wrong. To this John retorted:

"You are an old fossil."

For this outrageous speech to a field marshal, in his uniform John was removed from the army by the Emperor, although allowed to retain his rank and titles. He scorned to do his.

"I wish no mercy," he said, to those who proposed to intercede for him with the Emperor. "If there is no place here for a prince with ideas, I will find room for a plain man somewhere in the world."

John finally renounced all his titles and succession to the throne and became a plain subject under the name of "John Orth."

He purchased and fitted out an old steamship, which he called the Santa Margharetha, and sailed in her from London in the Spring of 1890. The ship was lost with all hands while going round Cape Horn in the Autumn of the year. But I know that John had previously landed in the Argentine Republic and is now living upon a ranch in a faraway part of that vast land. He does not wish to be found.

His departure seemed like the going out of the sun from our sepulchral court. My husband's conduct to me quickly became more brutal in the absence of John, whom he feared. He abandoned himself to drink. His depraved propensities revealed themselves in all their nakedness. Many a time in wild rage he tore my clothes from me and inflicted cruel injuries on me. When I first attempted to escape from his brutalities I was brought me back and left me helpless and fainting, tied to the bed. At last goaded to madness, I ran away from him with the assistance of a young officer who was devoted to me. The world knows the sad story of my experiences after that.

And yet Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg was considered an ornament to the court of Vienna while I am now excluded from it.

Courts are merciless to princesses who break the royal code of etiquette, but kind to princes who beat their wives and break every commandment but the eleventh—not to get found out.

Another episode that seemed to flow from John Orth's rebellious teachings soon came to rile the stagnant miasmatic pond of court life. His niece, the Archduchess Louise, had been tied in marriage to a drunken boor, Frederick Augustus of Saxony, the new king of country. She was a bright volatile sensitive creature, and such companionship was death to her.

In 1902 she ran away with her children's tutor, Andre Giron, a dapper little Belgian, not because she loved him, but because he was the only gentle, civilized human being she was allowed to see. The princes she met were examples of vice and stupidity. She has since married an Italian singer, Enrico Toselli.

Her brother, the Archduke Leopold Salvator, of very similar temperament to hers, was also chafing against the conventions of royalty. He decided to run away at the same time as his sister, and took with him a pretty little actress, Wilhelmina Adamovics, whom he married. I must say that Leopold was a brick and no unreasonable fellow. He made his wife join a colony of eccentrics living without clothes and feeding on vegetables, as they supposed Adam and Eve lived. Because his wife could not stand this he abandoned her. He has now become a private citizen of Switzerland under the name of Leopold Wolfing.

During my residence at the Court of Vienna many such examples of royal debauchery came under my observation. Behind the scenes were revealed to me. The reigning Grand Duke of Hesse, grandson of Queen Victoria, was an effeminate degenerate, who spent most of his time knitting openwork stockings and doing embroidery. His wife, a handsome and vigorous woman, left him for this reason and has since married the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia.

Many secret acts of vice and princes can only be hinted at. Strange forms of madness taint many royal families. The heir of one of the Balkan principalities has that peculiar mania that leads a man to torture women. He makes the director of the opera troupe send him a troupe of chorus girls. When the prince flogs them round the room, lashing their bare backs with a cowhide whip till they drop senseless from loss of blood. Some of them never recover.

Perhaps the most repulsive monster in all the European royal circle was the Grand Duke Sergius, of Russia. He habitually beat his beautiful wife, yet she continued to stand between him and death by accompanying him everywhere, for the Nihilists hated him worse than any man in Russia, but they would not kill him while his wife was with him. They had more chivalry than Sergius. At last one day they caught him without her, and that was the end.

Courts can utter no condemnation harsh enough for those princesses who threw conventionality and hypocrisy to the winds, but they are gentler to those who conceal their peccadilloes. The Crown Princess of Roumania, formerly Marie of Edinburgh, the prettiest princess in Europe, dresses very becomingly with a large gold cross on her bosom and courtiers and newspapers even speak of her as a saintly character. In my observation she is the most outrageous flirt in Europe.

When King Edward of England died I was almost nauseated by recitals of his goodness and kindness. I do not deny that he had good qualities, but it is also true that he devoted most of his life to self-indulgence. And a thing that few people outside of court circles know is that Edward was almost incredibly mean in his affairs. I have heard of an affair in which he sent a pot of Dundee marmalade, when a handsome present was naturally expected.

Perhaps the most innocent royal prank that came under my notice was when the young Duke of Braganza, of the dethroned Portuguese royal family, stopped an humble funeral procession to jump his horse over the coffin.

One thing more I will add that is beyond question the culminating sorrow of royal life. When I wished to reach my dear mother's dying bedside I was not allowed to enter Belgium to go to the funeral. My unfortunate sister Stephanie, who succeeded in entering the country, was driven away from the funeral.

The ordinary subject of a monarchy has more or less rights under the law. The Prince and Princess know no law but the will of the King who is in his turn governed by his ideas of ceremonial and his court officials. We are slaves of slaves.

The Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, and Her Latest Husband, Enrico Toselli.

"Everybody worried poor King Edward for money."

"Archduke John renounced his succession, resigning his Archducal pursuits of the Emperor's favor."

The Oberammergau Theatre, Nestling Under the Hills. The Natural Stage Setting Will Be Duplicated for the Passion Players in America

Oberammergau, August 4, 1910.

TWO years ago when I met Card and Schwarz in Italy I asked him why he thought of the very new drama. Mr. Guerrieri, I believe had special reference to some words, supposed to fall in which the figure of the Christ was in red rod.

The sentence of the Cardinal caused both to go to Rome at once to see Oberammergau. Not only did they see the Passion Play twice, a supposed heresy of such performances of very good dramas to go [illegible] many more occasions—but he also spoke a thanksgiving of the Passion Play which he had never seen here.

I was greater than I or most, said the Cardinal.

I came to Oberammergau without prejudice. I think I have even partly succeeded in what I have seen and how I am disconcerted.

To me the [illegible] was a hole, there was nothing [illegible] and there was nothing that appealed to the eyes of the Passion Play.

HOW WE "GET THE LAUGHS"

Methods Described Here Solve the Mystery of Amusing with Lines Stupid to Read.

By Taylor Holmes.

Leading Man in H. B. Harris' Company Playing "The Commuters."

Do you know that if you took the libretto of the funniest play, farce or comedy ever written, and read it in the seclusion of your library that it wouldn't strike you as being particularly funny?

Do you know that if the lines of a comedy are funny enough in themselves to make the actors laugh at the first rehearsal that the comedy is a most invariably a failure? To think more specifically, do you realize that the jokes, witticisms and lines that get the biggest laughs from an audience really look the flattest and most inane in print?

Why is it that we find ourselves in convulsions when we hear these lines spoken? How is it that the comedian can take these lines and make us laugh at them? How is it they get these laughs over the footlights, when in the line itself there is no laugh?

In the first place mental suggestion certainly plays a large part in the art, and autosuggestion as well. When a comedian comes onto the stage he seldom finds his audience in a sufficiently receptive frame of mind, and it is his business to bring them into that proper mental state immediately. How else is this done save by mental suggestion?

If the lines are not funny—and they often are—how else can it be done save by his personality and mentality? Some call it stage presence, others personal magnetism. These terms serve in a way, but they are not sufficient.

The successful comedian feels what he is doing—he simply must do it, or he is a flat failure. He feels the humor of a situation; it permeates his whole being, and this mental atmosphere radiates across the footlights, and the audience gets it, and the more capable the comedian is in this respect, the better the audience gets it, and the larger are the box office receipts.

The absolute necessity for an actor or comedian to feel his part was emphasized by David Belasco in his instructions to Blanche Bates in "Madame Butterfly." In that play there is a scene where the little Japanese girl is waitin for the return of the American naval officer who deserted her and their baby. He had said he would come back and she believed him. Everyone scoffed at her, shunned her; but still she waited trustingly for this man who had tricked her in believing they were married.

One day she sees an American ship in the harbor.

It must be her lover, her husband, returning, and she settles down to watch through one of the little windows of her home. It is night. All the windows save this little one through which she is looking are closed. She sits and waits—it seems to us an hour, two hours. The maid falls asleep; even the little mother re-kes as she sits on the floor. But she never takes her eyes from that window as she watches the lights on the vessel. No more dramatic situation could be imagined. It seems to us as though she waits hours, but it was only three or four minutes.

Why? The answer is in David Belasco's warning to the actress:

"If you desire for an instant to think of what you are doing the effect will not get over the footlights."

Such a suggestion pure and simple.

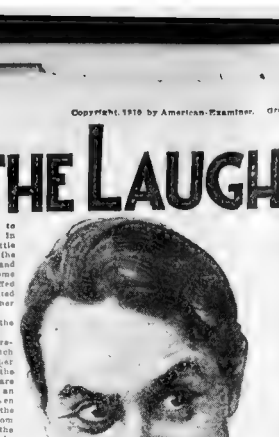
It isn't simply droll antics, ludicrous facial expression or assumed throat tones. The mind itself must play the great part.

But the voice tones, the physique, facial and tonal contortions play a most important part, and these are carefully studied. While to some audience comedians bring these elements into play unconsciously, the reverse is true.

When a comedian finds that an audience laughs at something that he does, either by accident or intuition, he will rivet whatever it was that brought the laugh in his mind until the scene he is playing is over, and when he is alone he will work on the technique, so that he may use it again.



"Mental Suggestion, Pure and Simple."

"The Tone Goes Back Into His Throat."

This may be some peculiarity of his throat, brought out. Of course, he has many other trick of inflection, or something that is mannerisms that are distinctively his own, purely a physical part of him, and he will immediately appropriate it as a means of forcing laughs.

The nasal grunt for which Henry Irving was so severely criticised in serious scenes was used by him with great effect in his comedy scenes. As a matter of fact, it was a throat affection which he couldn't help. It was as much a part of him as the throat itself and when he found he could make people laugh with it, he used it with telling effect.

I would read a comedy line then wait about one beat and, with a toss of the head and a sudden elevating and lowering of the eyebrows, he would direct himself of the nasal "huh, and invariably he would land a laugh.

Contrasts play a very important part in laugh-making. William Gillette frequently uses voice contrasts. His voice is penetrating but thin, and he frequently has as a foil a heavy-voiced villian like Ralph Delmore. In one of his recent successes a thundertoned, muscular, powerfully built man, with formidable gesturing and "business," pointed a revolver at his head, shouting in deep tones:

"I will blow out your brains."

Gillette's thinner form contrasted against his assailant, his cool, quiet manner contrasted as well, and as he calmly raised his hand and brushed aside the weapon, remarked in his thin, clear, languishing tones that hardly reached you, "Oh, I know; but it isn't loaded." he gets a great effect and a sound laugh.

De Wolf Hopper realized the value of physical contrast, and, although the public probably never stop to think that it is done intentionally, he always has a man or woman as his exact opposite in size. With his large person, any number of laughable situations otherwise impossible are worked out.

With Frank Daniels it is just the opposite. He always has as his foil a woman much taller than himself and the grotesqueness of his stage personality is thereby more distinctively

Sothern goes so far as to produce comedy by scientific deduction. He shows as a student in this line. If he is going to make a joke in the matter of picking up a feather duster from the floor and has three steps to take before he reaches the duster, he is as careful and methodical with those three steps as in picking it up.

Nat Goodwin gets his laughs through the assumed sincerity with which he reads his comedy lines. He says:

"I am beginning to feel a little cold; bring me my rings."

And he says this with all the solemnity of a king ordering his royal robes—and it's all a bit.

Three quarters of Francis Wilson's laughs are in his shoulders—his legs; but he also has a manner of throwing his tones back into his throat at the psychological moment to get a laugh, and the tone goes back into his throat at just the proper point, too. He says to a girl:

"Oh it isn't going to hurt you."

There nothing funny in the line, but he knows the guttural tone tickles diaphragms and gets a laugh.

Sol Smith Russell made capital out of the truth that "The laugh is brother to the tear, to such a degree that he never read a strong comedy line without a ripple of pathos in his tone. This little trick played on the sensibilities of the audience made him a millionaire.

It may be that the sudden and elegant contrasts that I have mentioned may have some physical effect on the diaphragm of the hearers. It is in the diaphragm that the laugh starts, and an unexpected contrast such as some that I have recounted may give the muscles of diaphragm a good wiggle and set a laugh going.

HOW TO NAME THE BABY.

A Scientific Scheme to Make Him Healthy, Lucky and Wise---and Please All Relatives.

By "Deborah"

If parents knew and realized the influences of a name not in harmony with the birthday of the child they would soon be a better grade of humanity—poor-no-ases, assholes and prisons would be no more. They would change the inharmonious names at once. The truth of this theory is as old as man.

Max O'Rell once asked Mme. Melba, who took her stage name from her native city, Melbourne, if she would have created future she did instantly. But why Melba? Appeal on the opera bill as plain Nellie Mitchell, her real name.

The God or the Egyptians showed he believed in the science of names and numbers when he gave to Abram and Sarai their names of Abraham and Sarah. The name is the key to life.

Imagine the birth number—the birthday—to be the lock and the name the key. It is obvious that in proportion to the way the key fits the lock the door of life will open easier or harder. Imagine the name to be an arch over the individual with the initial letter as a good cornerstone, the letter in or near the middle the keystone and the end letter a good capstone—the whole name vibrating to a number in harmony with the birth number. The bearer of the name can have little to fear for success.

Humanity is divided into three classes numerically—the ninth day. Beginning with the tenth, the 1 gets in the number 1-2-3 cases, the 2-4-8 class and the 3-6-9 concords. The letters of the first concord, for which the 1-2 numbers are found in A, J, S—I, R, Y—B, K, T. Wherever A, J or S are called 1, B, K or T are called 2, and so on up to the 26th and 27th, where the digits are added together, making 9.

A child born on the first fifth, seventh, tenth, twenty-first, thirty-fifth, nine-teenth, twenty-seventh or twenty-eighth day of the month belongs in this concord and should have the following letters correctly distributed in their name:

A, J, S.
B, K, T.
C, L, U.
D, M, V.
E, N, W.
F, O, X.
G, P, Y.
H, Q, Z.
I, R.

A child born on the 2d, 6th, 8th, 12th, 18th, 20th, 24th, 26th, 30th, is in the 2-4-8 concord, the letters representing which and their numbers are G, L, R—2; F, Q, X—6, and I, R—9.

A birth number is ascertained by the day of the month on which a child is born; if it be on the first day, the birth number is one; if on the second, two, and so on up to the ninth day. Beginning with the tenth, the digits in the number are added together and reduced to one number—thus, the 23d, 5—2—3—5. The sum of the combinations of the name is 5—2—3—5. The sum of the combinations of the name is 5—2—3—5. The sum of the combinations of the name is 5—2—3—5. The sum of the combinations of the name is 5—2—3—5.

"Naming the Baby Is the Most Tragic Event of His Life."

The numerical value of the various letters in the name Alger—better spelled Algar—is 1-3-1-2-9-7, the first of the following: name.

Take now the case of a child who is born on the second of the month. She is in the 2-4-8 concord. Her parents not knowing of this, christen her Ethel. Let us analyze the word Ethel. Applying the above formula we have e-t-h-e-l equalling 5-7-8-5-3. The sum of these numbers is 28. Applying the rule given in paragraph nine we have 2 plus 8=10; 1+0=1. Right away we find that the birth number is inharmonious. It belongs to the 1-5-7-concord, not to the 2-4-8 and that the only good number in her name is the 8 in the middle, which is the Keystone. This child is apt to be nervous, weakly, and not a good mother.

But suppose her name is Kitty. K-i-t-t-y, applying our rule, equals 2-9-2-2-7. The sum of these numbers is 22. 2+2=4; we have therefore, shown her birth number as a 4, one of the keystones of our concord, the 2-4-8. Analyzes the figures separately. Her first figure is 2. The third and fourth are each 2. The sum of her second and fifth figures is 16. Reduced to the multiple of 2-4 and 8 and so the whole name vibrates in harmony and the child must grow up happy, lucky, healthy and wise.

In this list of names it will be noticed that many are modifications of those commonly used, the chief difference being in the spelling. The changing of one letter in a name will often make it perfect harmony.

Here is the rule with the names of all successful men and with those of the criminals and failures. Your results will be astonishing.

HOW I LEAD THE SIMPLE LIFE.

It Took a French Actress to Give Pastor Wagner's Theory an Ideal Test---as She Tells Here.

"The Mirror Smiled Back Gayly."

Paris, Aug. 6.

YOU Americans are always talking about "the simple life."

You make it a sort of religion—in talk; but from all the Americans I have ever seen I glean that you never apply it, but just merely talk about it in your enthusiastic way, for you are farthest from the simple life of any people in the world.

You come over here and teach us all lessons of extravagance and luxury that nearly take our breath away.

But I got interested in the simple life theory, and I thought about it and read about it—for I had read that good minister's book, "The Simple Life," that you Americans went mad over, and I even went to Mr. Wagner's church one day in the Bastille and listened to him with deep interest, and then I decided to put it into practice.

I found at last, exactly what I wanted at Maraise, only in hour's ride from Paris. It was a little old cottage that had been lived in for generations, but very neat and clean. I paid the old peasant woman a round sum to give it up to me for a fortnight, and she went to live with her married daughter across the fields.

I did not tell a soul what I was going to do, not even my maid for I thought if I did, all my friends would be tearing out to see me in automobiles and make my life miserable, for I should have been ridiculed to death.

I sent out a little trunk of simp e clothes, just the sort of things that my artiste sense told me would be fitting for the humble cottage, and then I went out the next day myself, quite alone, telling my maid I would be back in two weeks

By Mlle. Louise Renouardi.

I never even left an address for the forwarding of mail, I didn't want to have a single connection with the outside world, and I—ee that letters would be as bad as people.

And, oh! wasn't I happy? From the very beginning of my adventure I was ecstatic and it kept up straight through to the end.

When I got to the cottage the little old woman was there. She had built a fire on the hearth and set a simple meal for me of black bread and cheese and a big jug of home-made beer, and I sat down and ate it ravenously.

Then she went away, and I got off my hobble-kneed velvet gown and put on my coarse linen skirt, and in my shemise top I set to work. I swept up the floor with the old brush broom and sang as I never sang before.

It was all so picturesque and charming, and like something in a book. I enjoyed being alone, too. One does need to be alone once in a while, doesn't one, just to get acquainted with one's self.

I felt as if I had never known myself before, and I was quite surprised to find myself so delightful a person.

Then I started in to cook my midday meal and such fun as it was! I made a real, old-fashioned stew in a queer old earthen pot, cooking it over the open fire.

I sang and trilled as I pared the potatoes, and laughed right out when I chopped up the meat.

It was the most delicious meal I ever ate.

In the afternoon I laid down and had a nap, and then I got up and ate a little supper, and sang and trilled some more.

That evening I sat down before the fire and perched my feet on an old flatiron and held out my hands to the blaze. It was all just like a dream, and I was immensely happy.

And then I went to bed. Such a crude, common little old wooden bed all at one side of the room, but I never enjoyed a bed more. I was tired and happy, and wholesomely fed, and I went to sleep just like a baby and slept all night long—the last thing I remember being the hoot of an owl in a nearby tree, a sound that delighted me, though it would have terrified some people.

In the morning I woke up bright and early, feeling fresher and finer than I ever did in my life. I crawled up and looked in the little mirror above the bed to see if I looked as happy as I felt, and I did. In fact, it was a very radiant face that looked back at me and I said:

And the mirror smiled back gayly.

And so it went on for the two weeks. I worked and ate and slept and sang and grew younger, and I wrote to my friends the most ecstatic letters, just pitying them and telling them all about my experience in detail, and I sat them all wild with curiosity and worry.

And when I got back to town, looking like a wild rose, with more beauty than all the Paris specialists could ever produce, they were wilder than ever.

And then they all trooped out to the little cottage and marvelled at my cou age, and a few tried the scheme themselves, but they fled at the end of the first day, and not one of them enjoyed it.

So, you see, one has to have an especial genius for leading the simple life successfully.

HOW TO MANAGE A WOMAN.

She's Such a Paradox That Your Only Success Lies in Fooling Her All the Time.

By Countess Gioletti.

I HAVE [illegible] ability to [illegible] man who confesses his [illegible] of a woman—he [illegible] wife or sweetheart will.

He confesses to lack of [illegible] a woman's perception of these [illegible] and her contempt for them is de[illegible]

I have long studied women; pe[illegible] tersely because their moods, the[illegible] varied. The very study tantalizes, the chaos of confused impressions stimulating fact—hyperbole is essential to the making women to the will.

Woman likes to be regarded as a paradox [illegible] vanity. Every man should pretend to hold that to her wish.

But if she thought for a moment that she were [illegible] of being under-stood her grief would be pitiable; that her nature.

Come, let's play Petruchio as he would set to-day. You are married to a woman who lacks thoughtfulness; in her eyes you are a trifle dull, or slow at any rate. Always, she is aiming at pleasure, not necessarily in your company. You return home from the city—tired, weary, jealous, [illegible] she is dressing for the theatre—the other [illegible] whose honor is as unimpeachable as your own, has [illegible] an invitation. She laughs at your dull face and [illegible] at you will be happy with your cigar. Now, [illegible] your artifice? Go to your study, leave the door [illegible] so that she can hear; take the telephone receiver [illegible] up a mythical friend. Then—

"Is that you, Jim" (name a friend unknown to her). "Yes . . . I got your wire, old fellow, but am afraid I can't do it to-night. Good dinner? I don't doubt it, but I'd rather not to-night. . . . Why? . . . oh, I get very little time with the wife, and I shouldn't care to leave her alone to-night. . . . Is she? . . . you mean the dark, handsome little widow . . . oh, well, two's company, you know, and you're single . . . eh? . . . You won't say that when you're married to a good wife, you will value her company; I do. . . . Good-bye."

"The New Fall Wraps"

"Polly" Chase's Kimono Cloak, Lady Guinness' Dresses. Latest "Lucile" Creations, Described By Lady Duff-Gordon.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, the foremost fashion creator in the world, writes each week the fashion page for this newspaper. This week she describes some fall wraps and some wonderful dresses she has designed for "Polly" Chase, the famous "Pink Pajama Girl" and English Theatrical Success.

"Lucile" Dress for Lady Evelyn Guinness, White Spot Net, Panel Insertions

By Lady Duff-Gordon

(LUCILE.)

DURING the past week I have been dressing all the younger and a good many of the older members of the American aristocracy who are to receive the acquaintance of the London favorite, Our Miss Gibbs—I mean the person of Pauline Chase—in the most correct and particularly pretty costume, who is strapped and pretty tuppence, who is equally popular on both sides of the Atlantic. And here I shall describe any of the new Fall wraps I am going to tell about these models.

"Polly" Chase is of an entirely different type from Pat, dark-haired Gertie Millar who is elated and is still playing the part over here and whom I have also dressed during all the run of the piece. And as Pauline Chase's frocks are plain and in every detail different, as the first being a demure little affair of [illegible] with a handkerchief collar of [illegible], hand-stitched in fall in deep points over the [illegible] sides while a [illegible] of the same fabric [illegible] a deep round at the back and edged with ruffings of lace. Many little loops and buttons all fashioned in the same [illegible] serve as fastening and trimming for the front of the dress, and, of course, stockings and shoes are both of softest gray.

Then, how do you like the headdress?—that broad turban-like band of blue with its encircling ribbon of silver, which is set low down on the head above a cap-like frill of filmy lace through which the pale gold of the hair shows softly. An upstanding and graceful ostrich feather adorns and gracefully one side; an addition, this, which, I expect, will be more admired when seen on the stage than if met—and [illegible] behind!—in the stalls. But, anyway, if you wish to imitate, and, moreover, to be magnanimous, you can discard the feather and still be very [illegible] with the unadorned and unaffected turban, the under frill of lace belong only to be recommended to the youthful wearer.

So much for that, and now to tell you of the cloak, whose kimono-like shoulder curves merge, eventually you see into fitting sleeves. While, once again—as in the case of Elizabeth Firth's gown, to which you are introduced last week—I have arranged a [illegible] for the neck, ing this time the [illegible] white awaiting which borders all the cloak and two which [illegible] In keeping with its somewhat [illegible] nature, for it is practically transparent, though four veilings of [illegible] blue chiffon are used beneath the white net and, eventually, held in by the band of white swansdown, while [illegible] entwined cords and pendant tassels of blue silk and silver fasten it together in front, and, finally, in the curves at either side some big and beautiful roses unfold their petals of white tulle over their hearts of shining silver tissue, the leaves being embroidered in pale silk and shaded and lightly varied with silver.

The other dress which I have made for [illegible]—for handsome Miss Mollie [illegible]—will, I hope, serve to show, in turn, how becoming the present fashions can be, even to the rather full-figured woman, if they are carefully adapted and arranged. An evening dress of shot-silky and mauve satin, and soft folds of chiffon, shading from pale coral to real rose pink, are used to drape the corsage and form the tunic. This color nicely outline the waist line, as this is [illegible] distinctly unbecoming to the full figure. It just curves below the bust and takes a downward line in front, where it is finished off over the central and plain panel of satin with a very handsome and deeply fringed ornament, other and smaller motifs fringed with crystals [illegible] the tunic draperies together low down at each side.

An afternoon gown designed for the same wearer is, primarily, of ivory white satin charmeuse and chiffon. This perfectly plain wardrobe, cut in a deep round on the neck, and there piped with satin, while all down the front, at either side, of central pipings of satin, are set tiny satin buttons and [illegible] These details are fully revealed by the opening in front of lace, which a veilinsall—but really hiding nothing—is a [illegible] of emerald green chiffon, which [illegible] and then parts again below the waist and [illegible] the underdress more fully, to be fastened together again at the knees. This style is one which the woman who is not in her first youth or slenderness will, I promise, find extremely becoming, more especially as the skirt is, of course, of the lengthy and graceful variety, just touching the ground in front, and, at the back, forming a very [illegible] train.

Still another and slighter type of figure is provided with an evening gown of cinnamon satin charmeuse, the skirt draperies being upheld by bands of trimming formed of ladder-like straps of the satin. The kimono corsage is veiled with chiffon, and introduces some touches of turquoise blue and broideries of silver and black, a few tiny bouquets of pale blue forget-me-nots tied up with silver baby ribbon being an addition to the [illegible] which I would not have you overlook.

And now the stage fashions having been well represented I will make you acquainted with the details of a dress I have just devised for a society beauty, Lady Evelyn Guinness who, in feature, coloring and figure, is very much like lovely Lily Elsie, and who indeed often has duplicates of her dresses. This latest addition to her wardrobe is an "airy fairy" creation of white spot net, whose panel insertions of lace are all outlined with pipings of palest pink, while of the same pink, too, are the curving fernlike fronds which adorn the front of the skirt and are repeated in miniature on the corsage [illegible] Some tiny blue satin buttons are set close together in a double row in the centre of the [illegible], and there are circlets of flowers, too, worked in folded silk of pale blue and pink and mauve in a delicate green foliage, and true lovers' knot bows of blue to tie them together. Of still paler blue, too, are the narrow ribbons, which encircle the bodice and skirt of the under robe of palest petal pink mirror, whose insertions of lace, being of old-ivory mellowness of tone, are distinctly contrasted with the outer and pure white laces of the dress. Then over this is worn an absolutely transparent coat of powder blue mirror, with just some soft folds of flesh pink about the neck while the [illegible] during approach [illegible] and [illegible] knot bows of [illegible] together these [illegible] one seen in an old turquoise. Finally, for headgear there is a quaint cap of lace, tied closely round with a broad scarf band of turquoise blue satin and caught in at either [illegible] and tiny wreaths of pink flowers, two long strings of the [illegible] blue being then left free to fall over one shoulders, where they give the first definite note of color to the elusive shadings of the dress.

What a special joy it is, to be sure, to manipulate lovely tints and textures for the benefit of lovely women—though, indeed, I want to make every one beautiful to look upon this coming season! I am hard at work now on schemes for so doing, and shall have much to tell you soon concerning the details of [illegible] dresses, high and can rather [illegible] of the general trend of [illegible] of which I have [illegible] designs.

Almost [illegible] with at the [illegible] Princess [illegible] be suggested [illegible] day-dress, and I am [illegible] saturday night [illegible] term the [illegible] one whose material is [illegible] or cloth, and whose [illegible] when the coat is worn, to one of [illegible] finished simply, and as such [illegible] suited to every [illegible] remove the [illegible] you show a [illegible] smart enough for a luncheon party, [illegible] lower part of the skirt being of the aforementioned cloth or serge, while above there is [illegible] over the figure a [illegible] of satin charmeuse or mirror, the [illegible] contrast of color, in [illegible] and satin pipings [illegible] touches of little [illegible] and turn-down collar of embroidered [illegible] I count a costume [illegible] most serviceable [illegible] possession, for every [illegible] preferable to the coat and skirt and separate shirt blouse [illegible] attire; and I hope I shall bring you to agree with me, though I know the American [illegible] to this particular trio of garments.

RATS! HERE'S A WOMAN NOT AFRAID OF THEM!

One of Miss Abbie E. C. Lathrop's Rat and Mice Houses Where She Raises Thousands of These Rodents Every Year.

JUST why the sight of a mouse is terrifying to womankind has never been explained satisfactorily, but it is an established fact that ninety-nine in a hundred women have an inborn fear of the harmless little rodent.

Let the tiniest mouse appear suddenly on the scene and women who in really dangerous situations will display remarkable fortitude are in a fiendish state of mind bordering on panic.

Ordinarily sedate or prim maidens, or self-contained matrons, lose complete control of their reasoning faculties, and, gathering skirts about them, leap, shrieking, upon chairs, tables or whatever elevation is nearest, meanwhile quickstepping for safety in very good twelfths.

Miss Lathrop is free to admit that her business is unusual and that it would not appeal to many of her sex. She likes it, though, and believes that if women would only stifle their inherent abhorrence of the mouse, they would be charmed by the lovable qualities brought out by cultivation.

Miss Lathrop has theorized upon what she terms the heritage of fear women have for rats and mice, and while she has found nothing in the scriptural writings to substantiate her theory, she figures that when the world was young, Mother Eve, in her wanderings through the garden of Eden, must have had her first sight of the original progenitor of the rat family at an unpropitious moment, and conceived an unfair prejudice that has come down through the generations.

Woman, being naturally instinctive in her emotions, has intensified this first impression of Eve, the result being that fear of the rat is the great bete noir of her descendants.

Whether or not Miss Lathrop's theory is tenable is not material, the fact remains that her exemption from repugnance for rodents has proved beneficial to her. From childhood she has had a liking for rats and mice. Long before the idea of raising them on a large scale came to her Miss Lathrop had them for pets.

Her first ones were two mice that had been trapped in the village store at Granby. On her way to school one morning Miss Lathrop dropped into the store and the keeper was about to kill the mice. The little girl remonstrated and finally won her point, on condition that she take the mice. She took them home, and while her parents did not entirely approve her charges she was allowed to keep them.

For the last nine years Miss Lathrop has been raising the mice for commercial purposes. She averages sales of about eight thousand each year, the greater part of these going to medical laboratories for research work.

Her original plan was not to raise the rats and mice for scientific slaughter, but found herself facing the alternative of providing a living for herself and good mother, the modest competence left to her father having been exhausted, and the farm, which was all that remained, was insufficient to support them. Many plans for earning money were turned over in her mind, all proving bootless, and she was almost discouraged at the hopeless prospect, until one day she saw some waiting mice in a store window of a nearby city.

As she watched the mice performing their endearing taunting, her own fondness for the little creatures prompted the notion of raising mice for pets. She had forgotten that mice do not enjoy universal popularity. It soon became apparent that there was not an unlimited market for that kind of pets, and there was another discouraging period, until she learned that there were actual opportunities in rat-raising for scientific purposes. So it turned out that instead of furnishing pets, she began sending away shipments of rats and mice to laboratories to be inoculated with diseases for observation and for vivisection.

It was a long time before she became reconciled to sending the creatures away to the untoward fate she knew awaited them, but with a relentless wolf hammering away at the door she overcame her scruples and accepted the theory of self-preservation being the paramount duty.

Miss Lathrop reconciles her repugnance to sending away her pets—for so she considers them, despite the mercenary motive behind her venture—by the thought that they have a happy life before their treacherous come. Her mouse farm is located in one of the most delightful spots in New England, in the valley south of historic Mount Holyoke range. Miss Lathrop has three acres of land, and all of it is devoted to the interests of her rats and mice and a few hundreds of guinea pigs and rabbits and ferrets.

Rats and mice are used extensively in colleges because of their comparative cheapness. Miss Lathrop sells them for from $15 to $25 a hundred. The mice are sold in larger numbers, as they are less expensive, ranging from $15 to $20, while rats bring 25 cents each. Not all she raises are disposed of so cheaply, however, for Miss Lathrop is a dabbler in experimental breeding, and she has succeeded in bringing out some rare species, for which she has been paid as high as $2 apiece.

While rats and mice are the chief output of Miss Lathrop's farm, she averages sales to laboratories of about 200 guinea pigs a month, the blood of these animals being used in the manufacture of antitoxin.

Guinea pigs are much more expensive to raise, however, and while she gets more for them, the profits are not as great as from the rats and mice. Guinea pigs are big eaters. The average number on hand is about four hundred, and a month a half ton of hay will be consumed by them during the period it is necessary to keep them housed. They also get away with seven tons of vegetables during the cold months, beside carrots and cabbages being the principal provender in that line.

During the Summer the pigs will live on fresh grass, so that the upkeep during these months is not so costly. It is an interesting fact that guinea pigs in an inclosure will eat as a rule in fast four times as much as they in proportion to respective sizes. They make an excellent experimental subject, as they are easily inoculated with most of the diseased mankind is heir to. Though Miss Lathrop is extremely fond of all her charges, the rats and mice have strongest hold upon her. When she was visited at her farm she was found in one of the rat houses, the place was lined with cages, in which thousands of the rodents, from newly-born size to fully developed, swarmed. Miss Lathrop was standing in front of one of the cages, with a beaming face, and in her two hands were five wee, wriggling bits of something. Miss Lathrop said they were mice, just an hour old, and I took her word for it. They had no fur and might have been almost anything.

"Aren't they pretty?" asked Miss Lathrop with a triumphant look. "They are pure Agouti mice, and if they live I expect they will be among the rarest I have."

Her critical inspection finished, Miss Lathrop very carefully replaced her treasures in the nest with the parents.

The visitor to Miss Lathrop's farm will be amazed at the variety of colors of the rats and mice. There are ten distinct colors and twenty combinations of colors to be seen. White is quite common, and black rats are not unusual, but to be startling to the ordinary person who has given the matter no special thought, but when it comes to cream colored rats, orange rats and red rats, you begin to open your eyes. In addition to these Miss Lathrop has plum silver, silver, blue and Agouti. The latter are a rich dark brown fur, yellow-tipped, making a golden-brown effect.

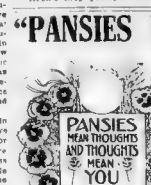
"PANSIES MEAN THOUGHTS, AND THOUGHTS MEAN YOU."

Words by Fleta Jan Brown. Music by Herbert Spencer.



At this season of the year what could be more appropriate than a song dealing with flowers. Here is one as sweet as the very flower embodied in its title, and one of those pretty little ballads that is always well received anywhere. The beautiful waltz melody is an delightful as a new day in Spring, and it once heard cannot easily be forgotten.

MURRAY'S LOTION IS

Invaluable for Cuts and Bruises

The most potent healing preparation known to medical science. Instantly relieves the pain by subduing the inflammation and cures the injury by its remarkable astringent and antiseptic qualities. Applied to cuts and bruises, it prevents swelling, and if promptly used forestalls soreness and discoloration.

For Burns and Scalds, Strains, Sprains, Wrenches, Contusions and all accidents or injuries affecting the Muscles, Sinews and Tendons of Man, Woman or Child, it has no equal for prompt and positive results.

Athletes, hunters, horseback riders and all men and women who take a pride in vigorous, well-rounded muscles may promote perfect flexibility and prevent muscle tire in any form by the use of this invaluable remedy.

ITS HOT WEATHER WE'RE HAVING

RESOLVED

THAT WE DONT KNOW HOW THANKFUL WE SHOULD BE THAT WE ARE NOT DEAF. IT IS A TERRIBLE THING TO BE DEPRIVED OF HEARING WHEN THE WORLD IS SO FULL OF BEAUTIFUL SOUNDS. THE SWEET VOICES OF CHILDREN, THE SONGS OF BIRDS, THE MELODIOUS STRAINS OF SWEET MUSIC &c. BUT IT MUST BE AWFUL TO HAVE GOOD EARS AND NOT BE ABLE TO HEAR, JUST BECAUSE OUR MINDS ARE SO FULL OF HATE AND WORRY AND IMAGINARY TROUBLE, THAT SOUNDS GO UNHEEDED. IT IS THE SOUL THAT HEARS AND SEES. THE SAME EARS AND EYES THAT COULD HEAR & SEE ARE USELESS WHEN THE SOUL HAS FLED. THE SOUL SEES THINGS BY MEANS OF EYES AND BY MEANS OF FAITH DONT BE ONE OF THOSE ABOUT WHOM IT WAS SAID "HAVING EYES YE SEE NOT" LOOK & LISTEN AND THINK "THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN IS WITHIN YOU — IN YOUR MIND
